FROM THE PRESIDENT'S DESK

The nation certainly must realize by now that the construction industry, together with the building tradesmen who "make it tick," are vital and basic to the national economy. There was a time when "basic industries" were coal, iron, oil, steel and railroads. Now economists realize that these industries are only suppliers and service organizations for the most-basic industry of all: building and construction.

When practically all that America had to build were homes, stores and barns, the construction industry was truly only a small part of the economic picture. Beginning in the 1920s and continuing to the present time, vast and complex systems of highways have been built by construction workers to provide arteries for the ever-increasing productivity of this world's largest industrial complex. Add to this the huge factories, vast warehouses and the retail and service establishments to cater to the needs of the millions of workers who man the productive and distributive establishments. Then add the housing needs of a virtually exploding population. Now one begins to understand why the construction industry has become so important in the nation's economy.

The construction industry's work force has not caused the present inflation. Rather we are victims of the economic policies which have brought it about. The building tradesman, in his quest for higher wages, is acting defensively; trying not to lose ground as he watches the buying power of the dollars in his pay envelope shrink. The on-site labor cost of housing has dropped from 33 percent of the purchase price in 1949 to 18 percent in 1968. But the costs of land and of financing have risen from 16 percent to 31 percent in the same period.

Relative to the incomes of other skilled workers outside of construction, building tradesmen's wages are not unduely high. Because of the nature of their employment, fringe benefits are not on a comparable level with those in manufacturing. Their working conditions are vastly inferior due to the exterior nature of much of their work. Yet President Nixon, with the option of zeroing in on any number of trades in his efforts to turn public wrath away from business and banking profits, continues to favor the building trades with "special attention."

This administration continues to blame wages for the inflation afflicting us all (despite the vast army of unemployed.) Record high profits receive scant attention from the White House advisor corps. Zooming costs of materials, of financing and of land are presumably unmentioned when the high cost of construction is discussed in White House brainstorming sessions. Also presumably unmentioned are such details as President Nixon's salary being boosted 100 percent and Congressmen's salaries being hiked 41 percent!

It seems incredible that the Nixon Administration should persist in its anti-labor posture, favoring big business, big profits and big banking. Even a high school economics student cannot fail to realize that the welfare of the nation is tied to the welfare of workers . . . not to the welfare of corporations, profiteers and bankers!

By clipping and saving the front cover this month, members will have a calendar to keep track of the new year. The word "calendar" is derived from the Latin "kalendae" (calends), the day on which accounts were due for settlement in ancient Rome. The days of the week originated in early Saxon times. The Saxons (ancient Germans) named the days after seven of their objects of veneration and gods. Sun's Day (Sunday), Moon's Day (Monday), Tiw's Day (Tuesday), Woden's Day (Wednesday), Thor's Day (Thursday), Frigg's Day (Friday) and Seterne's Day (Saturday.) A minor change in our observance of the days takes place this year which will give three-day holidays for many on Washington's Birthday, Memorial Day, Columbus Day, Veterans' Day and, of course, Labor Day as usual.

BY THE GENERAL SECRETARY TREASURER

We want to wish every member and his family the best of everything in 1971. But we must, at the same time, remind everyone that "God helps those who help themselves." This is especially true during political campaigns. We are in one now! Technically speaking, the political campaign for the election of a President will begin in the summer of 1972. Actually, the political contest between liberalism and reaction is getting underway right now. The year of 1971 will be a "proving ground" for candidates, their political machinery and the ability of the people to organize themselves to vote with political effectiveness.

President Nixon was elected largely because of a series of political errors by the Democratic party. President Johnson waited too long before taking himself out of the contest. Hubert Humphrey then did not have enough time for a fully effective campaign. Those segments of the Democratic party represented by supporters of Senators McCarthy and McGovern "sat it out" when their candidates were denied the nomination. The third-party candidacy of George Wallace siphoned off a considerable number of Democratic votes. The result was that Nixon was elected by 43.4 percent of the votes cast . . . lowest since Woodrow Wilson was elected in 1912. Nixon actually received three million fewer votes than he did in his two-way contest with John F. Kennedy eight years earlier!

Nixon doubtless realizes the nation is not exactly jubilant with his stewardship. Already he is behaving more like a candidate than a president. One of the most unbelievable aspects of his program are his efforts to "woo" organized labor. He has repeatedly soft-soaped the hard-hats. Several times he has attempted to gain favor with organized labor's top echelons at White House dinners and entertainments. But the hard fact remains that the Nixon Administration has repeatedly demonstrated it is, at worst, anti-labor and, at best, unconcerned with labor, consumers, small business, construction trades or any groups at all below the rank of Big Business and Big Banking.

The time to launch the campaign is now . . . as 1971 starts. At this point in political history, no one knows who the candidates will be. Perhaps President Nixon will recognize that he cannot be re-elected. One-term Presidents have taken themselves off the ticket before, rather than endure the shame of defeat. Perhaps the Republican who might succeed him will be worthy of support; no one knows. This is not a bid for support for a Democratic candidate who is not yet visible on the political horizon. This is a statement of fact that President Nixon and his administration have grossly and obviously misused the power they possess in some instances, and failed to use the power they possess in others, to the general detriment of the welfare of the nation.

Unusual Coffered Ceiling by L. U. 9 Members

Walter Reed Hospital Project Employs Novel Techniques of On-Site Fabrication

Members of Local Union 9, Washington, D.C., were called upon to install an unusual prefabricated-on-the-job ceiling in the main lobby of a new pathology building at Walter Reed Army Hospital in the Nation's Capital.

Six-inch hot rolled channel iron was first welded directly to the steel structural members of the building, after which 3-inch channel was welded to the 6-inch material. Strap iron hangers were then attached to carry beams which ultimately supported the ceiling coffers.

The coffers were poured on the job in a mold. The finished coffers were eight feet square. They were made with a framework prepared on a jig by lathers on the job. The framework was lowered over the mold, then plaster, reinforced with burlap and excelsior, was poured on the frame. After it had hardened, lathers moved the coffers into position, then hoisted them into place. The coffers were corner-beaded to the beams, which carry air conditioning ducts, electric cables and other service components.

Lathers are shown raising coffer, poured by plasterers, from its mold. This was the first step in "manufacturing and assembling" coffered ceiling.

Although It's No Longer Exactly News, Rising Costs Still Give Workers the Blues!

The sharpest rise in living costs since April cut deeper into take-home pay of workers during October as the Consumer Price Index jumped six-tenths of 1 percent.

To AFL-CIO Pres. George Meany, the jump in October prices was "sad but not unexpected news."

"It proves what we've been saying for months—the Administration's game plan is an abysmal failure and the workers who still have jobs, the consumers and the jobless are paying a high price for that failure," he stressed.

Meany said that "it is high time the Administration stopped trying to kid the American public into thinking bad news is good news and get on with the job of getting America's economic house in order."

After seasonal adjustments, the October increase was five-tenths of 1 percent, the same as in September.

Despite repeated claims by the Nixon Administration that inflation is being controlled, prices over the past three months rose at an annual rate of 5.3 percent, the Labor Department reported. Since October 1969, the CPI has advanced 5.9 percent.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics also noted that real spendable earnings—take-home pay expressed in 1957-59 dollars to reflect the consumer price increases—dropped 64 cents a week to $77.04 for a worker with three dependents. This was $1.59 less than the average weekly take-home pay in October 1969.

The October increase in living costs pushed the price index to 137.4. This means a worker paid $13.74 in October for goods and services that cost him $10 in 1957-59.

Higher prices for consumer services, automobiles, clothing and gasoline accounted for most of the increase, the BLS reported.

Although food prices over the month rose about one-tenth of 1 percent, seasonally adjusted, the prices of other commodities increased about twice as much as they normally do in October.

Over the year, however, food prices

Unemployment in the construction industry has far outstripped unemployment generally, according to Bureau of Labor Statistics. Construction joblessness in November stood at 9.1 percent.

were 4.6 percent—and turkeys, as Thanksgiving Day approached, were 9 percent above the 1969 level, the BLS pointed out.

Hit hardest by the decline in real spendable earnings were workers in the manufacturing sector. Here, the weekly take-home pay for a worker with three dependents averaged $84.43 in 1957-59 dollars, down $1.40 from September and $3.20 below the level of October 1969.

Overall, the purchasing power of workers in October averaged 2 percent below the year-ago month.

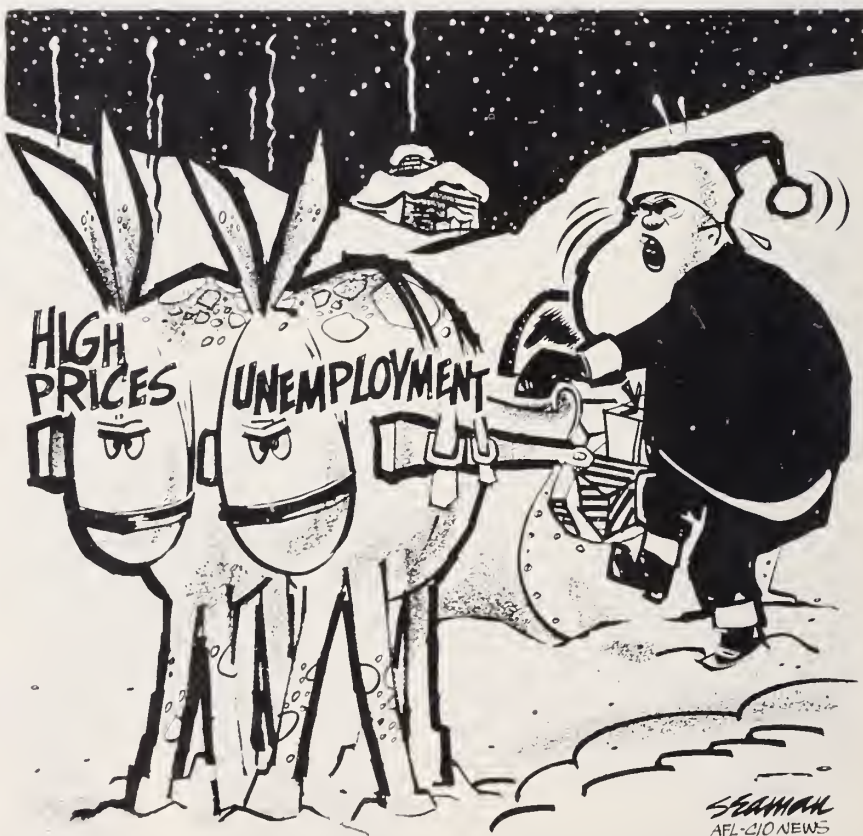

Pact Aims to Give Jobs To Bay Area Minorities

A unique agreement was recently signed by representatives of organized labor, building contractors and community leaders in the San Francisco area. The pact will attempt to give a greater share of construction employment to workers from minority groups.

The area affected is the Bay-view-Hunters Point Model Cities Project. The pact seeks to recruit workers from that area; not only minority members, but all residents of the area. Workmen with limited experience would receive credit toward attaining apprentice status and, eventually, journeyman classification.

One of the principal labor representatives taking part in the landmark agreement was International Third Vice President Kenneth M. Edwards, President of the San Francisco Building Trades Council.

'Tough Sledding This Year!'

Dinner Honors Mel Roots On New OP&CMIA Position

A testimonial banquet honored Melvin H. Roots, recently elected as Executive Vice President of the Operative Plasterers and Cement Masons International Association. The dinner, in San Francisco, was attended by hundreds of his friends and associates, including President Robert Georgine.

When Joseph T. Power was elected to the OP&CMIA presidency on the retirement of Edward J. Leonard, Executive Vice President Joseph T. Power succeeded him. Former Vice President and Executive Board Member Roots succeeded Power in the vacated executive position. He has moved from his native San Francisco to Washington, D. C., headquarters of the International.

A special resolution of the California State Assembly which took note of Roots' distinguished career in the state was presented him by Toastmaster James Lee, President of the California Building Trades Council. The Secretary of the California State Federation of Labor, former Ambassador to New Zealand John Henning, also paid tribute to Roots and his achievements.

Meany, Georgine Urge: Write Letters to Hanoi

President Robert Georgine has joined with President George Meany of the AFL-CIO in urging all members and their families to write to Hanoi, protesting the treatment of U.S. servicemen held in North Vietnamese prisoner of war camps.

In a letter to all AFL-CIO affiliates, Meany said:

"The AFL-CIO supports the campaign of the American Red Cross for mail urging the North Vietnamese, in the name of humanity, to provide the names of their prisoners, to guarantee them adequate diet and medical care and to permit the exchange of mail between prisoners and their families.

"I urge every member of the AFL-CIO to write to Hanoi.

"An end to the misery of the prisoners of war and relief for their long-suffering families would help serve as a sincere indication of the North Vietnamese desire for peace in Indochina and lay the groundwork for their acceptance of the American proposal at the Paris talks to free all prisoners of war."

"Many of the prisoners held by Hanoi are doubtless closely connected with organized labor," said President Georgine. "It is vital that the working people of the U.S. tell the North Vietnamese that the laboring class of America supports our fighting men and the move to bring the pressure of world opinion on their behalf."

Letters to Hanoi, which require 25 cents postage per half ounce, should be addressed to the President of the Democratic Republic of Viet Nam, Hanoi, North Viet Nam.

5.8% Jobless Rate Highest In 7.5 Years

A bigger-than-usual rise in unemployment in November and a drop in non-farm jobs pushed the nation's jobless rate up to 5.8 percent, the highest level in seven and a half years.

The Labor Department reported that, after seasonal adjustments, 4.8 million workers were out of jobs and looking for work.

Since November, 1969, when the jobless rate was 3.5 percent of the workforce, unemployment has risen 1.9 million. This includes 905,000 adult men, 565,000 adult women and 430,000 teenagers.

Snowfall This Year May Have Been Newsworthy But Falls of Yesteryear Really Set Records!

Snow has already made headlines in newspapers across the U.S. and Canada. But while this year's snows have sometimes been newsworthy, they have not even approached some of the records established in past years.

The largest snowfall in 24 hours ever reported was the 76 inches which fell at Silver Lake, Colorado, on April 14 and 15, 1921.

The record for a single snowstorm (from start of fall to stopping) was 175.4 inches recorded at Thompson Pass on December 26-31, 1955.

The most snowfall ever recorded for a twelve month period was the 1,000.3 inches recorded at the Paradise Ranger Station, Mount Rainier, Washington, in the winter of 1955-56. That is a total of more than 83 feet of snow.

'Federal Government Inconsistent' Avers Haggerty in Comment on Philadelphia Plan

The inconsistency of the federal government in attempting to impose the "Philadelphia Plan" on the construction industry while failing to adopt such a plan for proportional hiring of minorities for its own employees has been underscored by C. J. Haggerty, President of the AFL-CIO Building and Construction Trades Department and First Vice President of the LIU.

In a letter to the editor of the New York Times, President Haggerty said:

"The carefully detailed article on the employment of blacks by the Federal Government in your issue of November 15 pointed out that there is nothing comparable in the Federal service "to the minority hiring percentage goals incorporated in builders' contracts on Federal construction projects." It also stated that "few critics of Federal hiring and promotion practices would have the government establish formal racial quotas."

"There is no mention in the article of the suit filed September 12, 1969, in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia by Julius Hobson, 66 other individual plaintiffs and the Washington Urban League against the Chairman of the Civil Service Commission, the two other members of the Commission, each and every Cabinet Officer and the Public Printer of the United States.

"The principal allegation in the complaint is that the federal government is engaged in a pattern of discrimination, based upon statistics, showing that the black percentage of the United States population is about 14%, whereas the ratio of blacks in the higher grades of the Federal service such as Grade 13 and above is only 1.5%.

The prayer for relief is a request for injunction directing the defendants to adopt necessary procedures designed to achieve "equitable representation" in every unit of the federal departments or agencies containing 50 or more persons in regard to composition by race, sex and national origin thereof at the end of one year, provided that the departments or agencies will be allowed to vary from this standard in those areas in which it can be demonstrated that "the population percentage of plaintiff classes is lower than the national average.

"There is an obvious question as to whether the Government which imposed the Philadelphia Plan calling for fixed racial quotas in the building and construction industry is inconsistent when it fails to adopt such a plan for its own employees. It would, therefore, be most interesting to know how the government can answer the complaint in the Hobson case without destroying the foundation of its effort to apply racial quotas to the building and construction industry.

"The inquirer's curiosity cannot be satisfied because the federal government has not as yet filed an answer to the complaint in this case, which was filed September 12, 1969. Plaintiffs and defendants have mutually agreed upon eight extensions of time. The most recent extension as of the date of writing this letter is to December 4, 1970—more than a year after the normal time for answering."

(Since the above was written, an incredible ninth extension . . . to February 2 . . . has been allowed the defendants)

(The New York Times, which has its motto "All the News That's Fit to Print," evidently did not regard highly such a reasoned and rational comment on a vital issue of the day by a highly-placed official in organized labor. As of this writing, The Times has not seen fit to publish the letter.)

A Reminder

This national administration, which has berated construction unions for seeking wage raises for their members still at work when 9.1 percent are unemployed, is the same administration which raised the salary of the President 100 percent (doubling it) and raised the salaries of Congressmen 41 percent! The President and the Congress are enjoying full employment.

Federal Contributions to Social Security Urged

Federal contributions could keep social security benefits more in line with today's increased living costs—with no additional tax burden to the 80 million Americans covered by the system—the AFL-CIO has said on network radio.

Prospects for general revenue financing for social security are "not good this year," said AFL-CIO Social Security Director Bert Seidman, but they could improve in the next Congress. He noted that both the House and the Senate did give serious consideration to the new financing feature in the current session. Seidman appeared on the AFL-CIO-produced public affairs radio interview, Labor News Conference, broadcast Tuesdays on the Mutual Broadcasting System.

Inflation, with a steep rise of living costs in the past two years, has left many dependent on social security unable to meet minimum needs, he said.

He called for an immediate 10 percent increase in benefits, followed by another 10 percent improvement next year. Seidman noted that the Senate now is considering a 10 percent increase despite a warning from the Administration that "any increase larger than [the 5 percent increase] passed by the House . . . would be courting a presidential veto."

He declined to speculate "at what level [of improvement] the President will veto a bill," but stressed that "a very substantial increase" is desperately needed by the "old and disabled, orphans and widows who depend on social security."

Seidman also urged retention of the "100 percent widow's benefit" provision contained in both the House and Senate versions of the social security bill, setting a widow's benefits at the level of her deceased husband's entitlement, whether he died before or after retirement age.

"This is very important, because the degree of poverty among widows is very high," he stressed, stating they are "probably the poorest group in America."

Reporters questioning Seidman were Theodor Schuchat of the North American Newspaper Alliance and Murray Seeger of the Los Angeles Times.

Journeyman Acquire Valuable Skills-Upgrading In Course Established by Philadelphia Local

An upgrading program to improve job skills of lathers has been successfully established by Local 492, Philadelphia, according to Thomas H. Miller, President and Business Agent.

Miller said that he would suggest, to any other local officers contemplating the establishment of such a program, that they start action on the state level of the Manpower Development and Training Act, which provides funding.

Local 492 of Philadelphia became aware of the program from the address of Hugh Murphy at the Lathers' Convention in Miami, Florida, in 1967. Delegate and Business Agent Miller researched into the program and, after many meetings and "red tape," had the plan approved for the local.

The project was funded by the Manpower Development and Training Act (MDTA) for the purpose of upgrading skills of journeymen Lathers.

The John F. Kennedy Skill Center in central Philadelphia was the location of the instructional classes. Twelve men attended two nights per week, three hours per night for a sixteen week period. The participants gave up two nights a week of their summers in order to take part in the program, not a small sacrifice on their part.

The program was designed by the late Leo Schultz, the apprenticeship training director for the L.I.U. Without his assistance this program would not have been possible. Fortunately Mr. Schultz was aware of the success of the program prior to his untimely death.

Instruction in mathematics, drafting, estimating layout, arc welding and theory pertaining to the lathing trade was provided by professional teachers from the Board of Education. The arc welding class proved to be the most popular with the men since this could be used in their present employment. Arc welding is becoming more important in the lathing trade.

All teachers commented to Business Agent Miller that it was a pleasure to teach the men because of the constant interest exhibited by their students.

Because of the success of this program, believed to be the first of its kind, the state and federal governments are interested in starting another program on an even larger scale.

Mobile Council to Coach 35 for Apprentice Tests

The Mobile (Ala.)-Pensacola (Fla.) Building and Construction Trades Council, AFL-CIO, has signed a contract with the Department of Labor to prepare 35 minority youths to pass apprenticeship qualification tests.

This is the first such project for the two cities, but others are under way in the two States (Birmingham, Jacksonville, Miami and Tampa).

The $57,141 one-year contract calls for the recruitment and preparation of about 350 youths to compete for the 35 apprenticeship openings which will be available for young people able to pass the tests.

This project is part of a nationwide federally funded Apprenticeship Outreach program designed to provide for up to 10 weeks of preparation, using the "tutor and cram" technique, to help minority youths pass the tests required to become apprentices in the skilled crafts.

The Mobile-based project will recruit prospects through the Employment Service offices of the two States and various community-action agencies.

Written and oral tests will be given by joint apprenticeship committees representing management and labor in each trade.

Apprenticeship Outreach sponsors also counsel and assist those apprentices selected to remain in their chosen apprenticeships until successful completion.

Labor Department Favors "Equal Opportunity" Plans Of Little Rock, Providence

Agreements to increase minority hiring in construction trades reached by local citizens in Little Rock and Providence have been tentatively approved by the Office of Federal Contract Compliance.

In announcing the development, Secretary of Labor J. D. Hodgson said the two equal opportunity plans bring to 13 the number of cities and areas that have developed "home-town" solutions for construction.

Many GI Loan Rights Restored by Legislation

A bill the President signed recently allows millions of veterans to use their GI loan benefits whenever conditions are favorable to them, the Veterans Administration has explained.

The new law (PL 91-506) restores unused, expired loan benefits to 8.9 million World War II and Korean Conflict veterans, and extends these same benefits indefinitely for approximately 7.5 million other veterans who served after Jan. 31, 1955.

Administrator of Veterans Affairs Donald E. Johnson noted that, before the law was enacted, veterans had to use their loan benefits before an expiration date.

One other provision of PL 91-506, which became effective Oct. 23, eliminates a VA funding fee of .5 per cent on guaranteed and direct loans to post-Korean veterans.

Another provision authorizes VA to make direct loans anywhere in the country to an eligible veteran who has a service-connected permanent and total disability and who has received a grant for specially adapted housing.

Nixon Claim of Wage Inflation Denied by AFL-CIO Pres. Meany

America's workers and their unions "won't buy" the Nixon Administration's demand that they make a one-sided sacrifice at the bargaining table, AFL-CIO Pres. George Meany declared.

The latest "inflation alert" of the President's Council of Economic Advisers complains that wages are rising too rapidly. According to the Administration's game plan, unions should lower their pay goals "in response to the slack in the economy."

Meany sharply criticized the report as "heavily weighted against wage increases for workers" but "very solicitous about profits of business."

He stressed that "workers and wages did not cause this inflation," that the buying power of the average take-home pay is less than a year ago "and even below 1965."

And he served notice that organized workers will continue to bargain for "a fair share of the pie" to restore their equity in the American economy.

The economic report, unveiled at a White House briefing, was the closest the Administration has come to "jawboning"—trying to influence wage and price decisions by public lecturing.

There was a token cautioning of employers "that we shall not make progress in reducing the inflation rates if the gains we hope to make on the labor cost front are offset by too-rapid increases of profit margins."

But the Administration economists said their "chief concern" was with wages.

The solution, the report suggested, is for unions that have not yet had their round at the bargaining table to accept smaller increases than the pattern which has emerged over the past year.

The council report agreed that the present high unemployment and "slack" in the economy "is not a condition that can be allowed to persist for long."

Government policies "should now aim more vigorously at expansion," the report conceded.

And then there was the warning against wage increases the Administration considers too high.

That, the report asserted, "would be a recipe for permanent rapid inflation—and also for persistent unemployment, because the government would be bound to try to check the inflation by generally restrictive policies."

It may seem "unfair to some" that those who come to the bargaining table later settle for less, the report conceded. But it argued that such a sacrifice is the only way to stop the "cost-price spiral."

Meany noted that the report "considers wages only as a cost of doing business" and says nothing about "wages as family income or as a source of purchasing power."

The so-called inflation alert, he emphasized, has "not a word about interest rates, which are an important cost throughout the economy. Nor is there a word in the report about soaring bank profits."

Meany termed the attack on the Auto Workers settlement "unwarranted." In fact, he stressed, it is "a most responsible agreement" that "provides a catch-up and modest gains in buying power."

The economic council, Meany added, is not serving "the cause of industrial peace" by trying "to undermine the recommendations of the President's Emergency Board in the railroad disputes, which were in themselves meager and unsatisfactory."

Meany reiterated the AFL-CIO's willingness to accept restraints on wages "if similar controls were placed equally on all other costs and incomes, including prices, profits, dividends, rents and all the different kinds of executive compensation."

Voluntary Arbitration Is Viewed As Possible Alternative to Strikes

A high-level union-management committee will work with the American Arbitration Association in a study of the possibility of increased use of voluntary arbitration to avoid strikes.

The AFL-CIO Executive Council last August agreed to cooperate with the AAA study and Federation Pres. George Meany designated five council members to serve on the panel.

Meany stressed that labor must continue to have "the right to strike." But without making any advance commitment as to the outcome of the study, "if some better method can be found, voluntarily, I think it might be well."

The labor members, all presidents of their unions and AFL-CIO vice presidents, are: I. W. Abel, Steelworkers; Paul Jennings, Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers; Charles Luna, United Transportation Union; John H. Lyons, Iron Workers, and Floyd E. Smith, Machinists.

Their management counterparts are Clark Frame, Westinghouse labor relations director; Algie E. Hendrix, General Dynamics vice president for industrial relations; Robert L. Higgins, executive vice president of the National Electrical Contractors Association; John P. Hiltz, Jr., chairman of the National Railway Labor Conference, and R. Heath Larry, vice chairman of U.S. Steel.

Representing the American Arbitration Association will be its president, Donald B. Straus; David L. Cole, one of the nation's best-known arbitrators, and David A. Morse, former director-general of the International Labor Organization.

AGC To Seek Repeal of Davis-Bacon Act in '71

The Board of Directors of the Associated General Contractors of America has approved recommendations to seek repeal of the Davis-Bacon Act in the next session of the Congress.

The AGC board also made clear some of its other positions, including: staying out of the National Joint Board until rules and standards satisfactory to it are adopted, prohibiting the use of certain funds collected by organizations from their members for political purposes, and guaranteeing that employees voting in certain elections will be afforded an opportunity to vote against representation by any individual or organization.

Joseph Lewis, Secy.-Treas. of Union Label Department, AFL-CIO, Dies of Heart Attack

Joseph Lewis, 64, Secretary-Treasurer of the AFL-CIO's Union Label & Service Trades Department since 1956, died in December in a Florida hospital of a heart attack.

Known to both labor and management as tireless promoter of the union label and the annual Union-Industries Show, Lewis was eating breakfast in Citrus Memorial Hospital at Inverness, Florida, when he suffered a third and fatal heart seizure. His doctor and family had believed he was on the road to recovery after a previous hospitalization.

Services were held December 16 at Gawler's Funeral Home in Washington and on December 18 at the Chapel of the Roses funeral home in Fremont, California, with interment in Holy Sepulcher Cemetery, Hayward, Calif.

In a message expressing shock and sadness at news of the death, AFL-CIO President George Meany and Secretary-Treasurer Lane Kirkland said of Lewis that "his long service to his fellow workers, to the trade union movement and to the Union Label Department were well known by all of us in the AFL-CIO who considered him our friend."

Meany Sends Message

Meany sent a personal message of condolence to Lewis's wife Gladys of Silver Spring, Maryland, and their daughter, Mrs. Mary Graminski. Also surviving are 11 grandchildren, including three in the family of the Lewis's only son Joseph, who preceded his father in death—also of a heart attack at age 40—10 weeks before his father's death.

Richard F. Walsh, President of the Department of which Lewis was executive officer, notified all members of the Department's executive board of the death and funeral arrangements.

His untimely passing, Walsh said, "comes as a grievous blow to all who knew, admired and respected him." His "kind nature and intense dedication to the principles and ideals of the trade union movement will long serve as a living tribute to his memory," Walsh said in his message.

Lewis and his wife were vacationing at their winter place on Lake

Joseph Lewis

Panasoffkee, near Inverness in mid-western Florida, when he suffered chest pains and was ordered to the Citrus Hospital. Released after a three-week stay, he suffered another attack December 12, and returned for his final visit.

Lewis's doctor had just left his hospital room after a cheerful conversation and was walking down the hall when nurses called him back. He ran back, but his efforts were in vain.

Began as Stove Mounter

Lewis was born in Centerville (near Fresno), California, in 1906. At age 17 he left school to work at the Wedgewood Stove Co., where he joined a local of the Stove Mounters Union in 1930.

Two years later he was elected president of the union's Local 61 in Newark, California. After he served three years in that post, the international union named him a vice president and, in 1944, president. He was re-elected at every convention through 1956, when he was named secretary-treasurer of the Union Label Department after four years as a vice president.

The Lewis's moved from California to Belleville, Illinois, when union headquarters was moved there. They moved to the Washington area after Lewis's Union Label Department appointment.

Reuben Soderstrom, Veteran Illinois Labor Leader, Dies

Reuben G. Soderstrom, 82, who led the Illinois labor movement for 40 years until his recent retirement, died in December at Streator, Ill. He had been hospitalized since Mar. 15 by a heart attack and stroke.

AFL-CIO Pres. George Meany and Sec.-Treas. Lane Kirkland said in messages of sympathy to the family and Illinois labor that Soderstrom's "long and illustrious career of service to his fellow man and to the trade union movement won for him the regard of all of us."

Born on a Minnesota farm, Soderstrom was a largely self-educated man, having quit school at 12 to take a job in a glass factory. He became an apprentice printer in 1906 and won a journeyman's card in Streator Local 138 of the Typographical Union in 1910. He later served as president of his local and president of the former Streator Trades & Labor Assembly.

He became president of the Illinois AFL in 1930, and at merger in 1953, was chosen without opposition as first president of the State AFL-CIO.

Soderstrom was a delegate to every AFL and AFL-CIO convention since 1930. He served as secretary of the resolutions committee at AFL conventions for many years and helped draft many major policy statements.

He was a state legislator from 1918 to 1936 and for several terms was chairman of the House Committee on Education. The first Illinois measure providing pensions for the blind was written by Soderstrom.

Willard Shelton Dies, Retired AFL-CIO Editor

Willard E. Shelton, 65, former managing editor of the AFL-CIO News, died Dec. 1 at George Washington University Hospital in Washington, D.C., after an illness of several weeks.

Shelton retired Feb. 1, 1968, after 10 years as managing editor of the News but continued to report on the political scene and Congress as Washington columnist for the Guild Reporter, the Newspaper Guild publication, and several other union papers.

AFL-CIO Calls for Government Action to Counter "Prolonged Stagnation" of Economy

The AFL-CIO has called for "immediate government action" to counter the "prolonged stagnation" of the economy without regard to the effect of policy changes on the 1972 election.

Citing the various powers given the President to cope with the economic situation, the federation's Executive Council called additionally for action at the up-coming lame-duck session of Congress on an "irreducible minimum" of matters of major concern to the American people.

The council's two-day fall session in Washington reviewed with general satisfaction the results of the 1970 elections and AFL-CIO Pres. George Meany told reporters that the outcome was a "net gain from our point of view" and a failure by the President to influence the results in key states.

In a strong statement on the economy in which it reviewed the salient developments of the Administration's "game plan" to cool the economy, the council said that "the Administration which choked off economic expansion in 1969 and engineered the recession, has thus far refused to provide the necessary stimulus" to change federal policy. It added:

"The American people need immediate government action to counter the present stagnation and rapidly bring the economy to full employment. Workers must not be compelled to endure additional months of spreading economic distress while the Administration debates the degree and timing of policy change geared to having the greatest political effect on the campaign of 1972."

Meany stressed at press conferences that after 21 months of experience and trying to sell the electorate on its economic policies and getting turned down, it's time for the Administration to "change its game plan," which was conceived as reducing inflation without causing a rise in unemployment.

The hardships imposed by the Administration's "game plan" have been particularly severe on workers, the council pointed out, noting the drop in buying power, the continuing rise in the number of unemployed, the weakening job markets.

Only an immediate and sustained upturn can create the large and growing number of jobs needed to wipe out unemployment and care for a growing labor force, the council said, "but there is no such turn-around in sight."

It noted again the President's refusal to use the selective credit controls voted by Congress, along with other powers, and urged Congress to direct the Federal Reserve System to establish "low interest rate ceilings on specific types of loans and to allocate credit to where it will do the most good for America."

In other comments on the recent elections, Meany told reporters that the Administration was not very successful in its appeal to "blue collar" voters and workers generally, and that Vice Pres. Agnew was a great fund-raiser for the Republicans and a great entertainer but his value as a vote-getter was questionable.

Meany placed major emphasis on the necessity for the lame-duck session to vote on meaningful job safety legislation, stressing especially the position of the Administration and Labor Sec. Hodges in opposing a strong bill that would be administered by the Labor Dept.

Metal Rib Lath Proven Desirable by Years of Experience and Tests

Specifications of the Metal Lath Association recognize and permit use of $\frac{3}{8}$ " rib metal lath for portland cement plaster. Such specs have existed for 57 years, during which time millions of yards of rib lath and portland cement plaster have provided superior performance on ceilings, soffits, partitions, and exterior walls.

Tests during the past decade confirm performance history. In 1960 the Metal Lath Association tested 17 partitions or wall assemblies, with four of the five plastered with portland cement (stucco).

Rib lath and portland cement plaster on studs spaced 24" apart took 67% more load than 3.4 diamond mesh lath on studs spaced 16 inches apart. Examination of assemblies to determine failure along ribs in the form of cracking showed no failures in this regard.

Packing stresses constitute only one category of stresses affecting a lath and plaster assembly. Bumping or impact loads also were checked with rib metal lath attached to metal studs spaced 24". Plaster included both portland cement and gypsum. Again, there was no failure along ribs of the lath.

In tests to determine bonding characteristics of a gypsum brown coat over a portland cement scratch coat, it was learned that while there was some bond failure between scratch and brown coats, the bond of gypsum plaster to the portland cement scratch coat was sufficiently close to that of gypsum plaster over gypsum plaster to be acceptable.

Fire tests on rib metal lath partitions and ceilings show that, despite severe heat, there is no tendency of cracking to follow ribs of the lath.

In view of test results and performance of rib lath over the past 57 years, comments contradicting the facts do not possess validity.

As outlined in the "Plasterers' Manual," published several years ago by the Portland Cement Association, "cracks can develop in portland cement stucco and plaster through many causes or combinations of causes. Some of these are: shrinkage stresses; building movements; foundation settlements; restraints from lighting and plumbing fixtures; intersecting walls or ceilings; pilasters and corners; weak sections in walls or ceilings due to changes in cross-sections, such as at openings, and construction joints.—"Travel Chatter," Plaster Information Center, San Jose, Calif.

Postal Workers Get Rapid Seniority Clause, Raises

Unions representing more than 660,000 postal workers have negotiated a new pay schedule that will cut 13 years off the time it takes an employee to move from starting salary to the top rate for his job.

The seven unions with exclusive bargaining rights for the nation's postal workers also won a provision that gives the big majority of workers—those with at least one year of service—an immediate pay raise.

They will be jumped one step on the pay ladder—worth $235 a year to the largest group of clerks and letter carriers. And instead of having to wait from one to three years for the next step in the pay scale, they will move up again in either 44, 34, 26 or 24 weeks depending on length of service. The most senior employees will advance to the top rate at the fastest pace.

For employees already at the top of their pay grade—those with at least 21 years of service—there will be a special, red-circled “equity increase,” the equivalent of an additional pay step.

And for new employees and those with less than one year of service, the new union contract means that they will reach the top pay for their job in only eight years—instead of 21 years.

The agreement was the first test of collective bargaining since Con-

Teaching Construction

Five international unions now have contracts totaling $3.3 million to teach construction job skills to Job Corps trainees.

About 1,600 young men residing at 30 Job Corps conservation centers are enrolled in 62 separate pre-apprenticeship courses. Union craftsmen instruct them in carpentry, painting, masonry, plastering, and heavy equipment operation and maintenance. Union placement specialists help them find construction apprenticeship opportunities. The youths also receive room, board, clothing, education, counseling, health care and other Job Corps services.

The contracts cover salaries of union instructors and placement specialists and cost of books, tools, and teaching aids.

The trainees receive six months to a year of preparation for the educational and vocational tests for entrance into apprenticeship. Entrance exams are administered by joint apprenticeship committees, representing labor and management, that operate

After leaving the Job Corps and becoming apprentices, the youths will be paid progressively higher wages as they gain skill and experience. Starting pay for a construction trade apprentice is round $2.50 an hour and can go as high as $5.00 an hour in the final months of apprenticeship. Apprentices are generally admitted to full union membership by the time they reach journeyman status.

In fiscal 1970, about 400 Job Corps youth were helped to become apprentices in various construction trades. Since the Job Corps pre-apprenticeship program began in 1966, an estimated 3,000 youths have been helped to begin careers as construction craftsmen.

Q. Is it true that the dependent children of retired or disabled women cannot receive checks from Social Security?

A. No. In the past, it was necessary for women to have worked at least a year and a half within the three years before their deaths, retirement or disability in order for their children to get benefits based on the mother's work. Since 1967, children can qualify for benefits on the account of any worker (male or female) who was fully insured when he or she died, retired or became disabled.

Q. I understand disabled widows can now get benefits before age 60. Can you tell me more about this?

A. Under the 1967 social security amendments, many disabled widows and disabled dependent widowers became eligible for reduced benefits as early as age 50. The amount of the benefit will depend on the age at which entitlement begins. To be eligible, the widow or widower must have become severely disabled before or within 7 years after the spouse's death, and a widowed mother, before or within 7 years after the end of her entitlement to benefits as a mother. The 7-year period gives widows and widowers a reasonable opportunity to work long enough to earn disability insurance protection through their own social security deductions.

Q. My husband and I operate a farm. I help him with some of the work. Can we split our profit in half and report the amount to our respective social security records?

A. Generally, the answer is no. The law says that in a community property state all earnings of a trade or business, including farm earnings, must be reported to the husband's social security record, unless the wife exercises substantially all of the management and control of the operation. In the latter case, all earnings would be reported to the wife's social security record. Also, a legal partnership may sometimes exist. For further information, discuss this with your social security office or Internal Revenue Office.

FROM THE PRESIDENT'S DESK

This issue carries the unhappy news of the death of retired President Sal Maso. Few who have risen within the labor movement have displayed the same measure of dedication to the cause of working people as did my predecessor in this office.

All through a period of a half-century, Sal Maso was active in the Lathers International Union. It was in 1927 that he was initiated into Local Union 166, Albany, New York. It is not my intention to relate his biography; that is to be found elsewhere in this issue.

My intention is to pay tribute to the thoroughness and the zeal with which President Maso carried out all the duties of the numerous offices which he held during his rise to the highest position of responsibility in this labor organization.

President Maso was zealous and had tireless energy. The protection of the jurisdiction of the lather was a topic close to his heart. He spent countless hours, days, even weeks and months in his efforts to protect the job rights of our membership. This was "the gospel" he preached as he travelled all over this nation and Canada.

Sal Maso realized, early in his labor career, that no international union may successfully hold itself apart from the mainstream of organized labor. Thus it was that he became very active in the state labor organization in his adopted home state of New Jersey. Here, too, he gained recognition through his ability and dedication.

The great personal ability and drive of President Maso was often recognized outside of organized labor too, proof of the old adage: "If you have something to be done, give it to a busy man to do." He was active in many public and civic endeavors on behalf of his fellow-man, regardless of whether that man was inside or outside the ranks of organized labor. He had compassion on those who were unfortunate enough to be lacking in material goods. His efforts in behalf of organizations to aid the health and welfare of the community were legion.

Sal Maso was a very volatile person. He held passionately to that in which he believed. He very seldom was prepared to "sit on the sidelines" when controversy was in the air. Many of us, throughout his long career, at times found ourselves on opposite sides of a discussion. But we always appreciated his candor, frankness and honesty, and his devotion to any cause which he felt was just.

After a long and rewarding career, death came to him, as it must to all of us. Sal Maso rose from a humble beginning to associate with Presidents and world leaders. Anyone could be proud of such a career as was his, and we may all take pride in having been associated with him in his endeavors.

On behalf of myself, General Secretary-Treasurer Ferguson, our Executive Council and members of the International Staff, I convey our deepest sympathy to Mrs. Maso and the other members of his family.

Great men were, like us all, mere mortals in their lifetimes. As such they were subject to the foibles and failings which beset all of us today. Lincoln, whose birthday is marked this month, despite his unquestioned greatness, was poorly educated, was moody, was sometimes given to poor business practices. He had numerous loud and extended domestic quarrels with his wife, just like many other husbands. Throughout his life he believed in dreams and "signs and portents." He was a "working politician," who voted to condemn Pres. Polk and the Mexican War while, at the same time, voting supplies to carry on the war. This imposing historical figure, universally recognized for his greatness by world historians was, after all, "a mortal man," which should encourage all "mere men" today.

BY THE GENERAL SECRETARY TREASURER

IT was announced in this journal last month that the Associated General Contractors of America, through its Board of Directors, has approved recommendations to seek repeal of the Davis-Bacon Act in the current session of Congress. We have no direct connection with the AGC, a national association of contractors. But since AGC members, individually and collectively, are constantly advising labor unions concerning desirable courses of action, it is only fair and proper that we return the favor.

THE Davis-Bacon Act was passed by Congress in 1931, when Republican Herbert Hoover was President. It was introduced in the Senate by Senator James J. Davis, Republican of Pennsylvania. In the House it was sponsored by Rep. Robert Bacon, a Republican of New York. At its 51st convention in 1931, the American Federation of Labor declared: "It is a glaring inconsistency . . . for government officials to preach the economic advantages of high wages, and then permit the government in its capacity of a builder to undermine and destroy prevailing wage standards in any given community." The Comptroller General had decreed that government contracts must be let on the basis of the lowest bid submitted.

CONTRACTORS from low-wage areas hard-hit by the depression would recruit men from those areas who, virtually starving, would work for practically any wage. They would then "invade" areas where conditions were better: where contractors maintained permanent crews at wages more consistent with the times and conditions. These "labor jobbers" would then proceed to "cut the throats" of local contractors with low bids for government jobs . . . because they were paying their work force practically nothing! It was the contractors who spearheaded the drive for passage of the Davis-Bacon Act. Organized labor was there, too, and greatly favored it. But organized labor was more directly responsible for the Walsh-Healey

Act of 1936, which established labor standards on government contracts, including minimum wages, overtime pay in excess of eight hours a day or 40 hours a week, child and convict labor provisions, and health and safety requirements. Fair contractors, unable to cope with cutthroat competition, were the parties who principally pushed the Davis-Bacon Act through Congress!

NOW the AGC's Board of Directors has recommended that their organization seek repeal of the law. They are apparently willing to risk a return to the times when jackleg contractors put their workers in compounds, practically concentration camps, so labor organizers couldn't get to them. They are apparently willing to allow low-wage non-union contractors to bid against them for government contracts while, at the same time, maintaining their legal obligation to workers incurred through collective bargaining.

IT is a different generation of contractors now than it was 40 years ago. Many can't remember The Great Depression. They don't remember truckloads of hungry men hustling into strange territory, pushing Georgia Buggies ten and twelve hours a day for literally a few cents an hour. And on the sidewalks, watching, were the local contractors who had lost out in the bidding. They weren't working at all . . . not even for a few cents an hour!

For the benefit of the fair employers in the AGC, we trust that this ill-advised proposal will die a-borning. To deliberately set out to destroy the delicate checks-and-balance system achieved over the years, to return to "the law of the jungle," would certainly hurt organized labor.

But it would destroy the Associated General Contractors and some of its members.

Vice President Edwards Leads Giant Rally

More Than 3,000 Building Tradesmen March in San Francisco Civic Center Protest

The controversy currently raging in San Francisco concerning a height limitation for buildings along the bayfront brought about the largest and most orderly public demonstration in the city's history.

LIU Third Vice President Kenneth M. Edwards, President of the San Francisco Construction Trades Council, was a leading figure in planning and producing the 3,000-man protest.

The men marched five abreast all the way around City Hall in support of a 550-foot height limitation on buildings on the waterfront from the Golden Gate Bridge to the Ferry Building. In addition, 44 vehicles of varied shapes; ditch diggers, earth movers, dump trucks, pickups, flatbeds and panel trucks slowly circled City Hall.

Organized labor in San Francisco is supporting the 550-foot height limitation. They are opposed by others who favor a lower limitation of 84 feet, with 175 feet allowed on 10 percent of the land.

Because of the activity of organized labor, led by Vice President Edwards and the building tradesmen of San Francisco, a vote on the proposal by the Board of Supervisors was delayed for 90 days from last November 17.

The Board chamber was packed to the walls with construction workers, most wearing hard hats. An overflow crowd lined the corridors outside.

All through the pre-hearing demonstration and during the Board meeting there was no violence. There were only eight policemen on duty in the area, including a captain, and not a single billy club was in evidence.

Those opposing the proposed 550-foot-high U.S. Steel building contend that such heights allowed on the waterfront will destroy the view of the bay from virtually all of San Francisco. Those favoring the 550-foot-high limit declare that, if the lower limit is set, it will eventually result in a "wall" of buildings 84 feet high being built from the Golden Gate to the Ferry Building, whereas the higher level will allow "corridors" of view past the higher buildings.

Organized labor has favored the higher limit on the ground that it will provide additional jobs for construction workers.

Herb Caen, the right-wing columnist of the San Francisco "Chronicle," wrote: "The power of labor's political blackmail (vote our way or we'll vote you out): it appears there aren't even five votes now among the Supes for the 84'-175' height limit on the waterfront, so a vote on the issue will probably be delayed."

When labor uses its right to vote, it's "blackmail." When management organizes to influence legislation, it is "legislative liaison," according to the right-wingers.

The work done by Vice President Edwards, acting as President of the San Francisco Construction Trades Council, was praised by many. Even those holding to an opposite view in the controversy lauded the controlled, orderly, non-violent nature of the protest which he headed.

This was the scene as 3,000 workers marched in protest against proposed building San Francisco height limit. Despite size, demonstration was orderly.

Sal Maso Dies

SAL MASO, who served the Lathers International Union as its President from 1964 until his retirement at the International convention in Vancouver in August, 1970, died of a massive stroke on January 21.

He was stricken at the breakfast table in his home in Paterson, New Jersey. He was rushed to a hospital where he passed away late the same night.

Born July 25, 1900, in New York City, he was initiated into Local 166, Albany, New York, in 1927. He took an immediate interest in his union. He moved to Paterson shortly afterward and began a rapid rise in Local 143, being elected its Business Manager in 1930. In 1936 he was elected an International Vice President. He held both offices until assuming the duties of President in January, 1964, following the death of President Lloyd Mashburn.

He was Acting President of the New Jersey State Building and Construction Trades Council from 1934 to 1940, when he became President. He had previously been President of the Paterson Construction Trades Council and of the Passaic County Central Labor Union.

Honors former President Maso received included citations from President Franklin D. Roosevelt and President Harry Truman for services to the nation during their administrations. He was appointed by President Dwight Eisenhower as a member of a Special Industry Committee for Puerto Rico. He also received citations from the U.S. Department of Labor, Bureau of Apprenticeship and Training, and from the Veterans' Re-employment Rights Committee. Through action by the Congress he was awarded the Selective Service Metal. Pres. Maso was also honored with a citation from Fairleigh Dickinson University, where he lectured on numerous occasions.

He had a distinguished history of participation in public service and civic organizations. He served as a member of the New Jersey Governor's Committee on Equal Opportunity, was Co-chairman of the National Lathing Industry's Joint Apprenticeship Committee and served on the Executive Committee of the Greater Paterson Economic Development Council. He was a member of the Board of Trustees of the Passaic County Legal Aid Society and served on the Governor's Committee to Employ the Handicapped. He was a member of the Board of Trustees of the New Jersey Camp for the Blind and an Executive Board Member of Althaha Council of the Boy Scouts of America.

President Maso was a member of the state Congress of Parents and Teachers; served on the Grand Jurors' Association of Passaic County; Board of Trustees, United Community Chest and Council of Paterson and the New Jersey Society for Crippled Children and Adults.

His service in behalf of others also included serving as a member of the State Appeals Tribunal, State Unemployment Compensation Commission; State Appeals Board of the Selective Service System; New Jersey Board of Mediation representing labor, and served on the President's Conference on Occupational Safety under Presidents Roosevelt, Truman and Eisenhower.

He has been the Commissioner of the Board of Education in Paterson, Chairman of the Paterson Housing Authority and arbitrator for numerous companies and unions, specializing in construction.

President Maso was a member of the New Jersey State Selective Service System; State and Federal Veterans' Re-employment Rights Committee; Y.W.C.A. Citizens' Committee; the American Cancer Society; National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis; Citizens' Naval Advisory Committee and Rotary Club No. 70 of Paterson.

He served as State Chairman of the U.S. Savings Bond Committee representing labor; Co-Chairman of the Labor Committee of the Paterson March of Dimes and a member of the Board of Directors of the Paterson Chapter of the American Red Cross.

An acknowledged leading figure in the area of building and construction unions, he served as Chairman of the Committee of Law at the 53rd convention of the Building and Construction Trades Department of the AFL-CIO held in San Francisco in 1965.

After his election in January, 1964, to fill the unexpired term of deceased President Lloyd Mashburn, he was elected to the office in his own right at the convention held in New York City in September, 1964. He announced in advance of the 1970 convention in Vancouver, B.C., that, for reasons of health, he was retiring and would not stand for re-election. President Maso had not enjoyed good health since and had required medical attention at several intervals since his retirement.

Funeral services were under direction of the John Feeney & Son Funeral Home, Paterson. A requiem High Mass was said at St. Theresa Catholic Church, with interment in Calvary Cemetery in Paterson on January 25. General President Georgine, General Secretary-Treasurer Ferguson, members of the International Executive Council and a large number of officers and members of local unions from over the U.S. and Canada attended the final services, as well as dignitaries from state and local governments and other labor organizations. Among those attending was Sen. Clifford P. Case of New Jersey, who said: "Sal Maso was a stalwart in the New Jersey labor movement. He was also a warm hearted, generous man who will be greatly missed by his legion of friends."

In an editorial on January 23, the Paterson "News" declared: "Here was indeed a human dynamo, hard hitting, free-swinging in any cause in which he was enlisted.

"In spite of preoccupation with important labor obligations, Mr. Maso kept his burning zeal for good citizenship in his home city. He had a warm devotion for his home city. In the past few years, Mr. Maso's time was taken up with his national presidency of the lathers union and his opportunity for service at home and in the city was sorely proscribed.

"Now he is home for good, taken by the Lord to his permanent resting place. He was a good man."

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Agnes Maso; a son, Kenneth, Secretary and Assistant Business Manager of Local 143; a brother, Emil, Business Manager of Local 143; two sisters, Miss Clementine Maso and Mrs. Florence Di Giamo, and five grandchildren.

Corporate Concentration of Wealth Seen As Threat to Nation by Senator

At least one U. S. Senator believes that super-big business is moving the United States slowly but surely into a position where it can effectively dictate policy in the realm of economics and government.

Senator Lee Metcalf (D-Mont.), has announced that he will re-introduce a resolution calling for a Special Committee to Investigate Economic and Financial Concentration. Senator Metcalf introduced such a resolution in the 91st Congress but it was not acted upon. Said Sen. Metcalf: "It is time to determine who owns America and who controls it, then to proceed to reshape our institutions so they will be responsive to the needs of our times."

One of the nation's best-informed economists on corporate ownership, Willard F. Mueller, former counsel to the Federal Trade Commission, suggests that such a step could even now be too late.

Mueller says that 1.3 per cent of the nation's corporations now own 83 per cent of all the manufacturing assets of the nation, reaping 91 per cent of all profits.

A mere 102 of the nation's corporations own 43 per cent of the assets. The remaining 195,000 corporations share only nine per cent of the profits.

At the same time, the effective concentration is tighter than the figures indicate. Many of today's big corporations are linked by joint ventures and management interlocks.

A conglomerate's total power exceeds the sum of its parts. Mueller says, because it can shift resources among various markets. The usual competitive limitations no longer apply.

The strike, considered the "ultimate weapon" in collective bargaining for workers, is not necessarily effective against a conglomerate, which may be able to shut down one or more of its companies with little or no effect on its total profits.

Sen. Lee Metcalf

The growing concentration of ownership is "eroding the social and political viability of many local communities, altering the balance of power between capital and labor, and adding new dimensions to the political power of large corporations," Mueller says.

He points out that the power of nationwide television, available only to very large corporations, is a "quantum leap" in power over fractional coverage. Is it possible, for example, to pass effective national legislation to deal with a huge oil company's power to pollute—in the face of its easy access to national television, where it says soothingly and convincingly that it does not pollute?

It would be bad enough if it were only an economic question. But with economic power comes political clout. It is no accident that so many top policy makers of the Nixon Administration come from the ranks of conglomerates. The President himself was a Wall Street lawyer with close ties to big banking interests.

The hour hand is perilously close to midnight. Mueller suggests. Senator Metcalf's resolution to establish a top-level investigating committee—whose job will include recommending legislation to blunt the trend to conglomeration—deserves every thinking man's support. It should be passed without delay by the current Congress.

Congress Finally Enacts Housing Program

Almost $3 Billion for Housing, Urban Renewal; Direct Government Insurance Voted

The 91st Congress passed, and President Nixon signed into law, a labor-supported housing bill which will inaugurate important new programs as well as raise the spending ceiling on continued federal aid to housing.

A conservative coalition in the House tried unsuccessfully to kill the legislation, which includes an innovative program of federal planning and financial assistance for economically balanced "new communities" in metropolitan areas.

The provision was included in the Senate-passed bill but not in the House-passed version. Republican Leader Gerald R. Ford and his conservative southern allies charged that the House conferees had "capitulated" to the Senate without fighting hard enough for the bobtailed House bill.

The House rejected the charge and approved the conference committee report by a 168-104 vote. It had already been approved by the Senate with strong bipartisan support and no recorded opposition.

Administration Opposed Legislation

The Nixon Administration had opposed any new legislation and had asked Congress merely to vote a six-month extension of existing programs that otherwise would expire.

Its "do-nothing" position was reportedly based on budget pressures since the Dept. of Housing & Urban Development was known to have been preparing a legislative package which included a version of the new communities program.

The bill sent to the White House authorized $2.9 billion for housing and urban renewal programs through the fiscal year ending June 30, 1972.

It includes a new program that would permit organizations of farm workers and other non-profit groups to receive loans and grants to build permanent housing for migrant workers—in contrast to the jerry-built shacks frequently provided by farm employers.

Also in the bill is authority for construction of so-called "dormitory" housing for low income elderly, displaced and handicapped single persons. Occupants would have the privacy of single rooms but would share common kitchen and other tenant facilities.

To meet the problem of businesses in inner-city areas that have been unable to obtain reasonably-priced insurance against theft, burglary and vandalism, the federal government would be authorized to provide direct insurance starting next August.

For the continuing programs, the bill authorizes an added $1.5-billion for urban renewal and another $200 million for model cities grants for the 1972 fiscal year. The actual money, however, must be appropriated in separate legislation.

The measure raises the spending authority for public housing and earmarks $75 million of new money for operating and maintenance expenses. The intent is to halt the deterioration of services and maintenance in public housing projects which have been squeezed by the combination of higher maintenance costs and the limit on rents that can be charged.

Haggerty Tells Hodgson Labor Department Lacks Authority to Institute Apprenticeship Changes

The Building and Construction Trades Department, AFL-CIO, has formally advised Secretary of Labor James D. Hodgson that it strongly objects to a proposed addition to apprenticeship regulations.

The proposed addition—to 29 CFR Part 5—is intended to create labor standards for ratios of apprentices and trainees to journeymen on federal and federally-assisted construction.

President C. J. Haggerty stated in a letter to Hodgson that, in his opinion, the Secretary of Labor does not have the legal power to do what he is attempting.

In addition, said Haggerty, President Nixon's statement of last March 17 was simply that—a statement—and was not an executive order. It does not constitute a legal foundation for the promulgation of certain proposed regulations.

The Building and Construction Trades Department, vigorously assisted by a number of affiliated national and international unions, long has been fighting changes the Nixon Administration has sought and still seeks in apprenticeship rules and procedures. Haggerty expressed the Department's determination to continue the fight every step of the way.

"Incredible!"

Before Congress passed a housing bill of which he approved, Nixon had previously vetoed an appropriations bill for the Department of Housing and Urban Affairs as "too costly." Congress passed the pared-down measure after failing to override his veto. Later Nixon administratively gave a tax break to business which will cost $2.6 billion in tax revenues this year, rising to $4.1 billion in 1976, then tapering off to $2.8 billion a year by 1980, according to the Nixon administration's own estimates.

This action by the Treasury Department allows business to write off equipment for tax purposes in as much as one-fifth the time allowed under present tax guidelines.

The money, coming out of federal tax revenues, will mean that America's working men and women will now have to pay an increased share of the tax burden . . . the proportion which the Nixon Administration has given back to business.

AFL-CIO Secretary-Treasurer Lane Kirkland termed the administration's action "Incredible!"

1970 Unemployment Rose 58% Over 1969!

Joblessness Hits Nine-Year High; Worst-Hit of All Are Workers in Construction

Unemployment rose a staggering 58 percent during 1970 as the nation slipped deeper and deeper into recession.

A nine-year high in joblessness was reached in December, when the national unemployment rate touched 6 percent of the national work force. Workers unemployed 15 weeks or longer totalled 1.3 million last December. In December, 1969, there were only 500,000.

At the start of the year, 3.1 million persons were looking for jobs and not finding them.

By year-end, the number had grown to 4.9 million. On a percentage basis, 60 out of every 1,000 persons in the labor force were out of work in December as compared with 35 out of 1,000 at the start of the year.

All Joblessness Rises

All major industry groups also showed significant increases in the average rate of unemployment over the year. Construction was up to 9.7 percent from 6 percent, manufacturing up to 5.6 percent from 3.3 percent, transportation and public utilities climbed to 3.2 percent from 2.2 percent. Construction unemployment for December reached 11 percent.

Employment in contract construction was down 91,000 from 1969 to 622,000 jobs. The only job gains recorded in the goods-producing industries were in mining, up 3,000 to 622,000, and petroleum, up 91,000 to 192,000.

Even averaged out over the year, the 1970 unemployment statistics bore out the sluggish economy's inability to provide jobs for an expanding workforce.

The average jobless rate for the year was 4.9 percent—compared with the 3.5 percent average of 1969. The average number of persons jobless during the year was 4.1 million, up from a 2.9 million average in 1969.

The labor force grew by nearly 2 million during the year, reflecting normal population growth, a reduction in the armed forces and an increase in women in the labor market. But the number of jobs increased by only 730,000—and most of the addition was in part-time women workers.

Taking the brunt of the rise in unemployment over the year were adult men and full-time workers. Jobless rates for adult women and teenagers also were up substantially, the BLS said.

A fairly steady rise in jobless rates was recorded during the 12-month span and long-term unemployment became more significant toward the end of the year.

The number of workers out of jobs 15 weeks or longer in the fourth quarter totalled 890,000, more than double the number in the same period of 1969.

Over the year, the number of persons out of work 27 weeks and longer rose to an average of 235,000 from 133,000 in 1969. The average duration of unemployment was 8.8 weeks, compared with 7.9 weeks in 1969.

For adult men, the average jobless rate last year rose to 3.5 percent from 2.1 percent the year earlier. For women, it increased to 4.8 percent from 3.7 percent.

The average teenage rate rose more than 3 points to 15.3 percent after holding in the 12 percent range for the four preceding years.

Blue-collar unemployment averaged 6.2 percent in 1970, rising substantially from the 3.9 percent rate of 1969, while white-collar unemployment edged up seven-tenths of 1 percent to 2.8 percent.

Increases in unemployment were marked by both white and Negro workers. The average annual rate more than doubled for whites rising from 2.1 percent to 4.5 percent, and climbed for Negroes from 6.4 to 8.2 percent.

Nonfarm payroll employment averaged 70.7 million for the year, about 400,000 more jobs than in 1969. This was the smallest year-to-year increase since 1961, the BLS noted.

All of the net growth in payroll employment occurred among the service-producing industries, which posted gains of 1.25 million jobs over the year. The largest gains were in jobs with state and local governments.

Jobs in manufacturing declined by 683,000 in 1970 to 19.4 million. Most of the decline came in durable goods sector, which showed a drop of 683,000. The nondurable goods sector was down by 87,000 jobs.

The average workweek fell by five-tenths of 1 hour to 37.2 hours last year, with the decline widespread among all major industries, the BLS reported. The factory workweek dropped to 39.8 hours, down eight-tenths of an hour.

Overtime in manufacturing declined to 3.0 hours, the lowest level since 1963, the BLS noted.

New Law Adds Four More 3-Day Weekends

The Monday holiday law which went into effect this year will assure many workers of at least four more three-day weekends each year.

Congress in 1968 approved shifting the observance of three holidays—Washington's Birthday, Memorial Day and Veterans Day—to Monday and added Columbus Day as a public legal holiday to be observed on Monday. Labor Day will continue as a Monday holiday.

The other holidays, New Years Day, Independence Day, Thanksgiving and Christmas, will continue to be observed on their regular dates. But this year, Independence Day and Christmas fall on weekends, giving workers two more extended weekends.

The new Monday holidays are Washington's Birthday, the third Monday in February; Memorial Day, last Monday in May; Columbus Day, second Monday in October, and Veterans Day, fourth Monday in October.

Local 46 Member Named To High N.Y. Labor Post

Industrial Commissioner M. P. Catherwood has announced the promotion of Bernard E. Romney Predicts Future Housing to Be Produced In Non-Union Factories

Declaring that the public is "sick and tired" of paying "unreasonable and excessive labor and finance costs for new homes," Housing and Urban Development Secretary George Romney recently predicted that at least two-thirds of all homes built by the end of the 1970s will be factory produced.

Romney's tough statement about "spiraling costs" in the construction industry were part of a two-hour press conference covering the Nixon administration's policies on housing integration, charges by a house panel of "shocking" abuses in a major federal low-cost housing program, and a wide array of other topics.

"Present construction methods are pricing themselves out of the market in a period of soaring housing demand," Romney asserted. He alleged that the average hourly earnings of construction workers had risen 20% in the last two years. (A worker earning $9,000 in 1968 would receive an average 10% increase over two years to earn $10,800 in 1970 if such an increase was incurred.)

(Romney's estimate is slightly higher than that of the AFL-CIO which has estimated wage increases at about 16 percent per annum.)

But he predicted that the upward pressure on labor and other costs would be brought to a halt by a combination of 'direct government action, new labor legislation and the switch to (factory-produced) housing, which can be built without highly skilled, high-cost trade union labor.' (What organized labor would be doing while non-union workers were turning out housing components was not mentioned during the press conference.)

On the subject of using the leverage of federal funds to encourage housing integration in all-white suburbs, Romney said he agreed with President Nixon's rejection of "forced integration."

Asked what the government's policy should be, the secretary said: "An absolute minimum is to prevent discrimination."

Romney said there was "blatant violation of the Constitution and the law" by residents of Black Jack, Missouri, a suburb of St. Louis, who have attempted to bar Negroes from the community. But he said the administration had not yet decided on whether to take any action in the case.

Voicing optimism that housing opportunities were "opening up for everyone across the board," black as well as white, he said the great majority of the families benefiting from federal housing subsidy programs are white working people earning between $5,000 and $10,000 a year. Very few of them are blacks, laborers, welfare recipients or the unemployed, he said.

AFL-CIO President Meany Assesses Nixon Administration's Record as "Goose Egg"

On George Meany's scorecard, the Nixon Administration's domestic record for 1970 added up to another big goose egg, its second in a row.

The AFL-CIO president gave the assessment in a year-end radio interview for the United Press International audio network.

In its second year, he said, the Administration's record has gone from bad to worse.

"We've had higher and higher levels of unemployment," Meany noted. "We've had higher and even higher price levels. And accompanying that, we've had the highest interest rates this country has seen in 100 years."

In response to questions, Meany told a three-man interviewing team:

- National health insurance is "a must" because the middle-income family can't afford the $100-a-day hospital rooms and the high cost of the nation's "completely uncoordinated system of health and medical services." While the "very, very poor" receive government help and the "very, very rich" can pay the price, good medical care is beyond the reach of most Americans.

- The minimum wage must be raised because "you can't live on $1.60 an hour" and it should be tied to the cost of living. To lower the minimum wage for teenagers, as some Administration officials have suggested, would merely worsen the problem and put young people in a position of competing at lower wages with their parents in a scarce labor market.

- In response to criticism of "inflationary" wage increases won by unions in the building trades, Meany noted that local union negotiators must "face the fellows who are married to the ladies who have to go shopping . . . and their attitude is that the prices have gone up so much since the last contract was signed that they've got to make up the difference." He noted that the conservative-supported Landrum-Griffin Act took away some of the authority of international unions over local agreements on the theory that members needed protection from "labor bosses." If the Administration wants to change the pattern of hargaining, he pointed out, it would have to change the Landrum-Griffin Act.

- Labor's endorsement, in 1972 as in the past, will go to "friends of labor . . . not to the Democratic Party, not to the Republican Party."

While "it is a fact of life that we support more Democrats than we do Republicans," that is based on the record of the candidates and not their political label, he declared.

The trade union movement will support candidates who believe in the things labor believes in as against those who do not, Meany said. "And this will apply . . . from the President all the way down."

B&CT Department Hails New Safety Commission

The Building and Construction Trades Department of the AFL-CIO has hailed the new Occupational Safety and Health Act passed by Congress which will take effect on April 23.

By that time, President Nixon must appoint an Assistant Secretary of Labor for Occupational Safety and Health and three members for the Occupational Safety and Health Review Commission. The original commission members will serve a two, a four and a six-year term and thereafter the members will serve six years, with a new appointment coming up every two years.

Commission members, whose appointment must be confirmed by the United States Senate, with the President designating the member who will serve as chairman, will be paid $38,000 a year.

In the opinion of a number of General Presidents of national and international unions affiliated with the Building and Construction Trades Department, there still are a number of uncertainties about the new law. Nevertheless, they regard it as a landmark start in attacking one of the most urgent problems in the nation, especially in respect to the hazards of construction work.

Will History Repeat? Of 35 Men Elected U.S. President, Twenty Served Only One Term

Most Presidents of the United States have been one-term presidents, a review of presidential successions reveals. Of the 35 men elected U.S. President, 20 have been elected to only one term. Ten enjoyed two terms, there have been no three-termers, and only one was elected to four terms. The remaining four served less than one full term each and never did stand for election.

The one-termers included John Adams, John Quincy Adams, Van Buren, Harrison, Polk, Taylor, Pierce, Buchanan, Hayes, Garfield, Cleveland, Harrison, Cleveland again, Theodore Roosevelt, Taft, Harding, Coolidge, Hoover, Truman, Kennedy and L.B. Johnson. (Cleveland won two independent single terms, was defeated between them by Harrison.)

Those serving less than one term (who succeeded to the presidency from vice-presidency): Tyler, Fillmore, Andrew Johnson and Arthur.

Two-term presidents included: Washington, Jefferson, Madison, Monroe, Jackson, Lincoln, Grant, McKinley, Wilson and Eisenhower.

The one four-termer was F. D. Roosevelt. Now, because of the 22nd constitutional amendment, more than two consecutive terms are impossible.

The next big question: where will President Nixon fit in the scheme of things when tomorrow's history is written?

Voter Drive Launched In 18-21 Age Group

A liberal coalition of youth and student groups has announced plans for a massive campaign to register millions of newly eligible young people for the 1972 elections.

The register and vote campaign will be coordinated by "Frontlash," the labor-endorsed volunteer group that helped enroll hundreds of thousands of voters in the 1968 and 1970 campaigns.

This time the key target will be the 18-21 age group, eligible to vote for the first time for federal offices under legislation passed by Congress and recently upheld by the Supreme Court.

The Plot to Kidnap Abraham Lincoln's Body

An Almost-Forgotten Sidelight of History: How Counterfeiters Sought to Obtain A Convict's Release By Stealing The Martyred President's Remains

American history can be intensely interesting. It is regrettable that so many history teachers insist on putting it across in its most uninteresting form: the names, dates and winners of countless battles and who thought up the Missouri Compromise.

While battles and political compromises have their places in history, one of the more interesting . . . almost incredible . . . aspects of our nation's past revolves around an attempt to "kidnap" Abraham Lincoln's body and hold it for ransom.

After his assassination in Ford's Theater in Washington on April 14, 1865, only five days after General Lee surrendered at Appomattox, Virginia, Lincoln's body lay in state in Washington, New York, Chicago and other cities before being interred in Oak Ridge Cemetery, Springfield, Illinois. Eventually a Lincoln Monument was built there and Lincoln's body placed in a marble sarcophagus or burial vault.

The plot to steal Lincoln's body originated with a Chicago saloon-keeper named "Big Jim" Kneally in 1876. The back room of his saloon, "The Hub," was a meeting place for criminal types, principally counterfeiters, then called "coney men." One of them, extremely skilled, named Benjamin Boyd, was missing. Ben was doing ten years in Joliet Prison. His "coney" pals missed his skilled touch as an engraver, which took a lot of the risk out of passing bogus money. In August of 1867, another counterfeiter named Jack Hughes was released from prison. He ended up in "The Hub" where he began to hatch a plot to steal Lincoln's body with Terrence Mullens, the manager of Kneally's Bar. They decided that the ransom was to be $200,000 plus the release from prison of their buddy, Ben Boyd.

Mullens and Hughes brought into their plot a man said to be "one of the biggest horse-thieves in the country." Lewis Swegles. Unfortunately for them, Swegles was actually in the employ of the U.S. Secret Service.

In mid-October they told Swegles the whole plot. The plan was to enter the Lincoln Monument after dark, open the marble sarcophagus, remove the coffin, load it onto a wagon, then head for the sand dunes of Indiana on the shore of Lake Michigan, where the shifting sands and wilderness would hide all traces until they could negotiate their demands.

The plotters decided they needed more men, so Swegles involved another government agent, Billy Brown. Hughes and Mullens brought in a mutual friend named Cornelius.

The plan was to obtain a copy of a scarce foreign newspaper, tear it in half and leave half at the Lincoln Monument as they had stolen the body. The other half was to be stuffed into a Lincoln bust overlooking the bar at "The Hub." This way Cornelius (who was to be the negotiator) could prove that he represented the kidnappers.

The date set for the grave-robbing was November 7. The day before, Swegles reported the gang's activities lock on the door to the crypt proved too tough for a burglar's jimmy, then broke a steel saw before yielding to a three-cornered file. They entered the crypt and, in a few minutes, had the lid pried off the marble vault.

But the plan for Swegles to give the password to the waiting detectives

The stocking-footed detectives raced out of the hall, around the monument and into the crypt entrance. There their lanterns revealed an empty tomb. Mullens and Hughes were already gone . . . and so was Lincoln's body!

Confusion reigned in the wooded darkness outside the monument as the detectives fanned out, searching for the grave robbers. Detectives began firing away at each other, but no one was hit. Hughes and Mullens made good their escapes on foot, abandoning Lincoln's coffin, which was recovered and returned to its crypt.

For a week the two conspirators hid out in Lodi, Illinois, before returning cautiously to Chicago. There they looked up their trusted friend, Swegles, who was ready with a wild tale of his own fantastic escape that night.

Never did the two plotters realize who Swegles was until all three were taken into custody and they went to to P. D. Tyrell, senior Secret Service agent for a three-state area around Illinois. When the gang boarded the train from Chicago to Springfield, there were seven Secret Service men riding in the car behind them. Pinkerton men were on the next train out of Chicago.

Mullens and Hughes checked into the St. Charles Hotel as soon as they reached Springfield in the early morning and went immediately to bed. Swegles slipped away to check secretly with the detective detachment in a hotel two blocks away.

A simple plan was devised to catch the grave-robbers red-handed. Secret Service men would enter the monument ahead of the ghouls, wait in hiding and pounce on them when Swegles passed them the signal, which was to be the word "wash."

Mullens sent Swegles and Hughes to the monument later that afternoon to "case the joint" while he stole an axe in case it was needed to break in the sarcophagus.

After it became dark, the plotters approached the unguarded monument carrying their tools and a big sack for Lincoln's body in case the coffin proved too heavy to carry. The pad-went away. Mullens handed Swegles a lantern and told him to stand in a corner opposite the door which Swegles needed to go out of in order to give the signal. All he could do was wait his chance. That came only after the coffin had been lifted out of the sarcophagus and was ready to be carried away. Mullens raised a lantern and checked his watch: it was "LABOR is the superior of capital and deserves much the higher consideration."

Lincoln, 1861

9:15. He turned to Swegles.

"Go get Brown and the Wagon," he said. Actually, Brown had gotten off the train en route to Springfield. He was not there, nor was the wagon he was supposed to be driving.

As Hughes and Mullens began picking up their tools, Swegles rushed out, supposedly to get Brown. Actually he ran to Memorial Hall where the group of detectives were waiting in the dark in their stocking feet. Sticking his head into the pitch-black room, he hissed: "Wash!"

prison while Swegles went free.

The events which the abortive attempt put in motion were to result in "Father Abraham" not finding a permanent resting place until September 26, 1901, when his remains were finally and safely encased in steel and concrete. Following his death in the house across Tenth Street from Ford's Theater, his remains were moved a total of four times!

The end of the story is almost as unbelievable as the plot itself. Because of faulty Illinois law, Mullens and Hughes were indicted only on a charge of stealing a coffin which belonged to the Lincoln National Memorial Association. The value of the coffin was put at $75 by the undertaker who had sold it in Washington, D.C. Hughes and Mullens received the comparatively light sentences of one year each in the state penitentiary.

They spent it in Joliet with their counterfeiter friend, Ben Boyd, whose release (and $200,000) the plot was supposed to obtain!

On-Job Injuries and Deaths Are 'Disaster' Declares Lane Kirkland

The toll of on-the-job deaths and injuries is a national disaster repeated every year, AFL-CIO Secretary-Treasurer Lane Kirkland recently told the Labor Conference of the National Safety Council.

Yet, he observed, "no disaster in history has received so little attention as the one that blights the lives of millions of families of American workers." There is little doubt, Kirkland said, that if the people "truly understood the price paid in human lives and suffering" in the workplace, they would demand quick and decisive action.

He called for immediate efforts to put greater emphasis on the saving of lives through the prevention of on-the-job accidents and occupational illnesses. And he predicted that delaying tactics of conservatives and special interest groups to head off a strong occupational health and safety bill in Congress "will not work."

Kirkland's prediction proved true as, late in the 91st Congress, a compromise bill was enacted. It was closer to the Daniels-Williams Bill labor favored than the watered-down bill the administration preferred. Passage climaxed three years' effort by the AFL-CIO. Under the law, the Secretary of Labor will establish health and safety standards which will then be enforced by an independent board.

The new safety law is scheduled to take effect this spring.

Congress also responded to rising on-the-job deaths by passing a rail safety law favored by labor.

Slowly but surely, the National Labor Relations Board is entering a new and crucial period of changes as Nixon appointees take over.

Although the board's new chairman, Nixon appointee Edward B. Miller, has been in office only a matter of months, there is a perceptible but clear change in viewpoint from that of his predecessor Frank McCulloch. On a number of occasions, Miller has dissented from his colleagues who are holdovers from the Kennedy and Johnson Democratic days.

His dissents have not been overly startling ones. But they show a man who is management-oriented and is sometimes impatient with the rulings of his fellow members who, he obviously feels, are much too favorable to the labor position. This comes through in a number of recent cases.

In National Tape Corp., of Herrin, Ill., vs. the Textile Workers Union of America, Miller disagreed with his colleagues who found the company guilty of firing workers illegally because of union activities. He held, rather, that the employer had shown legitimate cause for the discharges. In addition, he declared that he found "without merit" the majority's finding that the workers had been fired for such activity.

In United Transportation Union Local 1023 vs. the Capitol Bus Co., in Washington, D.C., he again disagreed with his colleagues who found that certain picket line language was of minor importance and not the responsibility of the union. "This rationale, in my opinion," Miller declared, "leads to condonation of picket line misconduct in many situations. . . ."

Perhaps of greater significance was Miller's dissent in a case involving a question of an employer's "freedom of speech"—that is, how far can an employer go in attacking unions and making threats during an organization drive? Slowly but surely, the NLRB has been narrowing the limits to which an employer can go, resulting in management charges that its "freedom of speech" has been violated. Miller has clearly shown sympathy for this viewpoint.

In Tommy's Spanish Foods of Fullerton, Calif., vs. Meat Cutters Local Union 551, Miller disagreed with his colleagues who found that the employer had made a number of statements about his attitude toward the union which were violative of the act. Miller, on the other hand, found these same statements "simply lawful rhetoric, which the act does not forbid."

Against this background of understanding of management problems with recalcitrant workers, is the melancholy story of the NLRB's helplessness in the face of employers who stubbornly and all too successfully use free speech and every other device to defeat organization of their workers. J. P. Stevens & Co. is not alone in these techniques.

In South Texas Chapter of Associated General Contractors of Corpus Christi vs. Laborers Local 1179, a trial examiner laid down certain "remedies" for unfair labor practices by the employer, but confessed in the same breath that the remedies were "of little value" in undoing the effects of the unfair labor practice.

His confession of futility is a classic example of NLRB helplessness to really crack down on a stubborn employer who is determined to kill unionism.

"In short," the trial examiner said, "the company will have 'won' practically even if it 'loses' legally, for the company will have enjoyed the old contract for the year in dispute whatever order may be entered or enforced."

We have, then, an NLRB which in the "real" world has been unable to devise adequate remedies against anti-union employers and, at the same time, we have a new chairman of the NLRB who already is showing his management orientation.

Instead of weakening the power of the NLRB, as management has been demanding, the evidence suggests that its hands should be strengthened in cases such as that of Stevens and the General Contractors.

Court Says Locked-Out Workers Entitled to Unemployment Benefits

An Indiana appellate court has ruled that locked-out workers are entitled to unemployment compensation benefits for the duration of the lock-out if they are "unemployed through no fault of their own."

The ruling by Indiana's Division 2 Appellate Court involves a three-month lockout in 1968 by the Clip Pattern & Foundry Co., and three other foundries against members of the Pattern Makers Association in South Bend. The companies closed their doors at the expiration of a contract.

The precedent-setting decision means that the nearly 100 members of the Pattern Makers will receive retroactive unemployment benefits amounting to tens of thousands of dollars.

Max Wright, secretary-treasurer of the Indiana AFL-CIO, explained that the locked-out workers had applied for the benefits each week, and when they were denied the benefits, they appealed the denial to the Review Board of the Indiana Employment Security Act.

Both a referee and the Review Board found that because no impasse had been reached in negotiations before the lockout, the workers were unemployed through no fault of their own and were, therefore, entitled to unemployment benefits.

The appellate court found that the evidence supported this finding because the employees had offered through the union to keep on working until a new agreement was reached. The employers, however, responded that the plants would be closed.

The court acknowledged the legal right of an employer to lock out his workers but said that "he cannot use the Employment Security Act to further his cause."

It's Not Too Late—Support Your Heart Fund!

"I am confident the men and women of the AFL-CIO will enlarge upon their previous efforts" in support of the Heart Fund—George Meany in a message supporting the 1971 Heart Fund campaign in February.

Your Heart Fund contributions enable the American Heart Association to carry on national and international projects that inform physicians of new findings in cardiovascular research that may help their heart patients.

HEART ATTACK?

DELAY COULD COST HIS LIFE

Fatal changes in heart rhythm often occur during the first few hours after heart attack. New electronic devices detect these sudden changes. New drugs can prevent and control them. Minutes are precious in getting this medical aid.

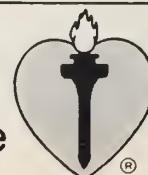

So, know the symptoms of heart attack. They vary, but here are the usual warnings:

- Prolonged, oppressive pain or unusual discomfort in the center of chest, behind the breastbone.
- Pain may radiate to the shoulder, arm, neck or jaw.
- The pain or discomfort is often accompanied by sweating. Nausea, vomiting and shortness of breath may also occur.
- Sometimes these symptoms subside and then return. Don't wait. Act immediately.

WHAT TO DO

1. Call your doctor without delay and carefully describe the symptoms.
2. If a doctor is not immediately available, get to a hospital emergency room at once.

"THE INJURY TO ONE IS THE CONCERN OF ALL"

On St. Patrick's Day Almost Everybody's A Wee Bit Irish!

FROM THE PRESIDENT'S DESK

AT the Bal Harbour meeting of the General Presidents of the 17 unions affiliated with the Building and Construction Trades Department which I recently attended, it was pointed out, in a release to the press, that no group in the nation has a greater interest in making collective bargaining work than the officers and 3.5 million members of the Building and Construction trades unions. We freely granted that there are a wide range of problems confronting the construction industry. But we also contend that such problems need long-term beneficial solutions, not stop-gap remedial schemes.

Some spokesmen in government and in industry have alleged that leaders in the building trades have been so successful in bargaining that they have increased construction workers' wages all out of proportion to other workers' wage rates. What they forget is that a factory employee can work every working day, while construction workers do not. A construction tradesman usually averages 1,200 to 1,400 hours of work annually. If his wage is the $6.39-an-hour average reported by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, his annual income of about $9,000 is not "exorbitant" as some federal officials have claimed. The construction worker may be employed in a radius of hundreds of miles. Moreover, he must be prepared to show up for work, even though the job turns out to be shut down that day.

On-site labor costs have not risen in proportion to the increased costs of land, financing and materials, all of which have skyrocketed. Yet the administration has not attempted to freeze or roll back those prices! It can be proven conclusively that wages represent less than 20 percent of the cost of residential building, less than a third of commercial construction. But despite all the prominence given this "problem" in the public press by The White House, no specific plans have been offered nor have any specific plans been rejected. The industry has been called "sick because of too rich a diet." Some miraculous doctor is obviously diagnosing an illness without examining the patient; without even asking the patient to name a single symptom! It seems as if the President's advisers are not really interested in the problems of the construction industry and the construction worker, but rather are looking for a way to divert the public's mind from the real problems of a faltering economy, a record-breaking unemployment rate, a soaring inflationary spiral and the complete failure by the administration to deliver on campaign promises of peace and prosperity! For this end they are trying to make the union tradesman the "patsy."

The President has shown his gratitude to the building tradesmen for the support they have given him in the past by reactionary moves such as suspension of Davis-Bacon which will wreak havoc on union contractors and union tradesmen throughout the country.

The Irish, and many other European nationalities who suffered hunger and privation in their native lands, brought their customs and traditions with them to America in the great 19th century flood of immigration. They literally "built the nation" with their hands, and laid the foundations of our trade union movement with their hearts and blood. Because of their immense contributions, we still honor those pioneers. This issue is dedicated to the Irishmen who helped our nation and institutions grow. Strangely enough, St. Patrick was no Irishman. Born a Briton, he was captured as a boy and sold into slavery in Ireland during the fifth century. He rose to a position of prominence in The Church and is the national apostle of Ireland. Millions with no valid claim to Eire observe "the wearing of the green" on March 17 in good humor, as The Lather does this issue.

BY THE GENERAL SECRETARY TREASURER

Labor leaders in the building trades have been attacked by conservative newspaper and television commentators because they have allegedly "extorted" excessive wages for their members from construction contractors. Despite all the alleged excessive wages, no lathers rub elbows with doctors at the Country Club and none of their wives go dashing out to the supermarket in leopardskin coats. If building tradesmen are receiving excessive wages, they must either be spending all of it on bread and meat or putting some of it in the sound old savings-and-loan!

Actually, what the building tradesman is doing is only his level best to keep up with the steady march of inflation. All workers are always one step behind the progress of rising prices. They seek to keep their families well-housed, well-fed, well-clothed and well-educated. And they are increasingly faced with the mounting problem of simply keeping them well. A recent study of incomes at the Washington, D.C., Hospital Center revealed that anesthesiologists there were earning an average of $84,810 each per year. Radiologists were averaging $68,568 apiece. Pathologists averaged $67,857 each; people who seldom, if ever, even see a patient! These are the "excessive wages" that commentators should write and talk about! These are the abuses which have caused Blue Cross health insurance premiums to zoom up 100 percent in the past few years. In the hospitals of the nation's cities, a very sick person whose condition demands a private room must pay about $100 a day. Everything in the hospital is expensive. If a sick man needs an aspirin, that aspirin is entered on his account, tabulated and printed out by a computer, and he will pay about $1 for that aspirin tablet!

Hospitals today, operating under tax shelters originally provided so they could perform charity work, now perform no charity work. At the Washington hospital mentioned previously, when a welfare patient is hospitalized, the excess of charges placed against him which will not be paid by the Welfare Department are simply charged against Blue Cross and the non-welfare patients. Health care costs have risen until they approach the magnitude of a national scandal. People are demanding action from their elected representatives. This is not something which can be handled on a personal, individual basis; action has to be taken on a national basis if working people (who are carrying the load!) are to be afforded relief.

There probably will be an investigation into health and hospital charges during this Congress under sponsorship of Senator Philip Hart of Michigan, chairman of the Anti-Trust Committee. Whatever it takes to bring health costs into reason must be achieved. If it means socialized medicine, with government-educated, government-paid physicians in government-built and government-operated hospitals . . . so be it! If it takes that to counter x-ray technicians at over $68,000 a year and doctors making $125,000 a year from people's illnesses . . . so be it! A virulent disease sometimes requires a virulent cure. Those who don't want to consult a "socialized medicine" doctor can call in a physician in private practice. But the odds are he won't still be making $125,000 a year!

Safety & Health Act In Effect April 28

Long sought by the Building and Construction Trades Department, the new Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970 will go into effect on April 28, 1971.

By that time, President Nixon must appoint an Assistant Secretary of Labor for Occupational Safety and Health and three members for the Occupational Safety and Health Review Commission. The original commission members will serve a two, a four and a six-year term and thereafter the members will serve six years, with a new appointment coming up every two years.

Commission members, whose appointment must be confirmed by the United States Senate, with the President designating the member who will serve as chairman, will be paid $38,000 a year.

In the opinion of a number of General Presidents of national and international unions affiliated with the Building and Construction Trades Department, there still are a number of uncertainties about the new law. Nevertheless, they regard it as a landmark start in attacking one of the most urgent problems in the nation, especially in respect to the hazards of construction work.

Edward P. Murphy Elected To Head Union Label Dept.

The Executive Board of the AFL-CIO Union Label & Service Trades Department has elected Edward P. (Bud) Murphy secretary-treasurer of the department to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Joseph E. Lewis. Department Pres. Richard F.

Edward P. Murphy

Walsh announced that Murphy had been elected unanimously to fill the post until the department's next convention in November, 1971.

Murphy, 54, who joined the department in 1952 and was assistant to the secretary-treasurer from 1954 until the board's action, has been manager of the annual AFL-CIO Union Industries Show for the past 20 years. Born in Cleveland, he became a business agent at age 21 for the Retail Clerks in that city. In 1941 he became a consultant to Joseph D. Keenan at the War Production Board and then served three years in the South Pacific in the U.S. Air Force.

Q. Can I get credit under Social Security for the work I do as bookkeeper-accountant in my husband's construction company? (I am a certified public accountant.)

A. No. Most family employment is not covered by Social Security, and this includes work performed by a wife in the employ of her husband. Work performed by a man for his wife, or by a minor child for his parents is also excluded from social security coverage.

Q. I have never worked under social security. My husband will be 65 in 2 months and is going to retire and collect his social security. We were wondering if I would have anything coming to me from social security.

A. If you are 65 or older when your husband's benefits start, you are eligible for a wife's benefit equal to one-half his benefit. If, for example, his monthly benefit is $100, your wife's benefit would be $50 monthly. If you are between 62 and 65, the amount of the wife's benefit will be somewhat reduced because the payments will be made to you over a longer time if you were older. For example, if you are exactly 62 when your benefits start, you would get 80 percent of the full wife's benefit. If you are under 62 when your husband starts collecting his social security, you would have to wait for your benefits unless you were caring for dependent children who were eligible for benefits based on your husband's social security record—a child under 18 or a disabled child 18 or over, whose disability began before his or her 18th birthday.

Q. My husband was killed in an accident last year after we had been married only five months. I am 52 years old and have been disabled for over a year. Is it possible for me to qualify for disabled widow's benefits?

A. Yes, since you had been married for the required 3 months and since your husband died in an accident. You also meet the condition that a widow 50 years or older must be disabled at the time of or within 7 years after her

Building Unions Defend Apprentice Training Against Charges of Racism

Allegations of discrimination on the basis of race in construction apprenticeship programs is an emotional throwback based on reckless rhetoric and political pandering, the Building and Construction Trades Department has declared.

Last year, participation of non-white apprentices in the construction industry equalled non-white participation in the adult male work force. Ten percent of the adult male work force was non-white and 10 percent of the construction apprentices also were non-white. More significantly, the past five years have seen non-white apprentices grow from 4.4 percent of all apprentices in 1966 to better than 11 percent of all apprentices entering in the first half of 1970, a statement released by the B&CT Departments Executive Council declared.

At this time non-whites are being enrolled in construction industry apprenticeship programs in a ratio exceeding the non-white enrollment in the adult male work force.

The Executive Council of the Building and Construction Trades Department stated that it "is more than satisfied that the overwhelming majority of our local unions in the skilled trades are responding to the social problems surrounding equal employment opportunity. They have responded in a meaningful and successful fashion. While the politicians and the bureaucrats have been holding press conferences, our local unions have been supporting pre-apprenticeship conferences. The sound and fury of our professional critics dims alongside the quiet rustle of healthy pay checks in young black, brown and red hands."

The enthusiastic support of the apprenticeship "Outreach" program expressed by the Building and Construction Trades Department in 1967, restated in 1969 at the department's biennial convention, has been rewarded by an influx of qualified, motivated minority youth. These young Americans have refused the artificial security of quotas and have accepted the opportunity to learn skills which will give them genuine security in an intensely competitive industry. They have rejected second-class training because they realize it leads to second-class jobs.

The report revealed that the number of minority apprentices in building trades unions increased from 2.5 percent in 1960 to 8.6 percent at the end of 1969. While the total of all apprentices increased 38.6 percent from 1950 through 1969, the number of minority apprentices jumped 364.7 percent. At the current rate of increase in minority apprentices, the ratio of minorities in building trades apprentice programs will exceed the ratio of minorities in the nation within the year. Confirming the fact that minorities are entering building trades apprenticeship programs at an accelerating rate are the figures recently made available by the Bureau of Apprenticeship and Training for the first half of 1970. During that six-month period, minorities represented more than 11 percent of all new apprentices, bringing the minority percentage of all apprentices to 9.4 percent.

During 1969, the total number of federally registered apprentices increased from 87,919 to 104,505, an increase of 18.9 percent. Minority apprentices, however, increased 37.4 percent, moving from 6,631 to 9,102 apprentices.

At the same time, the B&CT Department declared its unalterable opposition to apprentice quotas which would be imposed by proposed revisions of Title 29, Part 30, of the Code of Federal Regulations entitled "Equal Employment Opportunity in Apprenticeship."

Stating that "racial quotas, under any guise, are repugnant to all Americans," the B&CT Department declared that the proposed measure would cause future apprentice selections to be made on a racial quota system instead of on merit. It called it "an attempt at social engineering . . . a poorly disguised effort to restructure our economic society to the whims of a handful of federal mandarins."

Pointing out that statistics reveal non-white apprentices to be coming into the building trades at an accelerated rate (as detailed above,) the statement declared that the proposed revision of CFR 29.30 is unnecessary and is also undesirable, uneconomic and, most of all, unworkable. It is undesirable because it substitutes quotas for quality and works against youths with real motivation, both black and white. It suggests that well-paid, highly skilled jobs can be distributed by a lottery instead of as a reward for effort. It is uneconomic because it would flood apprentice programs with unqualified short-term drop-outs at the expense of dedicated future building craftsmen. On the other hand, 80 percent of the apprentices enrolled through Operation Outreach have remained in their training programs.

Program Totally Unworkable

Finally it would be totally unworkable. A proposed requirement that tests used for ranking candidates must be validated in nine months was termed "a mockery." Genuine validation, as the B&TC Department statement pointed out, would require comparative studies for at least five years if, indeed, such validation would be possible at all.

"The future of our skilled trades rests on apprenticeship, and the proposed regulation deals what may be a mortal blow to the National Apprenticeship system. We expect and intend to oppose it at the Labor Department, on Capitol Hill, with the administration and, if necessary, in the public press," said the statement.

"Our fight with poor regulations, however, will not deter us from continuing to strive for meaningful equality of opportunity in our apprentice programs, in our local unions and in the nation in general," the statement concluded.

The report was released by the Building and Construction Trades Department during the course of the recent meeting of the department's Executive Council in Bal Harbour, Florida.

What This Country Needs Is a Good Consumer Class Action Bill

By REP. BOB ECKHARDT
Eighth Congressional District of Texas

A man who gets stuck with a faulty $14 electric heater is mad enough to take the manufacturer to court. He may get justice there, but there will be no profit in it.

He could buy dozens of heaters for what he might wind up paying in lawyer's fees and court costs.

But the man has been done an injustice. The manufacturer could well be guilty of fraud. However, economics, not law, deprive the consumer of justice.

Say this man is the one in ten thousand who can afford to fight the case as a matter of principle. He wins his case, the manufacturer pays a judgment of $200 or so and continues to defraud the 9,999 who could not afford to sue. Also, few lawyers can afford to take a case, go through the legal preparation and spend time in court for probably no more than a $50 fee.

Something Wrong With System

There is something wrong with a system that permits a situation in which a victim of a fraud cannot get justice.

I have introduced a Consumer Class Action Bill to combat such fraud. My bill will permit persons who have been gypped by the same dealer or manufacturer to sue jointly on behalf of all who have suffered the same fate.

In other words, when the lawsuit is filed, is fought and is won, everyone who has been gypped or defrauded, not just those filing the suit, would be compensated.

Remember the case of the three drug companies convicted of fixing prices on a certain medicine over a period of 12 years. The companies then had to pay direct refunds to consumers who could show receipts for purchasing this medicine. This was a class action suit.

Ideally, the federal government should protect the consumer. But the government is slow to act and offers little relief for the consumer who has been the victim of a fraud.

Take, for instance, the Federal Trade Commission. It was created as an administrative agency to protect the consumer against unfair and deceptive trade practices. The Holland Furnace Company case is the classic example of how inadequate this protection is.

In December, 1936, the company agreed to a Federal Trade Commission consent order against certain misleading advertising claims.

Long Lapse of Time

The complaints against the company continued, but a second proceeding was not initiated by the Federal Trade Commission until 1954. Four years later another court order was issued against the company, but the company ignored this order. In 1965, 29 years after the original order against the Holland Furnace Company, the company was heavily fined for contempt of court.

During those 29 years the company had continued its operations. The

Rep. Bob Eckhardt

Federal Trade Commission had not stopped the company's fraudulent operations, nor did a few suits which were won by individual homeowners.

This illustrates the failure of the FTC to protect the consumer in such cases. It shows how a few lawsuits will not stop a large operation such as this company which was doing business in 45 states.

If one of those successful homeowner suits had come under a consumer class action law, the Holland Furnace Company would have had to pay claims to all homeowners who had been victimized by its deceptive operations. This would have involved untold thousands of dollars and certainly would have put a stop to the company's illegal methods of doing business.

The Honest Have Nothing to Fear

My Consumer Class Action Bill does not add any new laws on deceit and fraud. It allows class action suits when there has been a violation of state laws already on the books. The honest manufacturer, the honest merchant, all those complying with present law would have nothing to fear from a Consumer Class Action Law.

The only people afraid of such a law are those who are defrauding or deceiving the consumer and are getting away with it because the individual sales involve too few dollars to make legal action worthwhile.

I first introduced my bill in the last Congress. An Administration proposal was added to the bill as it worked its way through Congress. The Administration's provisions seriously weakened the bill. It limited the protection the consumer would get under my bill.

The bill did not pass in the 91st Congress. During the 92nd Congress I will be working to get my bill through Congress and get it through without the weakening provisions offered by the Administration.

The Consumer Class Action Bill will give the consumer what he has long needed; a fair break in his day-to-day dealings in the market place. This bill will protect not only the consumer, but it will also protect the honest merchant from the unfair competition of those who use deceit and fraud to get business.

Rich and Super-Rich Buy Public Offices For 'Kept' Politicians

By J. EARL FERGUSON, Editor

"Labor," the newspaper of the railroad unions, recently theorized that America may be progressing from "the land of the free and home of the brave" to "the land of the bought and home of the knave." The reason: political offices, from that of the President right on down, are being put on the auction block and sold to the highest bidder.

"Labor" pointed out that the Citizens' Research Foundation made a survey which revealed that the 1968 Presidential campaigns cost $100 million. The Foundation also surveyed political gifts of $500 or more in the 1968 campaign. It totaled $24.7 million, with $17.4 million going to Republicans, $6.1 to Democrats and the rest to others. But these on-the-record gifts are only a fraction of the total. Four-fifths of political money is hidden.

Gift of Half a Million!

Multi-millionaire Chicago insurance man Clement Stone was listed as giving $139,000 to the Republicans. But Stone himself said he gave more than half a million dollars to Nixon's 1968 campaign manager, plus $100,000 more to various other GOP candidates. In 1970, Stone was even more exact; he said he gave $812,659 to about 50 candidates.

Stone says he doesn't want anything for his money. But other wealthy Republican backers have managed to buy positions with their donations. Arthur Watson, who gave $49,000, Kingdon Gould, Jr., who gave $22,000; John Pritzlaff, Jr., who gave $22,000; Vincent de Roulet, who gave $44,500 and J. Fife Symington, who gave $5,500, all became U.S. Ambassadors!

William J. Casey gave $17,750 to the Republicans. He became Chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

But what is bought when the Mellon (Gulf Oil) family gives the GOP $248,000? Or when the Rockefeller family (Standard Oil) gives $118,500? Or the Pew family (Sun Oil) gives $183,000? Or Jack Dreyfus, Jr., (mutual funds) gives $76,000 to the GOP? (He also gave $63,000 to the Democrats.)

Politicians Sell Themselves!

There is, the "Labor" editorial indicates, every evidence that the rich-and super-rich are actually buying candidates; candidates who will, for either love or money, (or both), vote the way the rich-and-super-rich want them to vote.

There are three ways to defeat this move to put the highest offices of the nation . . . including The Presidency . . . up for sale. One is to back legislation which will limit the amount which can be spent by candidates. Last year Congress passed a law limiting the amount which candidates can spend on radio and television (about half of all campaign spending.)

President Nixon vetoed the bill, declaring it "wasn't good enough."

Every legislator in Washington should be made to stand up and be counted on this vital issue. Those who oppose limitation on campaign spending leave themselves open to the allegation that they want money . . . not merit . . . to rule our political life. The legislator who cannot be bought certainly will want to limit the amount of money which can be spent in any candidate's behalf.

The second action which can be taken is for every working man and woman, whose interests are certainly not parallel to those of the rich-and-super-rich, to donate to their favorite candidates by contributing to the AFL-CIO Committee on Political Education (COPE.) Of course, working men and women cannot come up with $139,000 each. But if 139,000 men and women come up with $1 each, they have matched the contribution of at least one of the rich-and-super-rich! And if they would be wise enough to invest $2 each in better legislators, they would out-do the combined efforts of many of the rich-and-super-rich.

Third Action Is Most Important

The third action is perhaps the most important of all. Here is where the working man and woman have the advantage: voting! If the working men and women will only register so they CAN vote, then go to the polls on election day and VOTE for candidates who will legislate for them instead of for the rich-and-super-rich, the battle for liberalism would be won! It wouldn't make any difference how many millions of dollars were spent buying candidates to favor the rich-and-super-rich: if they can't get elected, they can't legislate favorably for their rich masters.

And, so far, there are a lot more working men and women than there are rich-and-super-rich in the U.S.A.!

"Labor" newspaper hit it on the head: politicians who try to block effective curbs on political spending reveal that they want to make America "not the land of the free and the home of the brave, but the land of the bought and the home of the knave."

So tell your Representative and Senators in Washington that you want them to support legislation limiting campaign expenditures. Secondly, give generously to COPE so the candidates who can't be bought by the rich-and-super-rich can carry on their campaigns. Thirdly, register so you can vote . . . then be sure to vote for liberal candidates.

Don't Trust Your Telephone! Survey Reveals Wiretap 'Bugging' to Be Widespread Practice

A series of recent articles in a Washington (D.C.) newspaper has cast new light on wiretapping and electronic bugging in the U.S.

American Telephone & Telegraph last year received 5,200 requests from customers to have their phones checked for "taps," the articles reported. Also, about two senators a month request similar checks of their lines. J. Edgar Hoover, the FBI chief, was said to have his home phone checked every two months.

The newspaper said that about 25 per cent of the senators, congressmen, lawyers, businessmen and journalists queried replied they were either convinced or afraid their phones were tapped.

Many wiretapping and bugging targets, the articles continued, are government officials, spouses in divorce cases, lobbyists and businessmen. The latter may order snooping or be snooped upon to uncover trade secrets, legislative strategy of rivals, or just to "get something" on someone that can be used to commercial advantage.

Buggers "Look for Dirt!"

An example of the latter cited by the newspaper in the nation's capital was the testimony of an electronics expert that he was offered $250 a day by a drug firm official to "bug" a Food and Drug Administration aide. He wanted "dirt" (scandalous material) on the man to make him "play ball" and to help the drug firm win FDA approval for a product.

Although wiretapping and bugging have been illegal without a court order or permission of the U.S. Attorney General since 1968, about 52 government agencies continue to "monitor" their own telephone lines to eavesdrop on conversations, the newspaper account declared.

One agency, the Internal Revenue Service, was claimed to be maintaining a padlocked basement containing about $100,000 in bugging equipment.

Three other agencies, the Central Intelligence Agency, the National Security Agency and the Army Intelligence Corps were specifically linked to the use of eavesdropping equipment on a "sporadic" basis in the exposé.

But it was the FBI which came under the sharpest scrutiny in the articles as possibly the widest user of illegal wiretaps and bugs. Quoting what it described as "a well-qualified source who requested anonymity," the newspaper alleged that the FBI leases 450 lines that can be used for tapping and bugging and alluded to instances involving their use.

It additionally charged that a former FBI soundman said that he serviced 200 surveillance lines in the 1960s at about the same time that Hoover listed less than 100 in a report to Congress on the number of wiretaps being made by his agency.

U.S. Court Affirms Rights of Workers to Respect Picket Lines

The fourth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond, Va., has reaffirmed the right of non-striking employees to refuse to cross picket lines as a matter of principle.

The court ordered the Union Carbide Corp. to offer reinstatement with full back pay to two employees who would not cross a Machinists' picket line at a Union Carbide plant during a strike three years ago.

The court's opinion noted that it is well established that non-striking employees who refuse on principle to cross a picket line have joined the strikers in a common cause and have, in effect become strikers.

And the court's opinion goes on to reaffirm this right:

"It cannot be denied that respect for the integrity of the picket line may well be the source of strength for the whole collective bargaining process in which every union member has a legitimate and protected economic interest. And any assistance by a union member to a labor organization in the collective bargaining process is for mutual aid or protection of the nonstriking unionist even though he has no immediate stake in the labor dispute."

The circuit court's ruling upheld an order of the National Labor Relations Board which said Union Carbide violated the Taft-Hartley Act by refusing to rehire the two men who respected picket lines.

The court, however, would not enforce the NLRB order for a third employee because it found that his refusal to cross the picket line was based solely on fear.

"One who is afraid to cross a picket line by reason of physical fear makes no common cause, contributes

Helpful Hints and Handy Measures

If you're ever caught without your ruler and need to take measurements, remember these substitutes:

It is about $\frac{5}{8}$ of an inch from the root of your thumbnail to the tip of your thumb.

From the tip of your index finger to your elbow "funnybone" is almost exactly 18 inches.

When you stretch your arms out, side to side, they measure about .68 inches from fingertips to fingertips.

A normal step is 24 inches. (But avoid getting self-conscious when you test this one out; you'll unconsciously step longer!)

A size 10 shoe is approximately 12 inches long.

Here are other handy figures: The area of a circle is .79 times the diameter of the circle squared. And the volume of a cylinder is figured the same way; just multiply the product by the length of the cylinder.

For practical purposes, a pint is a pound. Water weighs slightly over a pound per pint and liquids which float on water will weigh right at or just under a pound per pint.

To obtain pipe sizes, measure the outside and subtract $\frac{5}{16}$. The result will either be the pipe size exactly or so close that the size couldn't be confused with another.

nothing to the mutual aid or protection and does not act on principle," the court said.

Union Carbide had argued that it had not violated the law because it had discharged to three employees to prevent a large scale defection of workers to the strike.

But the court said the two employees who, as a matter of principle, refused to cross the line were entitled to the same consideration as strikers with regard to discharge and replacement.

"They may not be discharged, but may be replaced by workers hired as permanent replacements during the strike in order to continue operations," the court ruled.

Senator Seeks Increase In Personal Tax Credit

Indiana Senator Vance Hartke has introduced legislation to increase the individual tax exemption from $750 to $1,000. Hartke's bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code would become effective in 1973.

The senior Indiana Senator, a ranking member of the tax-writing Senate Finance Committee, said that current exemption is "grossly inadequate." Since the exemption was set 23 years ago at $600, he noted, "the cost of living has risen by 65.9 percent.

"Thus, for a family of four, the personal exemption should be raised to $3,980 or $994 per person to provide the same purchasing power as the $2,400 or $600 per person provided in 1948."

Hartke's proposal would exempt a family of four from Federal income taxation until their adjusted gross income exceeded $4,000.

He noted that the most common objection to the bill is that it would decrease Federal revenue out of proportion to the social gain to be achieved.

But resultant increase in purchasing power, he said, will have the effect of increasing tax revenues. "It has been estimated that personal expenditures represent over 60 percent of the gross national product. Thus, when these additional funds are in consumer hands, the incomes and profits of small businessmen will be increased, thereby allowing the Treasury to recoup its initial loss," he said.

Peace Corps Seeking Lathers to Send to Undeveloped Nations

The Peace Corps is on a nationwide talent search for skilled union craftsmen, including lathers, to serve a two-year hitch overseas teaching their trade to workers of undeveloped nations.

The recruiting drive, which has the full backing of the AFL-CIO, is aimed primarily at enrolling craftsmen from the building trades.

Peace Corps Director Joseph H. Blatchford said that openings high on the recruitment list are for a wide range of skilled trades: lathers, carpenters, operating engineers, electricians, masons, welders, heavy equipment mechanics, machinists, tool and die makers, plumbers and experienced teachers.

Building a school in Tunisia

S. Frank Raftery, Vice President, AFL-CIO, and General President of the Painters Union, was recently appointed by President Nixon to represent labor on the Peace Corps' National Advisory Council.

Raftery will work with Council Chairman Neil Armstrong, the former astronaut, to co-ordinate the labor movement's participation in the recruitment drive.

Blatchford explained that the Peace Corps is appealing mainly to the idealism of skilled workers. For these workers, "the experience should be richly rewarding," he added.

"Assignments will be to teach skills to others, to provide technical support, to be a key link in a growing chain of human development overseas," Blatchford declared.

A worker assigned to a non-English speaking country receives 12 weeks of concentrated language training

An Invitation To Serve

The Peace Corps is now seeking a limited number of lathers to serve as instructors and provide technical support to a number of Peace Corps programs across the developing world.

Peru desperately needs journeymen lathers to provide the technical skills necessary to train local workers faced with the tremendous job of rebuilding much of the nation ravaged by last summer's violent earthquake.

In Ecuador, for example, a Peace Corps lather is needed to train instructors for a new vocational school in Guayaquil.

Jamaica will soon be calling for experienced lathers to work in well-equipped centers training unemployed adults as apprentice lathers.

No college background is required for these and other similar overseas assignments. The Peace Corps pays all training, travel and modest but comfortable living expenses. You can receive up to $5,000 readjustment allowance after two years of service if both husband and wife qualify as Peace Corps Volunteers.

If retired, your social security and pension payments are banked here in the U.S. for you, plus the $75 to $150 a month savings allowance which Peace Corps pays.

from Peace Corps before embarking.

In some cases, a Peace Corpsman may take his family along. If he has children, Peace Corps will make provision for their schooling and added living allowances for their support. However, the Peace Corps permits no more than four children on a tour.

The number of countries requesting the services of skilled workers is growing. Blatchford reported. These developing nations are in Latin America, Africa and Asia.

Countries now calling for lathers include Ecuador, Jamaica, and Peru. For more information read "An Invitation to Serve" in the next column.

Social Security

husband dies. You should contact your social security office immediately.

Q. I hire a lady to help with my housework one day each week. Since I pay her only $10 per day, do I have to pay social security tax on this money?

A. Yes. Any wages for domestic employees amounting to $50 or more in a calendar quarter must be reported to Internal Revenue Service and must have the social security tax paid on them by the employer. You may contact either your local social security office or Internal Revenue Service for more information about this.

Q. Would I lose my social security widow's benefits if I should remarry? I am 62 but expect a man I like to propose very soon.

A. If you are 60 or older, your benefits will continue even if you remarry, but the amount may change. If your new husband is not a social security beneficiary, you will collect a monthly payment equal to one-half of your deceased husband's retirement benefit. If your new husband is a social security beneficiary receiving retirement or disability benefits, you will get either the wife's benefit on his record, or an adjusted widow's benefit, whichever benefit is larger.

"THE INJURY TO ONE IS THE CONCERN OF ALL"

... And A Happy Easter To You, Too!

FROM THE PRESIDENT'S DESK

On March 29, President Nixon issued a proclamation revoking his previous February 23 proclamation which had suspended application of the Davis-Bacon Law, requiring contractors on federal or federally-assisted construction projects to pay the prevailing wages in the area of construction.

It may appear unusual for the President to issue a proclamation of such importance, with such far-reaching effects, and about a month later, revoke it. What happened was that his ill-advised action was violently and unanimously opposed, not only by construction unions, but by contractors, associations and even state governments, both Democratic and Republican. His attempts to influence the operation of similar state legislation . . . "Little Davis-Bacons" . . . were in vain.

The General Presidents of the construction craft unions have been in very close contact with the situation. Our meetings have been long and intense. It was in no small measure because of our unanimous action that the suspension of Davis-Bacon was revoked.

At the same time he revoked his suspension of the Davis-Bacon Act, Pres. Nixon established a form of wage and price control when he set up the Construction Industry Stabilization Committee. Our position has not changed; we still believe his action in establishing such controls in the construction field alone is unfair. But his proclamation now has become the law of the land and we have no alternative but to comply with it. Because this committee's operation will vitally affect the welfare of our members for an indefinite period of time we are reprinting the full text of the President's proclamation below. We will also advise of any changes which may occur in the future.

THE WHITE HOUSE

EXECUTIVE ORDER

PROVIDING FOR THE STABILIZATION OF WAGES AND PRICES IN THE CONSTRUCTION INDUSTRY

WHEREAS, the stabilization of wages and prices in the construction industry is essential to the maintenance of a strong national economy; and

WHEREAS, wages and prices in the construction industry have tended in recent years to increase at a rate greater than that for the economy as a whole; and

WHEREAS, the Congress has expressed its concern over the unrestrained rise in wages and prices through the enactment of the Economic Stabilization Act of 1970 (84 Stat. 799 as amended); and

WHEREAS, it was necessary to suspend the prevailing rate provisions of the Davis-Bacon Act in order to assist in alleviating the inflationary spiral of wages and prices in the construction industry, which suspension is no longer required due to the establishment of an equitable stabilization plan under this order; and

WHEREAS, the national leaders of labor and management in the construction industry have indicated, since the suspension of the Davis-Bacon Act, that under such an order they will participate with the Government in fair measures to achieve greater wage and price stability; but are unable to agree on any voluntary arrangement; and

WHEREAS, stabilization of wages and prices is most effectively achieved when accompanied by positive action of labor and management; and

WHEREAS, this order is required to establish an arrangement for the application of general criteria by an operating structure with a minimum of Government involvement and sanctions within which labor and management may act to effectuate the stabilization of wages and prices consistent with and in furtherance of effective collective bargaining in the industry.

NOW, THEREFORE, by virtue of the authority vested in me by the Economic Stabilization Act of 1970 (84 Stat. 799 as amended) and as President of the United States, it is ordered as follows:

Section 1(a). A Construction Industry Stabilization Committee (hereafter referred to as "Committee") is hereby established to assure general conformance of any increase in any wage or salary in the construction industry to the provisions of this order.

(b) The Committee shall be composed of twelve mem-

Easter is observed universally with everything from a new hat to church attendance. But what is it and from where did it come? Easter is the principal Church festival, out-ranking even Christmas, and marks the Resurrection. When Christians first set out to convert heathens, they discovered a pagan spring festival devoted to the Anglo-Saxon goddess Eostre. So they "converted" that festival, as they also converted the mid-winter Roman festival of Saturnalia to Christmas. Easter is "a moveable feast," (not fixed as is Christmas on Dec. 25). It comes on the first Sunday after the full moon which comes on or next after the vernal equinox (when the sun crosses the equator and the days and nights are of equal length). It can fall anywhere from March 22 to April 25, inclusive. All of which is not very urgent to the cute youngster admiring the rabbit on our cover. Happy Easter!

BY THE GENERAL SECRETARY TREASURER

The nation's new Occupational Health and Safety Act will go into effect on April 28. It is another victory on behalf of the working men and women of the nation by organized labor. It was organized labor, almost alone, which brought about passage of this act. We may expect it to materially reduce the tragic annual toll of industrial deaths, injuries and occupationally-related illnesses. Organized labor must see to it that the administration of the new law is carried forward with the vigor due any measure of such life-and-death importance.

While deaths and injuries on the job are numerous enough now to warrant national action and concern, workers today may be thankful they are not employed in the perilous periods when their fathers and grandfathers worked. Between 1912 and 1969, accidental work deaths per 100,000 population were reduced 67 percent; from 21 to 7. In 1912, an estimated 18,000 to 21,000 workers' lives were lost while the work force was producing $1 billion of gross national product. In 1969, in a work force double the size and producing more than eight times as much, there were only 14,200 work deaths. The purpose of the new legislation is to reduce this accidental death figure additionally and to reduce the numbers of deaths due to occupational illness brought on by work-related activities. Of those 14,200 who died accidentally on the job in 1969, 2,800 were construction workers. This is a disproportionate number when it is considered there were only 4 million building tradesmen out of the total work force of about 79 million. About 3,200 of all accidental work deaths reported involved motor vehicles of all sorts, principally trucks and automobiles.

The construction industry has a reasonably good record insofar as efforts to hold the line against on-the-job injuries and deaths are concerned. In the two decades between 1950 and 1969, the death rate in construction decreased slightly while employment increased by one-third. The safest job category in the nation is in the auto industry, highly mechanized, where the frequency rate of accidents per million man-hours is lowest; 1.67. The average of 42 categories is 8.08. Construction stands at 14.07, while the riskiest work of all is underground coal mining, where the accident rate is a tragic 31.87.

Organized labor has been greatly responsible for the increase of job safety legislation. Labor history is full of instances where workers have been saved from dismemberment, slow poisoning, factory fires and other catastrophes because organized labor took the fight into state legislatures and gained victory after victory. Indirectly, labor won again when it succeeded in having workmen's compensation acts enacted in the several states. After that, industry itself took up the crusade for safety, because unsafe conditions brought on accidents and deaths, which in turn increased the costs of industrial compensation. Now business and industry had a real stake in making safety-on-the-job popular!

Still another example of how your union dues, a very modest investment, work to bring you some of "the good life."

Earl Ferguson

Open Invitation To Anti-Unionists

Commenting on President Nixon's suspension of the Davis-Bacon Law, AFL-CIO President George Meany said:

"It is an open invitation to unscrupulous employers to exploit workers by competitive undermining of fair wages and labor standards; an action unworthy of the federal government. We consider it unfair. We resent it. We think construction workers do not deserve to be treated in an arbitrary, one-sided fashion."

Major Producer Announces Increase in Gypsum Board

A price increase of 5 percent on gypsum wallboard has been announced by the Georgia-Pacific Corporation's gypsum division. There was a previous increase last January but the price is still below that of three years ago, a company spokesman declared.

Don't be put in this position! Tear out and save for future reference the roster of Senators and Representatives printed on pages 16 and 17 of this month's issue. The best way to either protest or promote legislation is a personal letter to your Senators and the Representative from your Congressional district!

'Why, Thank You!'

Irresponsible Federal Actions Seen Hurtful Of Minorities' Cause

Donald Slaiman, head of the AFL-CIO's Department of Civil Rights, has declared that the best way for the federal government to help minority race members to prosper is to initiate programs leading to a healthy economy and full employment, adequate housing, education aid and a more effective manpower policy plus the continuing job of reducing discrimination.

Slaiman said the "Philadelphia Plan" was failing, in contrast to the continuing progress of "Operation Outreach" wherein unions are seeking to enroll minority members in apprenticeship programs without lowering standards of skills or harming conditions of workers already employed in the industry.

He said the government was "irresponsible" in promising large numbers of jobs to minority members without providing either the jobs or the means of acquiring skills to enter the construction industry.

Since the examination was confined to receipts and disbursements, amounts due from local unions or other sources, and any unpaid bills, for services and supplies, were not considered in the compilation of this report.

In our opinion, subject to the above comments, the accompanying balance sheet and operating statement present fairly the financial position of the Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers International Union at December 31, 1970 and the results of its operations for the year then ended on a cash basis consistent with that of the preceding year.

Yours very truly,

FROM THE GENERAL PRESIDENT

bers appointed by the Secretary of Labor and selected as follows: four of the members shall be representative of labor organizations in the construction industry; four of the members shall be representative of employers in the construction industry; and four of the members shall be representative of the public. The Secretary of Labor shall appoint one of the public members as chairman of the committee.

Section 2. Associations of contractors and national and international unions shall jointly establish craft dispute boards (hereinafter referred to as "boards") to determine whether wages and salaries are acceptable in accordance with the criteria established in section 6. Each board shall be composed of appropriate labor and management representatives.

Section 3(a). It shall be the responsibility of each board, in relation to the craft or branch over which it has jurisdiction, to provide advice and assistance in an effort to resolve any unresolved collective bargaining disputes involving wages and salaries and to promptly examine every collective bargaining agreement negotiated on or after the date of this order and to determine, in accordance with the criteria established in section 6, whether wage and salary increases in the agreement are acceptable and may thus be approved. The board shall make determinations within a reasonable time and shall notify the parties and the Committee of action taken. When it is determined by the board that a wage or salary increase is not acceptable, the board shall also notify the Secretary of Labor.

(b) Each board shall also have the authority to examine collective bargaining agreements negotiated prior to the date of this order which contain wage or salary increases scheduled to take effect on or after such date to determine whether any increase is unreasonably inconsistent with the criteria established in section 6.

Section 4(a). Upon receipt of notification by a board that it has found a wage or salary increase acceptable, the Committee shall have fifteen days in which to determine whether it will assume jurisdiction over the matter. If the Committee does not determine within that time, and so notify the parties and the board, that it will assume jurisdiction, the board's determination will be deemed final and the increase may take effect. If the Committee determines that it will assume jurisdiction it shall be a violation of this order to implement the increase unless and until the Committee affirms the boards' initial determination. The Committee shall notify the parties, the board and the Secretary of Labor of its final action.

(b) The Committee is also authorized, upon its own motion, if a board has not yet reported or an appropriate board has not been established, to review any proposed wage or salary increase to determine its acceptability.

(c) Unless and until an increase in wage or salary has been approved in accordance with the provisions of sections 3(a) and 4 of this order, it shall be a violation of this order to put such wage or salary increase into effect.

Section 5. Upon a determination by a board or the Committee that a proposed wage or salary increase is not acceptable and certification of that determination by the Secretary of Labor, the following actions shall be taken:

(a) In implementing the provisions of the Davis-Bacon Act of March 3, 1931 (46 Stat. 1494, as amended) and related statutes the provisions of which are dependent upon determinations by the Secretary of Labor under the Davis-Bacon Act, and including state statutes or laws requiring similar wage standards, the Secretary of Labor and all states shall not take into consideration any wage or salary increase in excess of that found to be acceptable in making determinations under that Act and related statutes.

(b) In order to assure that unacceptable wage rates shall not be utilized in Federal or federally-related construction, the heads of all Federal departments and agencies, subject to the direction and coordination of the Secretary of Labor:

(1) shall review all plans for construction and financial assistance for construction in localities in which wage or salary increases have been certified by the Secretary of Labor to be unacceptable and shall, on the basis of that review, determine whether such plans can be approved or continued; and

(2) shall review current and prospective construction contracts for Federal construction and for construction on projects receiving Federal financial assistance in the area affected by a certification by the Secretary of Labor and shall on the basis of such review, determine whether such contracts can be awarded or continued.

(c) The Committee and the boards shall make public their determinations, specifying the craft and area affected and the wages or salaries deemed unacceptable.

(d) Any other action authorized by law to carry out the purposes and policy of this order shall be available to the Secretary of Labor to assure the stabilization of wages and prices in the construction industry.

Section 6. The following criteria shall be applied in determining whether any wage or salary increase is acceptable;

(a) Acceptable economic adjustments in labor contracts negotiated on or after the date of this order will be those normally considered supportable by productivity improvement and cost of living trends, but not in excess of the average of the median increases in wages and benefits over the life of the contract negotiated in major construction settlements in the period 1961 to 1968.

(b) Equity adjustments in labor contracts negotiated on or after the date of this order may, where carefully identified, be considered over the life of the contract to restore traditional relationships among crafts in a single locality and within the same craft in surrounding localities.

Section 7. The parties to a labor contract negotiated in the construction industry shall promptly submit that contract to the appropriate board or boards. Where there is no appropriate board to consider the acceptability of a proposed wage or salary increase, the affected national or international union, and the affected association of contractors shall promptly submit that contract to the Committee.

Section 8. The Interagency Committee on Construction (hereinafter referred to as "Interagency Committee"), is hereby established to develop criteria for the determination of acceptable prices in construction contracts as well as criteria for acceptable compensation, including bonuses, stock options and the like. Officers and employees of Federal departments and agencies shall be designated to serve as members of the Interagency Committee by the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development who shall also designate its chairman. The Interagency Committee shall consult with the Secretary of Labor, with major Government procurement agencies and with the Committee in developing such criteria and concerning the application of such criteria. Until criteria have been developed and applied and prices and compensation are determined to be unacceptable, prices, and compensation shall not be deemed in violation of this order.

Section 9. In the conduct of every Federal or federally-assisted construction project or program the affected Federal agency shall assure the conformance of such project or program with the criteria established in section 8.

Section 10. The Committee and the Interagency Committee, subject to approval by the Secretary of Labor, and the Secretary of Labor are authorized to issue such rules and regulations as may be necessary to provide for the expeditious and effective conduct of their responsibilities under this order and to effectuate its purposes. Such authority of the Committee under this section shall include the authority to issue such rules and regulations as may be necessary to assure the effective operation of any board which may be established under this order, and to provide for the resolution of impasses within any board.

Section 11(a). 'Philly Plan' Extended To Private Building by U.S. Labor Department

The "Philadelphia Plan" is being extended to private construction activities of federal contractors in that area, according to Assistant Secretary of Labor Arthur Fletcher.

Contractors holding federal contracts will be required to make the same "good faith" effort to high ratios of minority workers in certain construction trades while engaged on private construction. The trades affected are iron workers, plumbers and pipefitters, sheet metal workers, electricians and elevator constructors.

According to a Labor Department spokesman, "the firm policy of the Department remains that of a 'home-town solution' negotiated among members of the minority community, the unions and the contractors. There are now about 20 such programs in effect. In Philadelphia, the negotiation on behalf of the minority is carried on by an organization known as the Philadelphia Urban Coalition.

"THE INJURY TO ONE IS THE CONCERN OF ALL"

Meany Opens Legislative Conference

FROM THE PRESIDENT'S DESK

The success secret of the labor movement is united action. Recognizing this, union lathers should apply that principle to their own welfare by joining the LIU General Pension Plan. If young men starting out in life could only realize fully how important the development of a top-notch pension system will some day be to them and their families! The LIU General Pension Plan, established just eight years ago, already is paying monthly benefits to 103 members or beneficiaries on normal retirement at 65, and 19 on early retirement at 55. Eleven more members are being paid monthly benefits on disability retirements, and 14 beneficiaries have received death benefits because participants died before retirement.

Social Security payments are not enough for a retired couple to live on in comfort; they should have something added. What can a working-man do? To be effective, retirement annuity insurance should be bought early in life, just when children are being raised and educated. A man's wages will go just so far and no farther! The best answer is: union-negotiated pensions. If your local is not among the 108 local unions participating in the General Pension Fund, bring it up at your next union meeting under "Good and Welfare." The more participation we can achieve in the pension system, the more your benefits can be liberalized.

Your pension system is truly "a bargain"; there are no dividends paid to stockholders, no high-paid executives, administrative and overhead expenses are minimal and participation is selective with no high-risk occupations involved. In addition, it is a "portable pension." If you move from one local where the pension plan is in effect to another local where it is also in effect, you don't lose a cent. This is not true where individual plans operate. Members can never lose contributory payments. Payments are not "tossed into a pot"; they are credited to your personal account. Even if you should leave the trade, your interest is protected!

This is how it works: your local union negotiates with the employer(s) to participate in the plan. Employer(s) then contribute a minimum of 10¢ for every hour each employee works. More can be negotiated in 5¢ increments. For every 1,000 hours you work, the first 10¢ buys you $1.50 in benefits. Each additional 5¢ buys 90¢ in added benefits. Thus a contribution of 15¢ buys $2.40 per 1,000 hours. There are some local unions which have negotiated as much as 55¢ per hour. A man in this local would be entitled to $9.60 per thousand hours. Assuming a young man 20 years old would only average 1,000 hours per year (which is only 6 months out of each year) he would be entitled to a pension benefit at retirement age of $432 per month. (This computation is based on today's benefits. However, benefits continue to grow as the plan grows, so the example above has a potential far greater than that shown. We would also hope that a man would have the opportunity to work more than six months a year. At an average of nine months per year, the normal retirement for the example above would be increased to $648 per month). This would be a welcome addition to anyone's social security benefits!

The mission of a labor union is to benefit its members. As your International President, it is my job to give leadership and direction to that mission. With united action, you members can make your later years happier ones and provide economic protection to your loved ones through participation in the pension plan which has been established for you. I have only briefly indicated your benefits and how the Pension Plan operates. In the future we intend to explain the plan more fully in order to achieve wider participation so more people may benefit . . . and to a greater degree. You now have more than $2,000,000 invested in your behalf, earning dividends for you. But you have to say "I want my share!" through your local's participation. The time to act is now!

More than 4,000 building tradesmen from 17 crafts attended the 16th Legislative Conference of the AFL-CIO Building and Construction Trades Department in Washington, D.C., April 19-22. Pres. Nixon turned down an invitation to speak but, instead, invited the 17 Presidents to the White House. Meeting participants engaged in four days of concentrated activity. Included were attendance at speeches by (among others) New York Governor Nelson Rockefeller, House Majority Leader Hale Boggs, House Labor Committee Chairman Carl Perkins, BCTD General Counsel Louis Sherman and Senate Labor Committee Chairman Harrison Williams. Senator Hubert Humphrey was given an Honorary Membership in the LIU at the Lathers' luncheon. Since the complete report of activities was not available at presstime, an account of the conclave will be printed in the next issue.

BY THE GENERAL SECRETARY TREASURER

In his State of the Union message to Congress earlier this year, President Nixon unveiled his proposal to reorganize the Executive Branch of the government. At the present time there are 12 Departments, each headed by a Secretary, in the Cabinet. The Departments are: State, Treasury, Defense, Attorney General, Postmaster General, Interior, Agriculture, Commerce, Labor, Health, Education and Welfare, Housing and Urban Development, and Transportation. President Nixon's proposal would abolish seven of these cabinet posts and create four new ones. The new ones would be the Departments of Economic Affairs, Human Resources, Natural Resources, and Community Development. Lumped into these four categories would be the present Departments of Labor, Agriculture, Transportation, Commerce, Health, Education and Welfare, Interior, and Housing and Urban Development. Presumably he would not change the Departments of State, Treasury, Defense and Attorney General. The Postmaster General is scheduled to disappear as a cabinet officer under the postal reorganization act which has passed Congress.

Such a reorganization plan would dismember the Labor Department and parcel out its functions to the proposed Department of Economic Affairs and the Department of Human Resources.

The struggle to establish a government department to speak in councils for working people began in 1868, a scant three years after the Civil War, which spelled the end of slavery. William Sylvis, head of the new National Labor Union, urged Congress to establish a Department of Labor. Nothing was done. Fifteen years later, Terence Powderly of the Knights of Labor again urged it, but Congress responded only with a Bureau of Labor in the Department of Interior on a budget "not to exceed $25,000 annually." In 1888 a Department of Labor was actually established, but did not have cabinet rank. In 1903, Theodore Roosevelt's administration established a Department of Commerce and Labor, but Labor again was only a bureau. When he became president of the American Federation of Labor, Samuel Gompers was largely responsible for causing establishment of a proper Labor Department. On March 4, 1913, Pres. William H. Taft (a Republican) signed legislation establishing a Labor Department designed to "foster, promote and develop the welfare of the wage earners . . . improve their working conditions and advance their opportunities for profitable employment."

Now, 68 years later, Pres. Nixon proposes to roll back the clock and plow under the department which has for so long been the spokesman for working people. When he assumed office in 1948, Secretary of Labor Maurice J. Tobin, former Governor of Massachusetts, declared: "All labor functions (of the government) should, as far as practicable, be in the Department of Labor." He was fully supported in this view by the Commission on Reorganization of the Executive Branch of the Government, headed by ex-President Herbert Hoover who was a Republican, (like Taft who established it and Nixon who would dis-establish it!) The AFL-CIO Executive Council has been sharply critical of the proposal, and has suggested that "consolidation of many diverse existing programs into four sprawling catch-all departments is far more likely to produce administrative monstrosities than efficiency."

It is not very likely that Pres. Nixon's trial balloon will even get off the ground. But his proposal to dilute the Department of Labor is significant in one way: it indicates the direction the wind is blowing in the Nixon Administration. It should provide more than just a hint to thinking men and women of the nation's work force on how to vote on November 7, 1972.

Building Unions Join Wage Curb Board But Reluctantly

By HARRY CONN
Press Associates, Inc.

AFL-CIO building trades unions, on advice of their own counsels, have agreed to participate in the Nixon Administration's program for "stabilization of wages and prices" in the construction industry.

The AFL-CIO Building and Construction Trades Department, obviously unhappy with the program, announced that the attorneys have concluded "there is no reasonable legal basis upon which effectively to attack the Executive Order on its face." Authority for the President's action lies in the standby powers given to him by Congress to implement wage, price and rent controls at his discretion. The authority expired March 31, but Congress extended it until June 1, 1971.

In the House, Rep. Henry S. Reuss (D-Wisc.) sought to attach an amendment which would have prohibited the President from using his authority for only one industry.

"To allow action otherwise would be to pick on one group and let everything else that they have to buy go uncontrolled, by asking that they be the fall guys for the entire industry," he said. Reuss' move lost 143 to 183.

In their report to 17 international union presidents in the construction industry, the attorneys also advised that the legal departments of the unions "keep under review rules and regulations issued pursuant to the Executive Order and the actual cases decided thereunder so as to determine whether litigation should be maintained in the future."

Immediately after the Building Trades Department issued its statement, Secretary of Labor James D. Hodgson announced the makeup of the tripartite Construction Industry Stabilization Committee under the chairmanship of John Dunlop, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, Harvard University.

The labor members are Operating Engineers' President Hunter P. Wharton, Painters' President S. Frank Raftery, Ironworkers' President John H. Lyons and IBEW President Charles H. Pillard. Alternates are Carpenters' Vice President William Sidell and Plumbers' Assistant General President Martin J. Ward.

Following the first meeting of the committee, which also has four Government and four public members, Dunlop met with reporters and said they had dealt "mainly with organizational matters."

He said that the committee had been in touch with each of the major sectors in the construction industry to determine if they were setting up their particular craft or branch boards.

Under the Executive Order issued by the President, these craft boards will make the initial determination if wages go beyond the guidelines set by the Administration.

Dunlop pointed out that the craft boards are non-governmental, made up of associations of contractors and national or international unions. They are not financed by the government as is the overall review committee.

At this time, he said, the committee was unable to say how many craft boards will be set up but that if any industry or craft declined to set up a board his own committee would review the wages for that industry.

Dunlop spent most of his time not answering questions, saying:

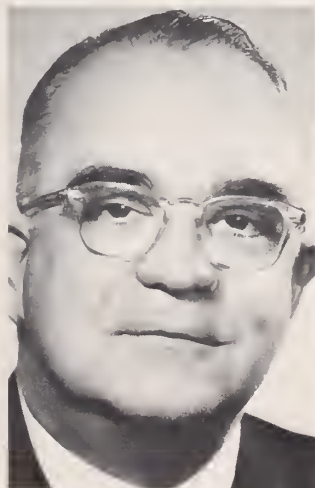

- "We have not considered asking for a 'no-strike' pledge at this stage."

- "I wouldn't think of answering such a question." (on whether deferred wage increases would be considered.)

- "I have not heard from the Inter-Agency Committee." (on any plans for price controls.)

- "I am not the person to ask." (on how long it will take to re-establish the Davis-Bacon unit in the Department of Labor.)

On such questions as "equity" for construction workers, Dunlop quoted from the words of the Executive Order, especially Section 6, stressing that "there will be considerable divergence between regions and localities."

Solid Lath-Plaster...Another View

Fire resistance doesn't just happen, no matter what someone says. It's a design function and can't be delegated to usual practices. With residential structures becoming more clustered and closer to each other, the specter of a holocaust increases proportionately.

Commercial buildings, offices, hospitals, nursing homes, schools, convalescent homes, and similar structures where many people concentrate for long periods of time, are not immune either.

In light of present day trends, perhaps a closer look at the Two-Inch Solid Lath and Plaster Partition is in order. These sturdy, proved, economical assemblies offer so many benefits at such low cost that it's simply astonishing they are overlooked in modern construction so much.

Two Inch Solid lath and plaster partitions are easy to install. A floor track is placed, then it's plumbed to the ceiling to mark the location of the ceiling runner.

Several lathing methods may be used. A gypsum lath, one-half inch thick, two feet wide by eight feet high, and V-jointed for close fit, can be placed in the floor track, and clip attached to the ceiling track. Three coats of plaster on each side provide the best partition available today with fire resistance ratings of four hours and more.

Flat rib metal lath may be chosen as the plaster base. It is placed inside the floor track and clipped to the Z-shaped ceiling runner. It's ready for the scratch coat, brown coats on each side, and finish coats on each side.

Or ¾" channel may be used as framing for 3.4 diamond mesh metal lath. Lath is wired to channels and plastering proceeds as in the case of rib lath.

Economical - Save Money

It's estimated that a Two-Inch Solid lath and plaster partition, finished both sides, is LESS costly than half-inch wallboard on conventional wood studs, 16" c.c., finished on both sides. This evaluation considers the cost and installation labor of studs versus a Two-Inch solid lath and plaster assembly.

Extra Space Is The Big Dividend

But biggest real tangible benefit of all is creation of one usable square foot of extra space for every five lineal feet of partition in the building.

Where there may be 5,000 lineal feet of partition involved, a full 1,000 square feet of extra space is created with the solid lath and plaster partition compared to conventional walls.

Design Freedom

Two-Inch Solid lath and plaster partitions can be fashioned into any configuration - in circles, ovals, arches - in fact any design that the building may call for.

The ability of a Two-Inch Solid Lath and Plaster Partition using metal lath and sanded gypsum plaster was proved in tests at a national laboratory where the partition withstood and successfully prevented passage of fire for 5 hours and 15 minutes. The partition did not approach collapse despite a maximum temperature of over 2000° F. in the furnace. There was no spalling of plaster. This is really fire safety!

'Fringe Benefits' of $42,500-a-Year Congress Members Are Numerous Republican Congressman Silvio Conte, Massachusetts, complained that union construction workers and truckers have won better pay hikes in recent years than have Congressmen. Rep. Conte didn't choose to mention that in addition to their $42,500-a-year salary, members of Congress have voted themselves dozens of emoluments and bonuses that ironworkers, teamsters and lathers would never dream of.

For example, Congressmen get a tax-free living allowance, cut-rate telephone service, free research service, a liberal retirement plan, free use of a complete gym and swimming pool, free mailing privileges, free picture framing, and free potted plants. On top of all that there is a $750-a-year transportation allowance (which is happily collected by Conte's union-hating Republican colleague, Joel Broyhill, despite the fact that Broyhill lives only seven miles across the Potomac from his office) and $133,500-a-year for staff assistants.—PAI

Disguised Demagnetizer

It's pretty annoying to find out that you have accidentally magnetized a small tool, such as a screwdriver, but don't fret. If you have a two-post soldering gun you can easily demagnetize that pesky screwdriver. Just turn on the soldering gun and insert and withdraw the blade of the screwdriver several times between the two arms that form the tip. This does the job quickly and thoroughly.

DECISIONS OF THE GENERAL PRESIDENT ON APPEALED FINES

Published in Accordance with Section 179, International Constitution

John S. Truesdale, No. 42678 vs. Local 260—Brother Truesdale appealed against the action of Local 260 in fining him $100 for violation of Article XXI, Section 31 of the locals By-Laws and Sections 101 and 102 of the LIU Constitution. After carefully considering all the evidence submitted to headquarters, the General President found this brother guilty and upheld the fine as placed.

Thomas A. Westenhoefer, No. 59624 vs. Local 551—Brother Westenhoefer appealed against the action of Local 551 in fining him $100 for violation of Sections 94, 96 and 105 of the LIU Constitution and the hiring system of Local 551's By-Laws. After carefully considering all the evidence submitted, the General President found this brother guilty and upheld the fine as placed.

Four Lathers Take Part in AFL-CIO Course

Carter, Elseroad, McSorley and Sweeney Participate in Institute at Labor Studies Center

Representatives of four LIU local unions were among the 35 members of an institute for building trades business agents conducted at the AFL-CIO's Labor Studies Center in Washington, D.C.

Completing the course satisfactorily were:

G. C. Carter, business agent of Local 9, Washington, D.C., who has been a member in continuous good standing since he enrolled in Local 9 in 1948. He was a delegate to the 1970 International Convention.

G. W. Elseroad, secretary and business agent of Local 75, Baltimore, Md. He also was a delegate to the last LIU convention.

J. A. McSorley, Jr., business agent of Local 53, Philadelphia, Pa., who has been in continuous good standing in the local since 1952.

J. W. Sweeney, Jr., business agent of Local 401, Allentown, Penna., who has been in continuous good standing there since joining in 1959. He is the Sixth Vice President of the International, having been elected at the 1970 convention. He was also a delegate to the LIU conventions in 1964 and 1967.

The quartet attended a five-day seminar at which about nine major subjects were covered. Included were such topics as "Economics of the Construction Industry," conducted by Dr. Quinn Mills of Massachusetts Institute of Technology; "Labor Law in the Construction Industry," by Louis Sherman, legal counsel for the Building and Construction Trades Department of the AFL-CIO, and "Technology Changes," by Dr. Roland B. Guy, Batelle Memorial Institute.

Joseph D. Keenan, president of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers and a vice president of the Building and Construction Trades Department, conducted a panel which considered the nation's housing policy. President George Meany of the AFL-CIO met with the members of the seminar and discussed the general policy of the federation.

The AFL-CIO Labor Studies Center was established in 1969, designed to upgrade the leadership of organized labor through training programs designed to benefit full-time staff members and elected officials of labor organizations affiliated with the AFL-CIO. Headquarters of the Center are at 1500 Massachusetts Avenue, N.W. in Washington, D.C.

Attending institute for business agents were, from left: J. W. Sweeney, Jr., Local 401; G. C. Carter, Local 9; G. W. Elseroad Local 75, and J. A. McSorley, Jr., Local 53.

AFL-CIO President George Meany, at right, discussed labor informally.

Jobs for Veterans Becoming Increasingly Serious Problem

"When an individual has been risking his life for his country, it is an unconscionable injustice for him to be unemployed!"
—Sen. Gaylord Nelson

When the March unemployment report was issued by the Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics it disclosed that the hardest hit group was the 20- to 24-year-olds.

A large percentage of this group are veterans, many from Vietnam. Finding jobs for these veterans is developing into a growing national problem.

Organized labor is deeply involved in the Federal government's Jobs for Veterans program. The AFL-CIO Human Resources Development Institute is concentrating much of its effort in this field.

Recently, the U.S. Senate passed and sent to the House the Emergency Employment Act of 1971 which would initially provide some 150,000 public service jobs for the unemployed. Many of these jobs would go to veterans.

The Employment, Manpower and Poverty Subcommittee of the Senate, under Senator Gaylord Nelson (D-Wisc.), described in detail the crisis which is hitting returning veterans in its committee report. Following are excerpts from that report:

"It is a personal tragedy for an individual to be unable to find a job in order to support himself and his family. But when that individual has just spent 12 months or more risking his life in support of his country, being unemployed is an unconscionable injustice.

"The unemployment rate for young veterans is significantly higher than that among their nonveteran peers. For example, during the first two months of 1971, the most recent period for which data is available, the unemployment rate among veterans 20 to 29 years old was 10.2 percent, up sharply from 7.9 percent in the last quarter of 1970. During that quarter the unemployment rate for nonveterans in the same age group was 6.8 percent.

"A recently published study by the Department of Defense found that men who served in combat occupations such as the infantry and gun crews tend to have the highest unemployment; and that men who serve

Bricklayers Aid Program For Training Servicemen

A new apprenticeship training program for 2,600 servicemen, many of them veterans of Vietnam, has been set up by the U.S. Labor Department with the aid of the Bricklayers' union. The training is part of "Transition Program" in which about 12,000 servicemen at 35 installations were trained last year.

Bricklaying courses for six weeks will be given at Camp Lejeune, N.C.; Camp Pendleton, Calif.; Treasure Island Marine Barracks, Calif.; Fort Bragg, N.C.; Fort Carson, Calif.; Fort Devens, Mass.; Fort Hood, Texas; Fort Lewis, Wash.; Fort Ord, Calif.; and Fort Riley, Kansas.

On completion of training and separation from active duty in the armed forces, the men will be placed in jobs provided by the National Association of Home Builders.

"In view of this, the Committee believes that there is a great opportunity under this public service employment program to assist educationally and economically disadvantaged veterans enrolled in college under the GI bill and who are struggling to make ends meet. Many more of these men, who often are high school dropouts, could pursue college or junior college training if they had part-time jobs to supplement their GI bill educational assistance allowances."

Carlough Demands Labor Aide's Resignation for Attack on Unions

The resignation of Assistant Secretary of Labor Arthur Fletcher has been asked by President Edward J. Carlough of the Sheet Metal Workers for Fletcher's "vicious attack on construction unions."

In his letter to President Nixon demanding the resignation, Carlough said the continuation of Fletcher in office would lead to the conclusion that the Nixon Administration is starting "a nineteenth-century style, union-busting onslaught" against the labor movement.

The April issue of the Sheet Metal Workers Journal, the official union publication, carried the complete text of Fletcher's speech to the Associated Builders and Contractors convention in Washington. ABC is an organization of open shop contractors.

"I am shocked and angry," Carlough wrote the President, "to learn that, according to Mr. Fletcher, your action of February 23 of suspending the Davis-Bacon Act was not to allegedly control inflation, but rather to weaken and even destroy the great construction unions of this country."

Carlough's letter continued: "Mr. Fletcher's speech was vicious in content, arrogant in delivery and totally at variance with your own statements on this and related issues. In his gutter attack on construction unions he even had the temerity to include a snide remark on those New York City "hard hats" whose representatives you invited to the White House only a few short months ago to personally thank for their support of your decision in Cambodia."

Fletcher had as the gist of his remarks the contention that the federal government, largely through his personal efforts, was bringing on "the end of the era of union dominance in the construction industry" which had been the source of racial discrimination.

Pittsburgh Builders to Prepare 314 Minority Youth for Entrance to Building Trades Unions

Manpower Administrator Paul J. Fasser, Jr., has announced a $471,255 federal manpower training project to prepare 314 minority workers for apprenticeship or journeyman training and to help them become members in Pittsburgh building and construction unions.

The project supports the "Pittsburgh Plan," a voluntary commitment worked out by the Black Construction Coalition and the construction industry to get more blacks into construction jobs.

Labor Tutoring Minorities

The Southwestern Oklahoma Building and Construction Trades Council has been awarded its fourth contract by the Department of Labor to prepare 40 minority youths to pass construction trade entrance tests and become apprentices. Under three previous contracts the Oklahoma City-based council placed 143 apprentices, 60 of them in its last contract which had only called for placing 40.

The one-year contract is between the Labor Department's Manpower Administration and the Pittsburgh Building and Construction Industry Administrative Committee for Re-

Gael of the Year

The United Irish Counties Association held its 67th Annual Ball January 8, 1971 at the Hotel Commodore, Manhattan.

Guest of honor was John Tierney, business manager and financial secretary of Local 46, an office he was elected to in 1969. He is also Vice President of the New York State AFL-CIO and a member of the Executive Board of the Building and Construction Trades Council of New York.

His wife, Veronica, and daughter Rita were with him as he received this great honor, as were also many of his relatives and friends.

A medal attesting to his selection was presented to him by New York Lieutenant Governor Malcolm Wilson.

search, Education and Training, Inc. The Committee has agreed to prepare 158 minority youths for apprenticeship and to upgrade the skills of 156 construction workers who have varying levels of experience so they can become fully qualified journeymen, or—if already qualified—gain union status. Construction union members will provide instruction and supervision.

The Pittsburgh project sponsors estimate that about 2,700 recruits will be needed to attain its goal of 314 apprentice and journeyman placements.

The project will operate in the City of Pittsburgh, in the Hill District, Northside, and Homewood-Brushton, as well as other areas of Allegheny County.

AFL-CIO Economist Says Rise In Minimum Wage Is Mandatory Step

America's lowest-paid workers are even worse off now than they were when the minimum wage was last improved in 1966, AFL-CIO economist Rudolph Oswald recently declared as he called for an immediate boost to "at least $2 an hour."

"The inflationary impact of the last five years has cut the 1966 value of the $1.60 minimum wage to only $1.24 today, which is less than it was before Congress made the last improvement," said Oswald, of the federation's Department of Research. That "deterioration of buying power . . . makes it mandatory" that there be a new and higher federal floor under wages, he stressed, on the radio program "Labor News Conference."

Oswald said that low-paid workers also continue to suffer from employer violations of the federal Wage & Hour law, noting that "inspections of only about 5 percent of the establishments covered by the law" revealed that half a million workers "were short-changed some $93 million last year."

Noting that the minimum wage law has been on the books since 1938, he said, "it is hard to believe that after (more than) 30 years," employers would not be aware of the law and what it requires. He said that mounting employer violations could be curbed by the addition of more inspectors "to assure that workers . . .

The union economist turned aside the contention that the rise of unemployment for the past two years makes this the "wrong time to raise the minimum wage." He said that "if we listen to that argument, it would always be 'the wrong time' to raise the minimum wage," yet past improvements have been followed by a decline in unemployment.

When the minimum wage was first established in 1938, Oswald pointed out that "unemployment was double the current rate," and it decreased in the following years. He said that unemployment has also eased after other minimum wage improvements, "largely because we've always been so modest in the increases."

Oswald said the AFL-CIO will also push hard in this Congress to extend minimum wage coverage to all wage and salary employees. "If a job is worth doing, it's worth a wage that is at least enough to support the worker and his family," he declared.

Questioning Oswald on the AFL-CIO-produced public affairs interview were James F. Welsh of the Washington Evening Star and Donald Finley of United Press International. The program is broadcast Tuesdays on Mutual radio.—PAI

Massachusetts Legislature Supports $2 Minimum Wage

The Massachusetts legislature has adopted a resolution urging the U.S. Congress to vote for a $2.00 minimum wage over the current $1.60 an hour minimum. The resolution said that American workers should not be expected to work for a minimum that does not even cover the Federal government's poverty standard.

Doctors to Spend $1.5 Million on Campaign to Combat Medical Security

Organized doctors opposed to enactment of the National Health Security program, endorsed by the AFL-CIO, will begin a $1.5 million advertising campaign in May "to tell medicine's story to the public."

Announcement of the expensive promotional campaign came as the American Medical Association launched its political drive to defeat National Health Security.

The AMA's board of trustees has contracted with the firm of McCann-Erickson to prepare the advertising which will appear in newspapers, magazines and on television. The contract calls for spending $750,000 in each of fiscal 1971 and 1972.

The advertising is in addition to the activities of the organization's political arm, AMPAC, according to the weekly AMA publication American Medical News.

AMPAC enlisted the aid of Sen. Robert Dole (R-Kan.), the chairman of the Republican National Committee, at a Washington workshop promoting the AMA's health care proposal, "Medicredit."

How's That Again?

Six unions which were tenants in the Philip Murray Building in Washington, D.C., had to move out because one of the other tenants, the United Auto Workers, was being picketed in a contract dispute by the Office and Professional Employees Union, Local 2. OPEIU Local 2 was one of the tenants!

A minimum wage of "at least $2 an hour" is "mandatory" for America's lowest-paid workers, who are worse off now than they were when the floor under wages was last raised in 1966, AFL-CIO Economist Rudolph Oswald, center, declared on Labor News Conference. He was questioned by James E. Welsh, left, of the Washington Evening Star and Donald Finley of United Press International. The interview program is broadcast Tuesdays on Mutual Radio.

Criticism of Labor Is Termed Smokescreen for Nixon Failure

Continuing attacks on organized labor by the Nixon forces are designed "to turn people's minds away from the failures of this Administration," AFL-CIO Pres. George Meany told more than 2,000 labor and industry leaders in New York City.

"We're going to be the target—and this is not new," Meany added. "We've been shot at before. But I'm sure we'll survive and we'll continue to do our job long after our critics are gone and forgotten.

"We will continue to serve the great mass of the people and continue to play our part in enhancing the social and economic welfare of the American people."

Meany was the principal speaker at a dinner honoring Edward F. Carlough, president-emeritus of the Sheet Metal Workers, who stepped down as head of the union last Sept. 30 at its convention in Atlantic City.

Meany recalled his long-standing friendship with Carlough citing him as "an outstanding leader of the American trade union movement at the local level and the international level." Carlough, Meany said, represents the finest type of trade union leader who recognizes that the business of a trade union is to advance the interests of the members in the industry in which they work and in the community of which they are a part."

Meany cited the many years during which the building trades had been "a major factor in developing American trade unions and in protecting the interests of American workers in war and peace."

"So it seems somewhat odd today to see construction workers as the target of a vicious campaign of misrepresentation by some people," he said. "people who hold the construction workers responsible for all the nation's troubles—some Administration politicians, some eggheads and some spokesmen of the new left."

He said there is "no question this country is in trouble" and cited high unemployment, the steady deterioration of major cities into "great American slums" and added that "there is no question where the blame rests"—the economic "game-plan" of the Nixon Administration, the "brain-child of Dr. Arthur Burns," former chief Administration economist and now head of the Federal Reserve Board.

When the new Administration took office, Meany recalled, the nation was in the 95th month of continuous economic expansion that had begun in March 1961, and unemployment was down to 2.7 million or 3.4 percent, the lowest rate in 16 years.

"Then came the new Administration with new ideas . . . the plan put forth by Dr. Burns and Pres. Nixon was to slow down the economy, restrict the money supply, curb inflation, bring down prices, and this was all to be done without increasing unemployment. Pres. Nixon in a letter to me in February 1969 said the plan would be put into effect without causing more unemployment."

Instead, he noted, workers out of jobs increased by leaps and bounds, housing starts declined sharply, interest rates soared to their highest point in 100 years, industrial production began falling off as early as August 1969.

"It took the Nixon Administration policy only a few months to turn the economy around to where we were in a general recession," he said, adding that the "Nixon-Burns game plan for the country's economy after two years was a miserable and complete failure."

Meany commented that if Burns had "turned in this kind of record for private industry, he would have been fired. If it had happened in Russia, he'd have been sent to Siberia. But since he did it in the Nixon Administration, he is kicked upstairs."

He said the Administration now had "a new game plan, including pie-in-the-sky revenue sharing plus a barrage of optimistic oratory."

And Burns, he said, also has new ideas for the future that include "a new whipping boy—and you can guess who it is—organized labor."

Meany cited a Burns speech in California in January in which he called for repeal of the Davis-Bacon law, compulsory arbitration in major industry disputes, a cut in the federal minimum wage for some workers and a tax incentive—speedy write-offs of the cost of new equipment—for industry.

Concerning compulsory arbitration of labor-management disputes in industry, Meany said "when you get to the point where government makes you work for one or another private industry, you've got to the point where freedom in America is no more."

Referring to a recent appearance of Burns before a congressional committee, Meany said the economist had said the time had come to take away some of organized labor's powers and to stop aiding strikers, some of whom get food stamps and in some states unemployment insurance benefits.

"He wants to take us back to the last century, back to the 'starve-'em-out' method of labor relations," Meany declared.

He also singled out Burns' assertion that "our apprentice system is medieval, archaic, and should be done away with."

He said he could tell Burns that the building trades are not going to give up their standards for qualifying apprentices as journeymen in the various trades.

"Somehow I believe the members of a union like the union policy," he said. "I've seen many places in this world and I know of no place where the workers have a better share of the wealth they help produce than here in the United States of America."—PAI

Government Statistics Contradict Government Wage Raise Statements

The government, which declares that construction wages have risen too high, has contradicted itself with its own figures, a survey has revealed.

Figures released by the National Association of Home Builders and the Bureau of Labor Statistics prove that construction workers earn wages not much higher than those of factory workers. In addition, construction workers are subject to vagaries of the weather and generally are idle for as much as four months out of the year for that reason.

Wages are now about 18 percent of the cost of a single family home. Financing constitutes 10 percent, builder's expenses and profits 13 percent, land 21 percent and materials 38 percent. All these have risen sharply in the past 20 years except wages and profits, which have slipped. Profits have declined from 15 percent to 13 percent and wages have dropped from 33 percent to 18 percent.

Construction workers (union and non-union) in 1970 earned an average of $5.22 per hour, according to the BLS. This would yield $8,652 for the average time worked in a year.

John Stastny, president of the National Association of Home Builders, an industry group, has said: "In our industry, labor is not the principal trouble right now. High land and material costs probably have more to do with pushing up the cost of new homes."

Despite the fact that wage rates vary from region to region and city to city, it is only the very highest rates which draw public attention.

Not only is the construction industry subject to weather shutdowns, the construction worker also encounters greater job hazards than most other workers. The construction worker is nearly twice as likely to be injured on the job as is the non-construction worker. In 1968, latest year for which figures are available, the injury frequency rate in construction was 26.9 per million man-hours against 14 per million in manufacturing. In addition, the severity rate in construction was nearly three times that for manufacturing.

Putting it into perspective, a worker on a 50-story building in New York recently told a reporter: "If the President wants to do something about prices, tell him to check on that delicatessen across the street. I just paid a buck-eighty-five for a sandwich and a cup of coffee!"

Records Book Makes Fascinating Reading

One of the most fascinating reference works is the "Guinness Book of World Records," recently published in its tenth edition by Sterling Publishing Co., New York, N.Y.

The first edition was published 15 years ago by Arthur Guinness, Son & Co., Dublin, Ireland, as "a means for the peaceful settling of arguments." Over the years it has grown in popularity until today it is published in 12 languages. More than 5 million copies have been printed.

The book cites records of all kinds; the smallest fish ever caught, most expensive wine, greatest weight ever lifted by a man, world's longest horse race.

Compilers of the unique volume are identical twins Norris and Ross McWhirter of England, both contributors to the Encyclopaedia Britannica.

NLRB Case Load Goes Up and Up

There has been no let-up on the constantly increasing case load of the National Labor Relations Board.

During the last three months of 1970, the NLRB received 8,366 cases compared with 7,567 during the same period for a year earlier.

Of the 3,456 charges filed against employers, 1,398 were filed by AFL-CIO affiliates, 658 by independent unions and 1,400 by individuals.

Of the 1,918 charges brought against unions, 901 were by employers, 951 by individuals and the rest by other unions.

During the three-month period, the NLRB held 2,242 representative elections, unions winning 1,125 elections or 52 percent. AFL-CIO unions won 614 elections while independent unions won 511.

In all, 153,319 were involved.

Ohio Garnishment Law Crippled by Injunction

Ohio labor and consumers won a smashing major victory in Ohio when Federal Judge William Thomas issued a permanent injunction prohibiting Cleveland's Municipal Court from applying Ohio's harsh garnishment law on workers' wages.

For years, the Ohio labor movement and interested consumer groups have tried to curb the abusive use of the garnishment in this state. It has been labor's contention that Ohio's severe garnishment law contributes to the state's high personal bankruptcy rate—second in the nation.

Prior to 1967, all of a worker's paycheck could be taken by creditors. A labor-backed bill in the 107th Legislature limited this amount to 70% of a week's pay and the Federal Truth-in-Lending Act (effective July 1, 1970) provided that no more than 25 percent of a worker's weekly wage could be garnished.

In an attempt to circumvent the federal law, the Republican-controlled 108th Ohio Legislature passed a bill which it claimed would permit only garnishment up to 17.5 percent of a worker's wage. But in reality, the bill allowed creditors to garnish 17.5 percent of a worker's monthly pay out of a weekly paycheck. In other words, Closing the Loopholes!

Organized labor has long pressed for tax reform to end tax shelters used by the rich-and-super-rich for tax dodging. It finally got it in Pennsylvania.

The new state income tax law, signed by Governor Milton J. Shapp, not only wipes out most loopholes, but over 20 percent of the total income comes from ending the shelters.

a worker would lose still 70 percent of one week's wages at least once a month.

The U.S. Labor Dept. challenged the Ohio law last fall. Aaron Caghan, Labor Dept. legal counsel, argued the Ohio law was in conflict with federal statutes. Judge Thomas responded by issuing a temporary restraining order against Cleveland's court.

Meanwhile, former Ohio Attorney General Paul Brown went to Washington and asked that Ohio be exempted from the federal law altogether! At a Washington hearing, the Ohio AFL-CIO appeared and argued against granting Ohio the exemption which was denied.

The Ohio AFL-CIO next joined with the Labor Department in seeking to make the temporary restraining order permanent. Judge Thomas' historic ruling followed.

AFL-CIO Schedules Job Conference for July

The AFL-CIO has scheduled a Conference on Jobs for July 12-13 in Washington, D.C. The conference will explore all aspects of the job-loss problem in the United States.

"We consider it one of the most important conferences ever held by the AFL-CIO," said President George Meany in a letter to union presidents.

The LIU will be represented at the conference, according to President Robert Georgine.

"No Fault" Auto Insurance Offered As Remedy for Excessive Litigation

By Press Associates, Inc.

The growing public outcry against the failures of our health delivery system is being matched by a deep resentment against practices of the auto insurance industry.

The complaints on auto insurance have been repeated over and over again: high unilateral increases in rates, cancellation without notice, non-renewal of policies, refusal to sell insurance in certain areas and to certain groups of workers, etc.

Since 1965, Senator Philip A. Hart (D-Mich.), chairman of the Senate Antitrust & Monopoly subcommittee, has conducted hearings and studies on many facets of the auto industry and the auto insurance industry.

The Department of Transportation conducted a two-year study in the same area and its report has been made public.

Time and again in these hearings and studies the outrageous cost of litigation in resolving accident disputes emerged. Both the Hart hearings and the DOT study show that on claims for 1969 auto accidents, the parties engaged in litigation will pay legal fees totalling some $1.1 billion, conservatively estimated to be one-fourth the total income of the legal profession for that accident year.

Such litigation ties up our courts, too. A study by the Federal Judicial Center points out that motor accidents litigation requires 11.4 percent of judges' time in federal district courts and approximately 17 percent in state courts of general jurisdiction.

This is taking place at a time when the backlog of cases in our courts has reached frightening levels. In Los Angeles, for example, there are 42,000 civil and criminal cases awaiting trial. Philadelphia has 427 untried homicide cases.

A study done by the insurance industry for DOT showed that claimants with a permanent total disability had an average economic loss of $78,000. Yet, they received only an average insurance payment of $12,556—only 16 percent of their total loss.

To move litigation out of the auto insurance picture, Hart and Sen. Warren G. Magnuson (D-Wash.) have offered a proposal for "no fault" insurance.

Under this bill a federal program will be established requiring uniform insurance laws in the states which would guarantee that auto insurance will be available to every qualified driver with sufficient, fair and prompt payment of losses due to death or injury—regardless of who is at fault.

The idea of "no fault" insurance is not new. It was proposed more than 50 years ago when it was suggested that the no-fault insurance plan in workmen's compensation be applied to auto insurance.

The whole concept of "no fault" insurance has reached such a point that Transportation Secretary John A. Volpe told Magnuson's Senate Commerce Committee that the Administration also favors the no-fault approach, but seeks its adoption on a state-by-state basis. He acknowledged that it would take about five years even if the states cooperated.

The Volpe plan got some sharp reactions from both Hart and Magnuson.

Hart termed it "an insurance industry proposal." Volpe replied that it was based on the Massachusetts "no fault" plan and it was supported by both lawyers and insurance men in the legislature.

SEN. PHILIP HART

Proposes New Insurance Law

Hart then pointed out that under the Massachusetts legislation the no-fault provision is limited to claims under $2,000.

"What the lawyers care about," Hart said, "are the big claims, the ones still going to court. Just as the Massachusetts bill is the lawyers' bill—assuring them of the juicy business—the Administration plan is an insurance industry proposal."

Also, the Administration plan does not deal with two other critical problems, cancellation and non-renewal of policies. The Hart-Magnuson Bill protects motorists on both counts.

A typical auto crash, thousands of which have brought on costly litigation tying up courts in effort to assess blame. New proposal would provide for "no fault" insurance to partially reimburse motorists.

Joblessness Serious Threat, Solons Told

Climbing Unemployment Contradicts Rosy Statements from the White House

The following is taken from a memorandum to the House Public Works Committee by AFL-CIO Pres. George Meany on the present employment situation. It supplemented Meany's testimony before the committee supporting a public works construction program.

Despite the officially optimistic views of the Administration, the Labor Department's reports on the employment situation, in recent months, reveal a continuing weakness in the nation's job markets.

Hidden beneath the White House rhetoric is the fact that the civilian labor force has actually declined in the past few months, that there has been a substantial increase in hidden unemployment and that employment in the private sector is off considerably.

These are the facts and the "rosy-glow" statements of the Administration should not be allowed to camouflage the picture.

The details of the reported decline in the seasonally adjusted unemployment rate from 6.2 percent of the civilian labor force in December to 5.8 percent in February clearly indicate job-market weakness rather than a show of strength.

Total employment between December and February increased only 74,000 after accounting for seasonal changes—not enough to reduce the unemployment rate by even a full one-tenth of 1 percent, with a civilian labor force of over 83 million. So the decline in the reported unemployment rate in those two months was hardly due to increased employment.

Examination of the Labor Dept.'s figures reveals that the reported decline in the seasonally adjusted unemployment rate between December and February was mainly the result of a sharp decline in the civilian labor force—a decline of 225,000. In other words, 225,000 people disappeared from the government's tabulation of the labor force and that cannot, by any reasonable standard, be considered progress. In fact, it is the opposite.

Aside from the possibility of month-to-month statistical difficulties, the essential reason for the decline in the reported unemployment rate was that 225,000 people, who had been in the civilian labor force in December, stopped actively seeking jobs by February, after failing to find work. Since the Labor Dept.'s definition of the civilian labor force requires the active seeking of work, those who stop such active search are no longer considered to be part of the labor force.

The reported decline in the unemployment rate between December and February, therefore, was mainly the result of the economy's failure to produce the needed expansion of job opportunities, rather than to a substantial rise of employment.

Moreover, the detailed figures reported by the Labor Dept. reveal the probability of a substantial increase of hidden unemployment between December and February. The civilian labor force should increase by about 160,000 a month, after accounting for seasonal variations. So the civilian labor force should have expanded by about 320,000 in December-February, instead of the reported decline of 225,000. These figures reveal that hidden unemployment increased by as much as 500,000 in those months.

In addition, the failure of employment to increase to any significant degree in recent months—following a decline during most of 1970—is a sure sign of general economic stagnation and weakness in the job markets.

Moreover, a clearer picture of weakness in the job markets is revealed in the Labor Dept.'s detailed reports on the number of wage and salary workers on payrolls of non-farm establishments, based on employers payroll records.

These reports indicate that the number of workers on private and public payrolls in February was down 700,000 from the peak in March 1970. They indicate substantial job losses in manufacturing industries and construction in the past 15 to 17 months—down 1.6 million in manufacturing and 300,000 in construction. Moreover, contract construction and most manufacturing industries reported continuing job-declines in February.

The only parts of the private economy that reported significant job-increases were wholesale and retail trade and the services, with a combined employment-increase of about 400,000 in the past year; but many of these jobs are part-time.

In addition, production cutbacks have resulted in reduced working hours for large numbers of employed workers. The average number of weekly working hours of non-supervisory workers in private employment in January-February 1971 was down 2.7 percent from the same period of 1969.

The only part of the total national economy that has reported substantial job-increases is government employment. Jobs in state and local governments in February were up almost 490,000 from the previous year, while federal employment was down nearly 50,000.

The overall employment picture remains one of continuing weakness in most job markets—revealing the stagnation that persists in most parts of the national economy, following the general economic decline of 1969-1970.

COPE-Correct Burton Heads Demo Study Group

Congressman Phillip Burton of San Francisco has been elected chairman of the powerful Democratic Study Group, an organization of 150 members of the House of Representatives. it was announced today.

The liberal group, strongly pro-labor in orientation, chose Congressman Burton (D-Cal.) by an overwhelming 72-43 vote, upsetting the traditional leadership of the organization.

Congressman Burton rated "100 percent right" by COPE, promised that the Democratic Study Group would take a very active role in the Congress; particularly in opposition to President Nixon's anti-labor policies.

The Democratic Study Group was organized in 1959 as a liberal legislative and research organization with a professional staff whose primary purpose was to counteract the Republican-Dixiecrat alliance.

"Unlucky Pierre" Trudeau In Snub to CLC

Just before Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau went off on his honeymoon with his young bride, he had a sharp exchange with President Donald MacDonald of the Canadian Labour Congress—an exchange which has “left a sour taste” in the mouth of Canadian Labour.

The occasion was the presentation of the traditional CLC memorandum to the Federal Government, including Trudeau and 17 Cabinet members, on labor criticisms and recommendations for the coming year.

Normally this is a polite exchange of views. This time, Trudeau's attitude was deeply resented by unionists present who noted that the CLC President was appearing on behalf of 1,650,000 Canadian workers. The Prime Minister frequently laughed, sometimes turned to speak with colleagues while MacDonald was replying to his questions and occasionally stopped MacDonald in mid-sentence.

At one point it was necessary for MacDonald to remind the Prime Minister that he had not once interrupted him in the course of his reply to the CLC statement.

The labor presentation, in the historic Railway committee room in Parliament's center block, at first followed the pattern of previous submissions.

MacDonald gave a 30-minute summary of the 15,000-word memorandum to the 17 cabinet members present. Then the Prime Minister replied, taking about 30 minutes to do so, much longer than prime ministers usually speak on such occasions. This was followed by replies from several cabinet members.

Then, as in past years, MacDonald started the traditional rebuttal. It was at that point that the proceedings departed from tradition as the Prime Minister interrupted the CLC president time and time again with interjections and questions.

It was in discussion of the economic situation that Trudeau most often interrupted the CLC president. The Prime Minister claimed that the Canadian economy was strong today precisely because of federal policies. MacDonald countered that many modern industrial countries had full employment—with unemployment even below the Economic Council of Canada's three percent figure—and did not suffer from rampant inflation.

Trudeau also interrupted MacDonald's criticism of the War Measures Act and Government handling of the French-separatist crisis. The Prime Minister said that Montreal and Quebec province had asked for the War Measures Act. MacDonald replied that Federal authorities should have investigated the situation before imposing the Act. The brief said that the Government failed to produce “a tittle of evidence” to justify actions which had thrown the country into a state of panic.

Of 497 persons arrested during the emergency powers last October, only 62 had been charged, said MacDonald. “We cannot conceive of an insurrection led by only 62 people.” And only 33 offensive weapons had been found in police searches.

Trudeau interjected: “This only proves that we haven't found the rest.” His interruption was greeted by loud laughter from the trade unionists who jammed every foot of the floor and overflowed into the corridor.

The presentation covered a wide range of other topics. It criticized the Government's white paper on social security for not providing any comprehensive approach.

It outlined good labor legislation which it hopes for in promised new laws to be introduced soon, calling for “a framework within which organized labor and management should be free to work out their relationships as much as possible on the basis of mutual agreement. We favour voluntarism rather than coercion.” It expressed concern over protectionist trade policies adopted by other countries.—PAI

Poor Tisdale! Postal Officials Refuse to Allow Cancel Slogan!

Tisdale, population 2,900, located about 140 miles northeast of Saskatoon, Sask., is the center of an area supplying much rapeseed oil, used as a lubricant, and honey. In the Prairies, the growing of rape is third behind wheat and barley. Some of Canada's best honey comes from the area.

Recently, Tisdale wanted to observe its anniversary and applied for permission to use a special stamp cancellation. Post Office officials in Ottawa turned down the request and said in reply: “We are assuming that an error was made in . . . spelling. If however, it wasn't a misspelling, we certainly cannot authorize it for obvious reasons.”

The stamp cancellation Tisdale had requested would have read: “Celebrate Homecoming '71 in the Land of Rape and Honey.”

"THE INJURY TO ONE IS THE CONCERN OF ALL"

Facing "The Sunset Years" With Confidence

Is Your Local Participating in the General Pension Plan?

(Read Pres. Georgine's article on page 10)

FROM THE PRESIDENT'S DESK

During the past month, the International Office has sent a series of forms to all local unions with agreements expiring in 1971. These must be completed for submission to the Wage Stabilization Committee. The forms provide space for wages of every building trade for every year from 1961 to the present, inclusive.

No one can deny that the completion of these forms is going to be a real problem. However, with cooperation between the various crafts in each area, possibly through the medium of your Building Trades Council, the job can be accomplished with a minimum of confusion. Each craft local certainly must have records of the contracts it has negotiated over the past 10 years. Ordinarily this would involve no more than five two-year or three 3-year contracts. No matter how difficult the job may be, it must be done before you negotiate another contract. If your local union presents a contract to the board for approval without evidence to back it up, you may encounter serious difficulties in getting your contract approved.

I have already advised all parties concerned to be sure to include a clause which provides for retroactive pay from the contract's effective date until it is approved by the Wage Stabilization Board. Long delays may be expected, and such a clause will protect your members' wages.

Another point to be considered: negotiate your contract as you normally would. You are a responsible union officer, and as such you are supposed to obtain the best contract possible. But being responsible also means using logic and good judgment. Lathers and lathing contractors, both ultimately derive their livings from the housing purchaser. The consumer has a freedom of choice between lathing products and substitute materials. Therefore we prudently must consider keeping lathing competitive. If your union has not yet negotiated participation in the General Pension Plan, I would urge that you seriously consider it. Generally speaking, wages paid into pensions cannot be considered as contributing to inflationary pressures.

The wage stabilization board has already approved contracts providing for as much as a 13.5 percent wage increase during the first year of a three-year pact with a total increase of 36 percent. Board Chairman John Dunlop has been long known to the labor community and it would seem, from the evidence thus far, that he intends to be a truly fair and impartial chairman. I don't believe he is going to try to hold the construction industry's wages unfairly down while those of the rest of the nation run wild.

We now have this law and we have to live with it. But the local union officers must cooperate if their members are not to suffer. Fill out and return the forms sent you, detailing construction wages in your area for the past 10 years. When you negotiate, include a retroactive pay clause. Negotiate your contract aggressively, but with the exercise of prudence and good judgment for the benefit of your members.

Our cover this month, in addition to being an extraordinarily good photograph, serves to symbolize the security and the happiness based on that security which comes to many in the years after retirement. They can look into "The Sunset Years" with confidence because they have planned ahead for those years. One of the best ways to insure economic security is to participate in the General Pension Plan and Fund. Lathers who work in participating locals are building up monthly pensions. You will find all the participating locals identified in the directory beginning on page 21 by a ●. They are also listed this month along with an article by President Georgine on page 10. If your local isn't participating, don't you think it should, so you, too, can begin to acquire pension rights? Bring it up at your next local union meeting!

BY THE GENERAL SECRETARY TREASURER

Construction workers . . . especially the 600,000 of them unemployed . . . will be happy to know that the Nixon Administration is genuinely concerned about the impact of unemployment on the economy and is taking prompt action to correct it. The government is going to give as much as $500 cash for the unemployed man to travel to job interviews. It is going to provide him as much as $2,500 worth of training for a new line of work. The government is going to give him up to $100 a week in wages while re-training him. If a new job opens up, the government will allow him up to $1,000 for his household moving expenses. Is the Nixon Administration doing this for the unemployed construction workers? Certainly not! It's going to do it for unemployed scientists, engineers and technicians!

The government is planning to spend $42 million to aid 100,000 jobless technical types. What is the government doing to aid the more than half a million unemployed construction workers? It is spending more tax money to move additional apprentices into the building trades despite the high rate of unemployment! It has adopted unemployment as its goal in order to reduce what it alleges are "excessive wages" in the construction field! In one instance the federal government says that anything less than $6,960 a year is below the "low budget figure" for a family of four. An "intermediate budget" is $10,664. Then, in the second place, the government admits that the average annual wage of construction workers is $8,652. Finally, the Nixon Administration comes up with its ridiculous assertion that wages in the construction industry are "excessive," should be controlled and sets up controls.

Let's look at priorities. What are the scientists and technicians aiming at? They're largely aiming at developing weapons or aiming at the moon. What are the building and construction tradesmen aiming at? They're aiming at better housing for men, women and children. They're aiming at better streets, highways and community services. They're aiming at rehabilitating slums. They're aiming at more schools and hospitals and libraries. But, of course, they're not important . . . only scientists and technicians engaged in research and development are worth spending tax dollars for!

It seems absolutely incredible that such a ridiculous system of priorities could exist in a once-sane land! But it is true. Ellis Mottur of George Washington University submitted a report detailing the unemployment situation of scientists, containing the data cited above, to the National Aeronautic and space Administration. NASA officials have apparently sold President Nixon on the proposal to spend tax money to bail out unemployed engineers. The program is now in the Department of Labor, reported to be "under heavy White House pressure" to start the project rolling.

Do I sound bitter? It is only because I am! Speak of discrimination? This is the ultimate in discrimination! Without wishing hard luck to any individual, it would be poetic justice if, after the Administration succeeds in bailing out the scientists, technicians and engineers, they would be unable to find suitable housing!

Haggerty Resigns from Building Trades Department; Bonadio Named

C. J. Haggerty, First Vice President of the LIU, has retired as President of the AFL-CIO Building and Construction Trades Department. He has served as president since 1960 "with excellence and distinction" as the department's Executive Council said as it accepted with reluctance his decision to retire for reasons of health.

The department leaders praised Haggerty's "notable service to the American labor movement for more than half a century" and proposed that the BCTD convention in November name him president-emeritus.

He will be succeeded by Frank Bonadio, the veteran Secretary-Treasurer of the department, a vice president of the Sheet Metal Workers International Association. He was elected Secretary-Treasurer of the Building & Construction Trades Dept. in 1954.

The Department's executive council will meet again in several weeks to name a new secretary-treasurer.

Haggerty took out his card in the Lathers in Boston in 1915, but he moved to California in 1921 and rose to head the state's labor movement during the period of its greatest growth.

He was elected business manager of his Lathers local in Los Angeles in 1928, and an international vice president a year later. He became secretary of the Los Angeles Building & Construction Trades Dept. in 1933 and president of the California

Frank Bonadio, right, is congratulated by retiring president of the Building and Construction Trades Department C. J. "Neil" Haggerty after Bonadio had been sworn into office succeeding him. Haggerty is LIU First Vice President.

State Federation of Labor in 1937.

In 1943, Haggerty was elected secretary-treasurer of the state federation—the principal executive post in the organization.

After the AFL-CIO merger, he was named to the same post in the merged state labor organization and was credited with cementing the unity of the trade union movement in California.

He was the first union man to be named to the University of California Board of Regents. And both in California and as head of the Building & Construction Trades Dept., he served on major public service assignments —for government, the trade union movement and private organizations.

During four presidential administrations, Haggerty was the chief spokesman for the nation's construction workers, members of 17 international unions.

IBEW Officer Condemns Nixon Housing Acts

The nation will not climb out of its housing crisis as long as the home building industry is used as a pawn in attempts to balance the economy, AFL-CIO Vice President Joseph D. Keenan has warned in an article in Housing Yearbook 1970.

"How long will we permit housing to be the whipping boy of our economy?" Keenan asked. "No segment deserves it less," he stressed, "and no segment is less suited for use as an economic regulator or for economic balancing than housing."

The yearbook, which reviews problems and progress in housing and community development, is published by the National Housing Conference. Hopes of averting disaster in home building were pinned to the Housing & Urban Development Act of 1968, noted Keenan, who is chairman of the AFL-CIO Housing Committee and secretary of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers. But those hopes have been "dashed on the rocks of Administration policy," he declared.

Keenan noted that Pres. Nixon has conceded that the Administration's economic policies contributed to a "grievously crippled housing industry." But while the President claimed that the policies were necessary to control inflation, Keenan asserts that "they have not done that. . . . The truth is the Administration policies to end inflation have been a tragic failure."

What is needed, Keenan suggests, is a solid guarantee from government that residential construction will not be interfered with in achieving a steady rise in home building.

"There is not likely to be any great increase in capital investment in housing as long as the industry is used as a yo-yo of our national economy," he declares.

"And this is a major barrier to

Building Trades Legislative Conferees Rap Nixon Tactics, Look to '72 Elections

Five thousand building trades leaders from all sections of the country are looking to Congress for programs to pull the nation out of recession—and are also looking to the 1972 elections for an Administration that won't sit at the employer side of bargaining tables.

Delegates to the annual legislative conference of the AFL-CIO Building & Construction Trades Department gave warm applause to senators, congressmen and governors—Democrats and Republicans alike—who pledged support for labor's programs.

They gave prolonged ovations to AFL-CIO Pres. George Meany and other speakers who denounced the White House for attempts to make "scapegoats" and "patsies" of organized labor, and served notice that Election Day of 1972 will be "the time of reckoning."

The three-day legislative conference was followed by a day-long session on job safety and occupational health—focusing on the union role in implementing the new laws passed by Congress.

It found the delegates, nearly all of them local leaders of their unions, sharply resentful at the singling out of union building craftsmen for wage controls while the prices of goods and services they must buy continue to rise.

In a keynote speech to the conference, Meany served notice that America's workers are "fed up" with the Administration's efforts to paper over its economic failures with "rosy rhetoric and Madison Avenue gimmickery." To loud applause, he declared that labor "will not accept the role of scapegoat for the failures of this Administration. We will not be the patsies for these people."

Meany stressed the importance of the 1972 elections.

Now, he said, "we've got to look to Capitol Hill rather than to the Executive Mansion to get the things this country needs," including public workers, health security, public service jobs and a higher minimum wage.

"But after you've left here," he told the delegates, "go back home and think of 1972, think of Al Barkan and the COPE organization."

The AFL-CIO's Committee on Political Education, Meany said, is "the finest political organization in the United States." But its effectiveness depends on the work done at the local union level.

AFL-CIO Secretary-Treasurer Lane Kirkland hammered away at the same theme. Building craftsmen and other union members, he said, are "aroused as never before" and after the next election, "there are going to be some changes made and we'll get back on the road to progress."

Pres. Nixon declined an invitation to address the conference but invited presidents of the building trades unions to a "general discussion" at the White House.

Seventeen union presidents met with the President and Labor Secretary James D. Hodgson for a 75-minute discussion that was described as "amiable" but obviously left both sides still far apart on the merits of the Administration's economic "game plan."

At the opening of the legislative conference, Frank Bonadio, Secretary-treasurer of the Building & Construction Trades Dept., said the Administration's initial suspension of the Davis-Bacon Act and subsequent wage curb had united the construction trades as never before.

"In hard times, we come together and work together for a common goal," he declared.

A key element of the conference was the lobbying on Capitol Hill as the thousands of delegates called on the congressmen and senators from their home states. They were armed with detailed explanations of major labor-supported bills and report forms to pass on the results of their interviews to the full-time trade union legislative representatives.

A number of congressional leaders made the trip the other way, coming from Capitol Hill to the vast ballroom of the Washington-Hilton Hotel, which turned out to be too small to accommodate the record attendance.

Senator Humphrey Honored at Lather Lunch

For lathers in attendance at the Legislative and Safety Conference of the Building and Construction Trades Department, a highlight was the Lathers' Luncheon held at the Washington-Hilton Hotel on Wednesday, April 21.

Approximately 60 persons were present as General President Robert Georgine presented a handsome hand-lettered scroll to Senator Hubert H. Humphrey which attested to his many admirable qualities, including his years-long espousal of the causes of working men and women. General Secretary-Treasurer J. Earl Ferguson presented Senator Humphrey with a lifetime honorary membership card in the International.

The scroll read: "The Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers International Union, AFL-CIO, CLC takes pleasure in presenting this Certificate of Honorary Membership to Hubert H. Humphrey, Vice President of the United States, United States Senator, Doctor of Laws, Distinguished Educator, Mayor of Minneapolis, United States Delegate to the United Nations, Protector of the Underprivileged, Defender of the Rights of Man and Stalwart Champion of Organized Labor." It was signed by General President Georgine and General Secretary-Treasurer Ferguson.

In his acceptance speech, Senator Humphrey expressed his appreciation of the honor and said that the scroll would occupy "a place of honor" and that he would treasure his membership in the International. He reminded all those present that it would only be by concerted and continuing political action that organized labor would be able to protect its best interests and make social progress. He pledged his continuing support for liberal legislation and urged his listeners, likewise, to make their support known.

General President Robert A. Georgine is shown, left, with Senator Humphrey, center, and General Secretary-Treasurer J. Earl Ferguson. Pres. Georgine and Sen. Humphrey hold the scroll presented to the Senator. The Senator is also holding the Honorary Membership gold card given him at the luncheon in appreciation of his loyalty to the causes of organized labor.

He said he would "greatly treasure this memento of your regard" as he gestured toward the hand-illuminated scroll. Sen. Humphrey was the guest of honor at the luncheon tendered by the Lathers International Union at the Washington Hilton Hotel during course of the Building Trades Legislative and Health and Safety Conference.

Is Your Local In The General Pension Plan?

By Robert A. Georgine
General President

There are many undertakings which men can successfully complete for themselves only if they cooperate with each other on a large scale. The government of the nation is a prime example. So are our institutions such as free public schools, life insurance, our system of roads and highways and our social security system. Some are elective, some are compulsory.

Another elective institution is provision for pensions to be paid after a man becomes too old, or incapacitated by accident or disease, to continue working at the trade of Lathing. No working man can successfully establish his own pension system alone. It is an undertaking which must be engaged in institutionally by large numbers of people sharing significant mutual interests.

When You Grow Old

The LIU General Pension Plan is such an institution. It merits your support and participation. When you become old, or if you are incapacitated by accident or ill health so you cannot work, you would then see the wisdom in participating in the plan.

Enrollment cannot be on an individual basis. The costs of the pension system must be paid by your employer, and that agreement must be negotiated by your local union. All members of a local union which negotiates participation in the General Pension Plan must take part.

Social Security Isn't Enough!

"There ain't no Santa Claus" for sure when it comes to providing pension protection for your old age to augment social security benefits. The maximum monthly social security payable to a man and his wife amounts to $313. Would you and your wife like to try to exist . . . not live, simply exist . . . on $313 a month? That's about $72 a week.

What is the alternative? You can buy an annuity policy from an insurance company. But it will cost many, many times the amount your pension plan will cost for the same benefits payable. You can invest some of your earnings in stocks and bonds and, if you are shrewd . . . or lucky . . . you may obtain returns equal to what you can get by participation in the General Pension Plan. But there's a big "if" there . . . you may also lose your shirt in the stock market!

The wisest course is to PLAN for retirement, and the earlier the better. Under the General Pension Plan, there's NO maximum . . . the more you contribute, the more you will draw in benefits when you retire.

Start now to get your local union participating in the General Pension Plan. It's something you owe yourself . . . and your family.

History of The Plan

Your General Pension Plan is relatively new, having been established on January 1, 1963. It was amended three years later and again on January 1, 1968. In each instance, the plan was improved and features were added to provide the best possible security for the participants. At the present time 97 local unions have been far-sighted enough to negotiate coverage for their fortunate members. A list of those locals is included.

How about benefits? Do participants have to wait until a huge cash reserve fund has been built up before they can expect benefits? Not at all! Already there are 103 retirees drawing retirement benefits at age 65 (or their beneficiaries have received same). There have been 19 early retirees at age 55 who are now drawing benefits. There are 11 members who suffered disabilities who are now drawing benefits, and there have been 14 members who died before retirement age and their beneficiaries have received death benefits from the General Pension Plan.

List of Beneficiaries

A list of all those members, by local unions, is included in this month's issue. To get the real word on what participation can mean to you, look up the nearest retiree. Ask him if it was worthwhile!

If your local union hasn't negotiated participation in the pension plan for you, why hasn't it?

You might bring it up at your next union meeting under "Good and Welfare!"

Scenes at B&CTD Legislative/Safety Meeting

any large-scale industrialized housing, which the Administration sees hopefully as a way out of our housing depression."

Keenan also points out that organized labor "is not running in fear" from industrialized housing, nor is it trying to block it.

"We realize that in the long run innovations in building systems may create more jobs in the industry and may make some jobs year-round rather than just seasonal," he adds.

Noting that a number of unions have signed contracts with producers of factory-built homes, Keenan says labor's objective is to see that homes are produced by trained and qualified union craftsmen at decent wages and under safe conditions.

"Equally important is our insistence on quality as well as quantity. We are not interested in creating the kind of instant housing today which will become tomorrow's lingering slums. We are interested in providing attractive, enduring homes."

Raise Minimum Pay to At Least $2, Increase Coverage, AFL-CIO Demands

The AFL-CIO has called on Congress to raise the minimum wage immediately to at least $2 an hour and to extend coverage to millions of workers now excluded from the law's protection.

Legislative Director Andrew J. Biemiller urged a House Labor subcommittee to improve on a bill it is considering that would raise the present $1.60 wage floor to $1.80 next January, and to the $2 level a full year later. "The $2 minimum cannot be postponed until 1973," he declared. "Justice for low-wage workers demands quicker action."

In 1966, when the Fair Labor Standards Act was last improved, the $1.60 minimum was at least "tolerable," Biemiller said. "But it is utterly inadequate in 1971, in the face of five years of an inflationary rise in living costs." Biemiller, joined at the witness table by AFL-CIO Research Director Nat Goldfinger, stressed that the nation's economy "needs and must have the added purchasing power" of at least a $2 minimum wage floor.

The drive for a one-step jump to at least a $2 wage level received a surprise assist from one of the most influential members of Congress, Chairman Wilbur D. Mills (D-Ark.) of the House Ways & Means Committee. Mills, generally a conservative on economic matters, proposed a one-step jump to a $2 minimum wage next February.

But the Mills bill would only allow the farm workers' wage floor to rise to $1.50 an hour. The bill before the Labor subcommittee, introduced by Chairman John H. Dent (D-Pa.), would bring farm workers to the full $2 level in a series of steps. Under the present law, their minimum wage is frozen at $1.30 an hour—30 cents less than other covered workers.

The Dent bill would also extend coverage to nearly 5 million employees of federal, state and local governments now exempt, and it would eliminate some of the overtime pay exemptions in present law.

The AFL-CIO testimony also sharply attacked the argument of some Administration and business economists that a lower minimum wage should be set for teenagers to reduce the high unemployment rate among youth.

Scoffing at this, Biemiller said: "If there were any validity at all to arguments for a lower minimum wage for teenagers, then these people should be advocating an even lower minimum wage for black teenagers because unemployment rates for young blacks are much higher than for other teenagers.

"Naturally, no one in his right mind could support this kind of ridiculous proposal. But, really, it is no more ridiculous than a lower minimum wage for all teenagers."

The answer to teenage unemployment, Biemiller stressed, is "a growing economy and full employment." He told the House panel that when private industry can't provide the jobs, "there should be a federal program of public service employment—for both adults and teenagers."

Supreme Court Rules Appeals Cannot Stop Unemployment Benefit

The Supreme Court has unanimously struck down a section of California's unemployment insurance law that automatically cuts off benefits to a jobless worker when an employer contests the award.

All the justices joined Chief Justice Warren E. Burger in ruling invalid the cutoff provision of the law—and 47 other state laws like it—and in upholding an injunction against the cutoff issued by a three-judge district court panel in San Francisco.

The opinion by Burger hinged on the point that the California Unemployment Insurance Code violates the federal Social Security Act, which requires that state programs must be "reasonably calculated to insure full payment of unemployment compensation when due."

It "seems clear," the court said, that the California procedure, which suspends payments for seven to 10 weeks pending an appeal after an initial determination of eligibility has been made, is "not reasonably calculated to insure full payment of compensation when due."

The ruling was a victory for the AFL-CIO and other organizations. The federation submitted a friend-of-the-court brief last January asking the justices to reject an appeal by the California Department of Human Resources Development.

The AFL-CIO brief noted that, under the California law, when an employer filed an appeal, no benefits could be paid a jobless worker out of the compensation fund. That fund had reserves of $1.3 billion in 1969, the federation stressed.

The result was that, whether the employer or the jobless claimant appealed from an initial ruling, it was the claimant who had to bear the costs of delay.

In another labor-related case, the Supreme Court refused to grant an employer's appeal for review of Massachusetts court rulings upholding payment of welfare benefits to strikers.

Hugh Mulligan, 76, of Asbestos Workers Dies

President Emeritus Hugh E. Mulligan, 76, of the International Association of Heat and Frost Insulators and Asbestos Workers, AFL-CIO, CLC, died May 9 in Chicago, Illinois, following a long and distinguished career.

When he was only 14 years old, the boy from Spring Valley, Ill., went to work in the coal mines. Almost immediately he was caught in a slide which crushed one of his legs to the extent he could not continue miner's work. He then joined Local 17 of the Asbestos Workers Union in Chicago in July, 1914. When World War I erupted, he went overseas and served two years in the Allied Expeditionary Force in France. On his return from Army service he was elected Business Agent of Local 17 in 1922, a post he retained for 48 years.

He was the unanimous choice of the General Executive Board of the Asbestos Workers to become General President upon the death of General President Joseph A. Mullane in December, 1954. However, he declined the nomination as he felt he could not leave Chicago and Local 17. Upon the retirement of General President C. W. Sickles in May, 1967, Bro. Mulligan did accept appointment as General President for the interim period between May and the general convention in September, 1967. He refused to seek re-election at the Chicago convention.

Apart from his devotion to his trade and organized labor, Bro. Mulligan was a great football fan and a devotee of Notre Dame University. He had been a close friend of the great Notre Dame Coach, Knute Rockne. Business Agent Mulligan often helped members of the Notre Dame football squad obtain jobs in the trade during summer vacation months. Included in the football coaches he so aided were Frank Leahy, Hugh Devore, "Moon" Mullins, John Druze and Bill Early. Famous football players he assisted included Johnny Lujack, Johnny Lattner, Joe Savoldi, Emil Sitko, Marchy Schwartz, Don Hogan and George Connor.

In December, 1963, he was named "Man of the Year" by the Notre Dame Club of Chicago.

Bro. Mulligan was interred in Queen of Heaven Cemetery, Hillside, Ill., following a Requiem Mass in St. Giles Church, Oak Park, Ill., on May 12.

Colonial Lathing Is Uncovered in Repairs

In preparation for the opening of the Hancock-Clarke House in Lexington, Mass., last April 17, workmen uncovered an interesting section of 18th century wood lathing and brick masonry, according to Mrs. Ralph H. Davis, chairman of the Hancock-Clarke House Committee.

Recent plaster repairs on the front wall of an upstairs bedroom—known as the Dorothy Quincy Room—revealed the early laths and their hand-wrought nails, behind which is a wall of early brick.

This type of brick filler, extending from the sill to the roof plate, is known as "nogging," and is not uncommon in many 17th and 18th century houses. It not only strengthened the framing, but was also good insulation. The nails in the laths proved to be about 7/8" long, with rosette heads.

Labor Promotes Health Security

Measure Now Pending in Congress

Labor has called on Congress to adopt a Health Security program geared to the single goal of high standards of medical care for all Americans—"rich and poor, working and unemployed, young and old."

The Health Security bill, co-sponsored by 25 senators and 80 House members, would meet that goal, AFL-CIO Legislative Director Andrew J. Biemiller has testified at Senate hearings.

Neither the Administration bill nor a variety of other token measures that have been introduced would do so, he declared. "The profit-making philosophy of the market place—to make money for those who provide and finance medical services—is not an acceptable philosophy for medical care.

Biemiller and Auto Workers' Pres. Leonard Woodcock, who also testified before the Senate Finance Committee, rejected arguments that the labor-supported plan would be too costly. In fact, Biemiller stressed, it is the only one of the proposed programs that would hold down soaring health care costs by providing effective controls and "restructuring of the present wasteful, inefficient system."

Under the Health Security bill, universal coverage would include:

- Full payment of all physician and surgical services, including preventive care and physical examinations.
- Full payment of all hospital services, hospital-affiliated nursing home care, outpatient services and home health care.
- All medicines provided by a hospital or prepaid group practice.
- Other services including optometrists, podiatrists, pathology, radiology and ambulance.
- Dental care for those under 15, later to be extended to cover all ages.
- A broad program of active mental health treatment.

Half the cost of the program would be financed by the government, he noted. But the government's contribution—which for the 1970 fiscal year would have been an estimated $20.5 billion—would be only twice what the federal government already pays out in various health care programs:

The balance would come from a 3.5 percent employer payroll tax, a one percent tax on the first $15,000 of a worker's earnings and a 2.5 percent tax on income of the self-employed. But workers and employers would no longer have to pay the present medicare tax, which amounts to eight-tenths of one percent of the first $7,800 in earnings.

"Alone of all the bills introduced in this Congress," Biemiller concluded, Health Security "will benefit all Americans—doctors, patients, hospitals—everyone. And we are convinced that now is the time to do it."

Veneer Plastering Demonstration Given At Builders' Meeting

One of the most successful veneer plastering demonstrations to date was recently held at the National Association of Home Builders' Annual Convention under Houston's Astrodome, directed by Gilbert A. Wolf of the National Plastering Industry's Joint Apprentice Program.

The highly-effective presentation was sponsored by the National Plasterers Apprentice Program in collaboration with the National Bureau for Lathing and Plastering and Plasterers' Local 79 of Houston, Texas. The presentation employed Job Corps trainees, who demonstrated newly-acquired veneer plastering skills to an estimated audience of 10,000 persons, including George Romney, Secretary, U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The NAHB convention attracted over 55,000 persons, including important residential builders and developers from across the United States and Canada who were eagerly seeking new materials and building techniques such as veneer plastering with which to compete in today's housing market.

The need for future veneer plastering demonstrations was underscored by the large number of attendees requesting plastering information, as well as the keen interest shown in employing Job Corps graduates.

The fact that this was a "live" presentation with actual plastering performed by Job Corpsmen made the veneer plastering demonstration one of the outstanding attractions among the more than 3,000 exhibits.

Kirkland Cites 'Class Prejudice' Against Workers From 'Elite' Ranks

"Old-fashioned class prejudice" against men who work with their hands is feeding the "myth" that high construction wages are keeping America from meeting its housing goals, AFL-CIO Secretary-Treasurer Lane Kirkland has charged.

Kirkland probed the reasons for the "abject failure" to meet America's critical housing needs in an address to the Citizens Housing & Planning Council of New York. He cited the high interest rates, the soaring land costs, the government priorities that sacrifice public investment and thus "assure the decay of municipal facilities and urban life."

And he spoke bitterly of the "carefully cultivated" attempts to shift the blame to the nation's construction workers. Despite supposedly high hourly rates, Kirkland noted, the average union construction worker in a large city will earn about $9,600 "in a fairly good year" when he might put in 1,500 hours of work. And for 1970, his average annual income was only about $8,650.

Kirkland contrasted this with the Labor Dept.'s report that an urban family of four needs about $11,000 a year for a "modest" standard of living. "What, then, is all the noise about?" he asked. "Why are wages that are so far below the level required for a 'modest but adequate' standard of living denounced as excessive. Why are construction workers singled out for attack?"

One reason, Kirkland suggested is the "class prejudice" of those who consider themselves the "elite." "They cannot abide the idea of a worker—particularly one who works with his hands—making as much as $10,000 a year. It is all right for their own sons to start at $12,000 a year as management trainees." But for a skilled craftsman with a family to support, crossing the "magical five-figure line" is a sign of "grasping materialism."

Construction workers "more than earn their pay," Kirkland said. And he told his audience that the AFL-CIO takes the position "that all workers and their families should enjoy at least a 'modest but adequate' standard of living, whether inflation pushes that figure to $11,000 or $15,000 or $50,000 a year." And, he warned, while the hostile attention is now centered on the construction industry, "the larger objective" is to thwart all unions in their efforts to catch up with lost buying power.

"Scapegoating the building trades," Kirkland stressed, "will not build the 26 million new housing units we need in the decade ahead."

To reach this goal, he said, interest rates must be brought down to reasonable levels, direct public outlays for low-income housing must be "vastly increased," and land speculation that sends prices soaring must be curbed by establishing land banks to acquire and set aside the land that will be needed in the future "for the development of new communities and other socially useful purposes."

Kirkland emphasized also that "new housing cannot exist in isolation. It creates the need for new mass transit systems, schools, roads, sewers, hospitals, libraries, airports and other public facilities."

Unless there is a national, coordinated effort, supported by massive and planned public investment, "we will not build the homes we need," he warned. And the housing that is built "will soon be engulfed in violent crime and traffic jams, polluted air, spreading slums and decaying schools."

The positive values of achieving the goal of decent housing for all Americans would go beyond the immediate problem of shelter for the ill-housed, Kirkland noted.

"It would not only generate new jobs for the unemployed and open the way to new advances toward racial and social justice. It would also enhance our political health by strengthening confidence in the capacity of democratic government to see, to act and to do.

"And by demonstrating that one great social problem can be solved, it would help to reduce the apparent scale of obstacles to the solution of others."

Labor Attorney Chosen By Canada's NDP Party

Canada's New Democratic Party elected a new leader, reaffirmed its support for organized labor and rejected a minority group bid to have it adopt radical, far-left policies.

Delegates to the party's convention, held in Ottawa, chose David Lewis, 61-year-old deputy leader, to succeed the retiring 66-year-old T. C. (Tommy) Douglas, who had headed the party since it was founded 10 years ago with the strong support of trade unionists. Lewis defeated four other candidates. He is a member of Parliament and an attorney who has represented a number of unions in Canada.

Douglas, in his final report as leader, said state ownership of monopolies and key sectors of the economy was only one form of social ownership, and that in a social democracy "there must always be a role for private ownership where competition is sufficient to prevent exploitation of the public and employees."

The convention called for increased government control over resources industries, and increased public investment in them, but it rejected a move to have the party commit itself to nationalization of all resource industries.

It also rejected a bid to give the French-language province of Quebec the right to "self-determination"—seen by many as separatism—but adopted a policy of a united Canada.

It pledged an NDP federal government to enact a labor bill of rights, ensuring free collective bargaining, the unfettered right to peaceful assembly and picketing, the right to bargain on all matters arising from technological change and automation, and some strike rights during the term of a collective agreement.

Only one speaker who was not a delegate was invited to address the convention: Pres. Donald MacDonald, of the Canadian Labor Congress. He reminded the delegates that the CLC was instrumental in the creation of the party.

About 527 of the total 1,683 registered were delegates of local unions and other labor organizations.

"THE INJURY TO ONE IS THE CONCERN OF ALL"

Two members of Lathers Local 251, Orlando, Will Hicks and James Weaver, are busy "building a mountain" at Disney World, the nation's largest private construction project. Modeled closely on Disneyland in California, the super-amusement park is rushing construction with 8,000 building tradesmen toward an October opening deadline. "Cinderella's Castle" is seen in the background. A fascinating account of what's in store for the young and the young-at-heart in the eastern U.S. will be found on page 12.

FROM THE PRESIDENT'S DESK

Millions of American men and women now unemployed "are victims of a man-made disaster directed by the White House" according to Senator Henry M. Jackson of Washington. Speaking before the Legislative Conference of the Building and Construction Trades Department of the AFL-CIO in Washington, D.C., Senator Jackson said that many of the nation's jobless "are out of work, not by accident, but because this Administration planned it that way." Such planned unemployment has been especially disastrous for many construction workers with families to feed, since the unemployment rate in the construction industry is now about 11 percent, contrasted with the national rate of about 6 percent.

The national administration has the power to make jobs available to unemployed building craftsmen, but so far has refused to do so. Congress voted $12 billion for federal construction and federally-assisted construction which, because of sharing, would boost the final total far above the $12 billion mark. As of this July 1, the beginning of the fiscal year, those $12 billions could be released. The money would be spent this way: $6.3 billion for highways, $957 million for Navy shipbuilding, $942 million for low-rent public housing, $862 million for airports and aviation facilities, $583 million for model cities work, $415 million for foreign aid, both military and economic; $370 million for military construction, $260 million for Farm Credit Administration loans, $217 million for forest roads and trails, $208 million for highway safety and $200 million for water and sewer systems.

Another speaker at the legislative conference of construction craftsmen was Representative Hale Boggs of Louisiana, the House Majority Leader. He told the 4,000 conferees that, if the President refuses to release the $12 billion, Congress, by passing a resolution, could order him to do so. Legal experts versed in constitutional law have cast doubts on how accurate Rep. Boggs' statement might be.

Not satisfied with the unemployment caused by impounding these funds voted by Congress for federal public works construction, the Administration continues unabated its efforts to pump more and more apprentices into the construction trades unions. Many unions, faced with the dilemma of either going along with the move or seeing the federal government take over their apprentice programs completely, are training thousands of apprentices, concentrating on various minority races. The result: when those apprentices become journeymen and are unable to gain employment, they add even more to the unemployment total. Meanwhile, nobody is doing anything to help the unemployed construction worker. For the unemployed technicians in aerospace and elsewhere, the Administration is acting (read Secy.-Treas. Ferguson's comment in last month's issue), but there's no help in sight for construction workers. Senator Jackson may be right: perhaps the Administration wanted them unemployed, planned for it, and succeeded. But it's a little hard to comprehend a prosperous economy being brought about by increased joblessness!

The basic concept of an amusement park has been around for a long time. It remained for Walt Disney to come forward with a concept so advanced, so different, that his finished product bore as much resemblance to the original amusement park as the winning car of the Indianapolis race on Memorial Day does to Henry Ford's original Model T. Since the original Disneyland opened and proved a financial success, there have been a succession of similar institutions of varying size and success. Now Disney World in Florida is being rushed toward an opening this fall. The concept is a vast park where certain diversions, such as wandering bands, are free and the customer has the option of paying for numerous other rides and shows, together with a large choice of dining places of varying degrees of elegance, from hot dogs to filet mignons, gift shops and other stores. In this, lathers are playing a prominent part. See story, page 12.

BY THE GENERAL SECRETARY TREASURER

This issue carries the news that General President Georgine has been granted a leave of absence by the Executive Council in order to accept the post of secretary-treasurer of the Building and Construction Trades Department of the AFL-CIO. Within the predictable future, a General President Pro Tem will be appointed in accordance with Section 13 of the LIU Constitution.

"Bob" Georgine served as president of the LIU for a shorter length of time than any other in the history of our organization. In another day and time, under different circumstances, he might have served longer than any of his predecessors. To that end, he certainly had youth on his side, for he did set another record; he was the youngest man ever elected as president of the LIU. But no one is privileged to see into the future and, when he was victorious at the Vancouver convention, none could know that the events which came to pass would transpire. First came the resignation of C. J. "Neil" Haggerty, First Vice President of the LIU, as president of the Building and Construction Trades Department. Brother Haggerty has not enjoyed the best of health for some time now, and his physicians advised him that he should accept the retirement which he had so thoroughly earned in order to conserve his energies. Frank Bonadio, secretary-treasurer of the Building and Construction Trades Department, was then named to replace Brother Haggerty as president of the department.

President Georgine counselled at great length with me and many others prior to accepting the office of secretary-treasurer of the Building Trades Department. He was naturally reluctant to give up the presidency of the LIU after having occupied the office for just a few days more than nine months. He had already introduced several innovations into the operation of the president's side of the International Office and he had additional ideas he wanted to introduce. One of his "pet projects" was a more intensive promotion of the General Pension Plan for the added welfare of all the membership. Other proposals would involve organizing, education, improved communications and legislative involvement on a broader scale. To all of these vital areas he brought a youthful vigor and enthusiasm, coupled with the knowledge stemming from his years of active involvement.

It has been a distinct pleasure for me working with Bob Georgine. I would consider it a stroke of good fortune . . . not only for myself but for the LIU as well . . . if the person who succeeds Bob would have many of the attributes of our outgoing president. Naturally I regret that the LIU is losing Bob Georgine, but it is only right, just and desirable that he should go on to play a larger role in organized labor on a wider stage. The loss of the LIU is the gain of the B&CTD. As he leaves, he takes with him the good wishes of myself and a host of others for his continued success as he serves the best interests of working men in all the building trades.

Earl Ferguson

Georgine Joins Building Trades Dept.

General President Given Leave of Absence to Become B&CTD Secretary-Treasurer

The Executive Board has authorized a leave of absence for General President Robert A. Georgine in order for him to accept the post of Secretary-Treasurer of the AFL-CIO Building and Construction Trades Department.

Georgine
The leave is to become effective when Pres. Georgine appoints an Acting General President.

The announcement of Pres. Georgine's selection by the Executive Board of the Building and Construction Trades Department was made by the department's new president, Frank Bonadio, as one of his first official acts after being named to his office by the B&CTD Executive Council. Formerly the secretary-treasurer, he was named to the presidency to succeed C. J. "Neil" Haggerty, LIU First Vice President, who resigned from the B&CTD presidency for health reasons.

"We are pleased that Bob Georgine is joining the department," said Bonadio, "and we are certain that his contributions to the welfare of the 3.5 million working men represented by the department will be significant. His youth, energy and experience will no doubt be of great value to the 17 international unions affiliated with the department and their memberships."

President Georgine himself made the announcement of his selection in a personal letter addressed to all LIU local unions, state, district and provincial councils. His letter follows:

Dear Sir and Brother:

A few weeks ago, much to my surprise, I was asked to accept the position of Secretary-Treasurer of the Building Trades Department of the AFL-CIO. My immediate reaction was to decline and decline I did. I felt that my obligation to the members of the LIU was a far greater responsibility and for this reason I could not accept the honor which had been offered.

However, it did not end there. I was urged to reconsider and give very serious thought to all of the aspects involved. I then discussed the situation with General Secretary-Treasurer J. Earl Ferguson and with each of the Vice-Presidents of the LIU Executive Council by telephone. Each Vice-President, without exception, advised me in our telephone conversation to accept the position with the Department. It was the consensus that it was an honor that was not only being bestowed upon me but upon the LIU as well, and it should not be passed over. Subsequently, I discussed the proposal with the leaders in our industry and in the labor movement in general, all of whom advised that if I did not accept the post with the Department, I would, in fact, be doing a disservice to the Lathers International Union.

I have been making decisions all my life but none have been as difficult to make as this one. I prayed over the decision for a long period. I was torn between a lifetime of loyalty and dedication to the very specialized interests of the Lathers and the opportunity to help perform a needed service not only to the Lathers, but to all the Building Tradesmen as well.

Few men are given the opportunity to choose between two such challenging and rewarding jobs, but men must sense the currents of events as they move.

In accordance with Section 13 of the LIU Constitution, I have been granted a leave of absence by the Executive Council to assume the position of Secretary-Treasurer of the Department. Also in accordance with Article 13, in a short time an acting President will be appointed to fill the vacancy. Whoever shall be appointed will receive my complete cooperation and guidance. Lathing has been my whole adult life. Everything I have I owe to the Lathers Union. I have dedicated my every effort to further the cause of the Lathers International Union and in reverse order the members of the Lathers Union have given to me some of the greatest triumphs any man could expect.

The man who is chosen to act in my absence will be chosen by his qualifications, ability and dedication to the Lathers International Union.

In the interim I will continue to guide the affairs of the LIU. You will be kept fully informed.

With my sincerest best wishes I remain,

Sincerely and fraternally,
/s/ Robert A. Georgine
General President

President Georgine, 33, is a native of Chicago and was the first lather ever to serve on the National Joint Board for the Settlement of Jurisdictional Disputes in the construction industry.

He has served as financial secretary of the Illinois State Council of Lathers, as a member of the board of governors of the National Bureau of Lathing and Plastering, as chairman of the Lathers' Pension Fund and as co-chairman of the National Lathing Industry's Joint Apprenticeship Program.

Pres. Georgine attended the University of Illinois and DePaul University at nights while working at the trade. He became a journeyman in Local 74 in Chicago in 1953. After military service, he returned to the trade in 1956 to work his way up through all of the elective offices of the local union.

He was also assistant business manager of the Lathing Foundation in Chicago, which promotes activities in the lathing industry. He became an International Representative in the LIU in 1964 and later served as an assistant to the late President Sal Maso before being elected to the presidency during the International convention last summer in Vancouver, B.C.

President Georgine, his wife, Mary, and their four children have now moved to suburban Maryland outside Washington, D.C., from Park Ridge, Ill. "The greatest problem we faced in the move was finding a house we liked with lath-and-plaster walls and ceilings," said Mary Georgine. "I'm happy to say that we did find one."

Toward National HEALTH Security

Health care problems in America are frightening—to the patient, who must pay ever larger portions of his family budget for medical care, and to the medical professional, who must try to care for the health of his patients hindered by an outmoded delivery system.

What America needs as the heart of its medical care philosophy is a single primary goal—good health for all its peoples. The profit-making philosophy of the market place—to make money for those who provide and finance medical services—is not an acceptable philosophy for medical care.

Consider the plight of non-white Americans who live in poverty in city ghettos and rural shacks: Their men and women can expect seven fewer years of life than more affluent Americans: their babies have as much chance of surviving as infants in Ecuador; their young mothers have about the same chance of surviving childbirth as the women of Costa Rica.

Health care is not equally provided for all Americans. It is a myth that private insurance is doing—or can do—the job. More than 20 percent of the population under 65 is not covered against the most costly as-

Financing of medical care today is a patchwork effort of personal, private, state, local and federal funds. Medical bills are paid part by private insurance, part out of workers' pockets, part out of welfare funds, part out of Medicare.

For example, state and local governments are burdened with a $2.5 billion a year expenditure for health care, plus approximately $500 million a year to provide private health insurance for their employees.

National Health Security will be financed by taxes on employers, employees, the self-employed and unearned individual income, as well as from general revenues.

The workers' share—1 percent of wages and unearned income up to a total of $15,000—represents no new tax. Workers are now paying almost that amount toward Medicare. Further, National Health Security would significantly reduce workers' out-of-pocket, non-reimbursed medical expenses with the added bonus of better and more complete medical care.

Self-employed persons would be taxed at a 2.5 percent rate up to $15,000.

The employer's contribution—3.5 percent on payrolls—is about what many employers now pay for inadequate private health insurance for their employees. Some pay much more; some pay less; some pay none.

General tax revenues would account for the remainder of the Health Doctors will be free to choose whether or not they will participate. There will be no interference with their professional judgment.

The AFL-CIO believes that the National Health Security Bill is the only true comprehensive program of national health insurance that meets the challenges of care, financing, costs, development and reform. Indeed, the goal of Health Security is health.

America has the best available medical talent—but available to only part of the society.

pects of medical care—hospital and surgical services. More than half have no coverage for physician home and office visits. A miniscule number have coverage for dental costs.

Under National Health Security, every resident of the United States will be eligible to receive virtually the entire range of personal health care services without deductibles or coinsurance.

Security Trust Fund—approximately 50 percent of the total. This is not all new money. Medicaid, Medicare and other medical costs already constitute a significant and growing portion of the federal budget. Health Security would absorb these costs.

The program would also result in a direct form of revenue sharing by relieving state and local governments of much of their present health care burdens, additionally, state and local government employees would receive comprehensive benefits at no cost to the governmental units.

Last year, the average worker spent $324 on medical care for himself—$324 for his wife and $324 for each of his children—that is 10 percent more than 1969 per individual. Medical care costs have been rising at least twice as fast as the general cost of living. Blue Cross premiums have more than doubled, on the average, since the late 1950s.

The program will not constrict individual liberty. Doctors will be free to choose whether or not they will participate. Doctors can be paid by all present methods. There will be no lay interference with their professional judgment. Doctors will be freed from choosing treatment and services on the basis of a patient's ability to pay. Doctors will be freed from the time-consuming paperwork of billing patients.

Patients will be free to choose their physicians and health delivery systems. And their family physicians, in turn, will be free to refer patients to specialists. Patients will be freed from financial worries and will be able to seek medical care before it is too late.

At present, health care is fragmented, disorganized, inadequate and spotty. It is a non-system—a haphazard collection of isolated and unco-ordinate institutions.

The result is that care is often received at the most expensive location—hospitals—because that is where doctors are assured of being paid, when the doctor could treat the patient just as well and sometimes better in his office. Doctors and hospitals now are only paid when patients are ill; preventive medicine and early treatment are not practiced to the degree that will reduce illness and shorten hospital stays.

National Health Security has built-in financial, professional and other incentives to encourage organized arrangements for patient care and to encourage prevention and early diagnosis and treatment of disease.

Hospitals will be encouraged to increase efficiency; to cooperate in planning, purchase and utilization of new equipment and to eliminate unnecessary, wasteful and duplicative expenditures. Doctors will be given a financial stake in keeping their patients well. Care will be provided in the medical care system. In that time, he has met that crisis by vetoing a hospital construction bill and a measure to provide for the training of more family doctors and he threatened to close down vitally-needed Public Health Service hospitals.

After taking one action after another to forestall urgently needed health care measures, the President has, at long last, delivered a health message. The President's proposals, though lengthy, are nevertheless devoid of many essential details. One or two constructive features are note-

and their health delivery systems. Patients will be freed from financial health worries.

at the best—not the most expensive—location.

National Health Security is the proper program to provide quality health care for all Americans. The AFL-CIO is proud to endorse it. The American Medical Association's "medi-credit" plan and the private insurance carriers' "Healthcare" proposal are thinly disguised efforts to protect vested interests and insurance company profits. They are band-aids, where surgery is required.

There are other proposals—such as the bills introduced by Senators Jacob Javits (R-N.Y.) and Claiborne Pell (D-R.I.) and the proposal of the American Hospital Association—which are much more substantive.

But generally, all of the proposals, except National Health Security, lack at least one of the following: equal access to health care for all people; comprehensive coverage; restructuring of the health care system; effective incentives for quality and efficiency or controls on costs; or they depend on inadequate private insurance as carriers or intermediaries or both.

It has been nearly a year since President Nixon declared there is a "massive crisis" in the area of health care and a threat of a "breakdown" worthy, such as the President's belated recognition that pre-paid group practice can deliver better medical care at less cost, and his proposal to eliminate the onerous Medicare premium the elderly must now pay.

But it is evident that the President's approach, taken as a whole, is both piecemeal and inadequate. It places main reliance on discredited private insurance which has been largely responsible for the high cost, low quality medical care we have today. Under the President's proposals, there is no indication that either the private insurance organizations or the providers of medical care would be subject to effective cost controls or quality incentives.

His proposals fall far short of meeting the "massive crisis" in health care the President has himself recognized.

The AFL-CIO is urging the Congress to enact the bipartisan National Health Security Program during this session so it will be able to go into operation in 1974. It is and will remain the No. 1 legislative goal of organized labor until victory has been won.

Right to Strike Is Basic, Meany Declares; Condemns Government Meddling in Bargaining

The right to strike is "too basic to a free society," to tamper with, AFL-CIO Pres. George Meany told the third annual Collective Bargaining Forum in New York City.

Meany acknowledged the "strains and stresses" of collective bargaining that set the theme for a three-day conference attended by union and management negotiators, arbitrators, university experts and government officials.

But there are worse things than strikes, he emphasized, including government intervention to help one side in a dispute and compulsory arbitration, "the favorite solution of some academic theorists."

Earlier in the conference, Labor Sec. James D. Hodgson had deplored what he termed the "failures" of collective bargaining in the transportation and construction industries.

"Organized labor must realize that limitations on strike rights in disputes that can cause a massive disruption of the public welfare is a burning necessity," Hodgson said.

Meany's response was that "a free society cannot afford government efforts to undermine and short-circuit the collective bargaining process no matter how momentarily appetizing it may appear to the favored party."

Meany had caustic words for government efforts to intervene in the bargaining process.

He described the Council of Economic Advisers as "those busybodies who helped create today's economic mess and who now seek to inject themselves into the basic steel negotiations before the parties have even begun to talk."

He referred to Federal Reserve Board Chairman Arthur Burns as "the economic tinkerer whose 'game plan' brought about the Nixon recession."

But, Meany warned, while the Burns policy "would undoubtedly hold down wages, it would also undermine the nation's consumer purchasing power, the lifeblood of our economy."

Meany suggested that some of the "misguided advice" of critics of present-day collective bargaining comes from a "complete misunderstanding" of its purpose. Those who understand negotiations, he said, "know that problems are not created at the bargaining table. That's where they're solved."

Buying Power Cancelled By Rising 1970 Prices

For the first time in nine years, the purchasing power of the typical American family failed to rise during 1970 as price increases totally wiped out all gains in income, the Census Bureau has reported.

The report followed close on the heels of another census survey showing that inflation and high unemployment rates swelled the ranks of the poor by 1.2 million in 1970. It was the first time in 10 years that the number of Americans classified as "poor" showed an increase.

Median family income increased 4.6 percent in 1970, or $440, putting the total at $9,870. But price increases of 5.9 percent left buying power about the same or slightly less than it had been in 1969.

For blacks and other minorities, the median family income was $6,520, or about 65 percent that of whites. Blacks did, however, get a bigger increase in income than the overall average with median income for black families 5.3 percent, or $330.

Of the 51.9 million families in the United States, 8.9 percent received income under $3,000. Families with incomes in the $3,000-$6,000 range accounted for 10.4 percent of the total while another 11.8 percent received incomes of between $5,000 and $7,000.

At the top end of income brackets, 4.6 percent had incomes of $25,000 or more, while 17.7 percent received $15,000 and $25,000 and 26.8 percent of the total were in the $10,000-$15,000 bracket.

Median incomes of men and women were about $6,670 and $2,240

Veteran Political Leader Jack Kroll Is Dead at 86

Jack Kroll, veteran political strategist for the CIO and later for the AFL-CIO, has died in Cincinnati at the age of 86.

Kroll had been a vice president of the Clothing Workers for 38 years and manager of the ACWA's Cincinnati joint board for 40 years until his retirement in 1966.

Kroll was elected president of the Ohio CIO in 1939. He was named national chairman of the CIO's Political Action Committee in 1946 and served in that capacity until the merger of the AFL and the CIO in 1955. For the next two years he was co-director of the AFL-CIO Committee on Political Education.

He resumed his active role as manager of the ACWA's Cincinnati joint board in 1958. During this period, he also was president of the Ohio AFL-CIO.

respectively. The total for men was up 3.7 percent over 1969 and for women, 4.9 percent.

Full-time, year-round workers also stood still. Their increases in income, like those of the typical family, were completely eaten up by inflation.

Wage earners in the South, with an average income of $8,500, continued to lag about $2,000 behind their counterparts in the Northwest and North-Central regions.

College graduates, with a median income of $16,000, continued to earn about three times as much as those with considerably less education.

Charles R. Pinzone, Local 2 Business Agent, Elected Officer of Building Trades Council

Charles R. Pinzone, business agent of Local 2, Cleveland, was recently featured by the Cleveland "Plain Dealer," Ohio's largest newspaper, on the occasion of his election as executive secretary of the Cleveland Building and Construction Trades Council.

Charles R. Pinzone

The newspaper described Pinzone as "a quiet man who grew up with a pair of boxing gloves on his hands." Pinzone was selected by delegates from 19 building trades to head their association, representing about 35,000 workers. Pinzone, 54, defeated Ralph Bauman, 39, a business agent for the Brotherhood of Electrical Workers Local Union 38.

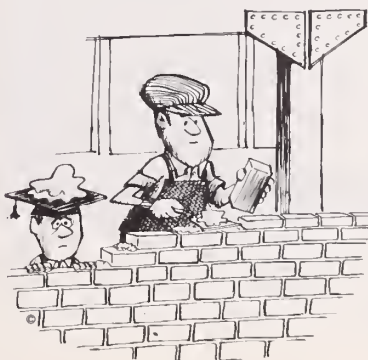

The reference to boxing gloves derives from Pinzone's victory in the Cleveland Golden Gloves tournament in 1938. During his early boxing career he was known as Chuck Ross. Pinzone has retained an interest in boxing and is now vice president of the Amateur Boxing Trainers Association.

Pinzone has also been appointed a vice president of the 150,000 member Cleveland Federation of Labor and has been named to both the Ohio Federation of Labor and the state's Building and Construction Trades Council.

Born in Cleveland, a graduate of John Adams High School, Pinzone became a lather and member of Local 2 in 1947. After a short time in the union, he ran for and was elected to a series of offices, including executive board member and financial secretary. He became a business agent eight years ago and a deputy International Representative. He also is the secretary of both the state and district lathers' councils.

A resident of suburban Parma, Pinzone is a member of the Parma Civil Service Commission, chairman of the Parma COPE, which covers Parma Heights and Seven Hills. He also serves as a board member on the Metropolitan Health Planning Corp., which plans health needs for Cuyahoga County. He and his wife, Doris, have eight children.

Pinzone was quoted as saying it was his intention to cause the Cleveland construction trades council to become more involved in the city's political life and in community affairs.

Local 46 Scholarship Fund Graduates First Group of Six Winners

The first group of six deserving children of Local Union 46, New York City, will be awarded their college degrees this June, climaxing the launching of the local's scholarship fund in 1967.

The Scholarship Fund, which was renamed last year the "Walter M. Matthews & John M. Sheehan Metal Lathers Local 46 Scholarship Fund" in honor of the two recently deceased business managers of Local 46, was established under the terms of collective bargaining and saw the awarding of six $1,000 yearly college grants in each of 1967, 1968, and 1969 with an increase to seven in 1970 and to nine in 1971.

High school seniors who are the children, step-children or foster children of eligible employees or pensioners, living or deceased, are eligible for consideration. The program is conducted by the Educational Testing Service of Princeton, New Jersey.

Local 46 is also well pleased in that the progress reports which are received regularly on each scholarship holder have shown all to be successfully pursuing their college careers.

Columbus Craftsmen Refurbish Residence

Union members in Columbus, Ohio, went to the rescue of a young policeman and father of five whose modest home was almost completely gutted by fire.

Skilled craftsmen of the Columbus Building & Construction Trades Council performed $9,000 worth of work on the home of Patrolman Richard Hopson, cleaning out the damaged interior, rewiring the house, installing new windows, doors and drywall and painting all six rooms. New flooring, carpeting, kitchen cabinets and appliances were donated by a number of contractors and suppliers.

How to Avoid Being Struck by Lightning

Lightning in summer thunderstorms can be a deadly hazard for golfers, fishermen, hikers and other outdoor sportsmen out for an afternoon of fun and relaxation.

Robert M. Oswald, national director of Red Cross Safety Programs, said "People on golf courses, in open areas, or who are in or on the water are in danger during thunderstorms. Lightning can strike anywhere, but it usually strikes the highest point, so if you are caught out in the open, the best course is to seek shelter immediately."

Citing safety precautions recommended by the Environmental Science Services Administration, Mr. Oswald said that, when a storm approaches, shelter should be sought in a building. If none is available, keep away from trees and take refuge in a ditch, cave or canyon. Avoid hill tops, open spaces, wire fences, metal such as golf clubs and fishing rods, exposed sheds and any electrically conductive elevated objects.

"If you feel an electrical charge—if your hair stands on end or your skin tingles—lighting may be about to strike you," said the safety director, adding, "drop to the ground immediately so you won't be a source for grounding the lightning."

If you are outside when a storm occurs, don't handle flammable materials in open containers, get out of water and out of small boats, and don't use farm machinery such as tractors in an open field. However, he added, automobiles offer excellent lightning protection, so stay in the car if you are traveling or seek shelter in it if no other shelter is near.

Plaster Cannot Be A Possible Poison Cause

Uninformed but well-meaning persons seeking to prevent lead poisoning in children have been associating plaster with such lead poisoning cases. As a matter of fact, plaster has only the very minutest traces of lead in its content; so little that lead poisoning from eating plaster is impossible.

The erroneous statements were contradicted by the Greater St. Louis Lathing and Plastering Promotional Association after local spokesmen had included plaster in a list of materials which could cause lead poisoning.

Actually, the lead in lead-based paints which adheres to wood, paper, plaster, etc., is the culprit which has caused cases of lead poisoning. It was pointed out that plaster is made of gypsum, a naturally-occurring sedimentary rock. Chemical analysis has shown the average "trace" quantity of lead in plaster to be 2/5 of 1 part per million. Expressed as a percentage, this would be 0.0005 percent. This would be only one-two thousandth of the 1 percent maximum allowable lead content established by the Health Department of the City of St. Louis.

Plaster is harmless; it is old-style lead-based paint which has proven dangerous, even fatal, to babies and small children.

Somewhere around the earth, lightning is flashing all the time. Speed of a discharge ranges from 100 to 1,000 miles-per-second for the downward leader track and ranges up to 87,000 miles per second for the powerful return stroke. Most people killed by lightning disregarded the basic precepts of safety.

DON'T MAKE THAT VACUUM BOTTLE A

Many working men and school children know that vacuum bottles will keep their food and drink either hot or cold, and use them daily. The overwhelming majority never have misadventures with their vacuum bottles, but mishandling can make the otherwise innocent object into a virtual "bomb."

The potential hazard posed by the vacuum bottle was cited recently by the National Safety Council, which listed the following incidents involving them:

A worker in Newton, Iowa, was spooning soup from a vacuum bottle when the bottle exploded in his face. The metal spoon cracked the glass lining, causing it to implode and then explode, sending glass fragments out of the opening and into the worker's face. Fortunately the worker was wearing his safety glasses during his lunch break and sustained few injuries.

A similar accident happened to a worker in Hamilton, Ontario. This time, however, the worker was not wearing safety glasses. One of his eyes had to be "frozen" to remove numerous glass splinters. He also suffered cuts to his face.

A housewife from Wilmington, Delaware, wrote the Safety Council: "I took a thermos out of my kitchen cabinet and rinsed it in cold water. When I began to fill it with ice cubes it exploded. Luckily, no one was injured but the glass flew around the kitchen as far away as four or five feet."

A mother from Springfield, Massachusetts, wrote about an experience that could have been disastrous to her kindergarten-age son. The boy dropped his vacuum bottle on the floor at school. Since there was no outward damage, the youngster didn't realize that the glass lining had broken. During the lunch period, the boy poured soda from the vacuum bottle into his cup. He then drank the soda, and thinking it was ice cubes, chewed on the broken glass. Miraculously, the mother wrote, the boy suffered no ill effects.

Does this mean that vacuum bottles are unsafe? Not at all, any more than any other useful item which can be misused in an unsafe manner. To guard against vacuum bottle mishaps, the National Safety Council offers these suggestions:

- Never insert metal utensils or wire bottle brushes into the bottle; they can scratch or break the glass liner. Plastic utensils, though, are safe to use for spooning food from the bottle.
- Do not use vacuum bottles to carry carbonated beverages, since pressure can build up inside the bottle as the released carbon dioxide expands.

- Avoid creating temperature extremes. (This would occur if the bottle were washed in hot water and immediately filled with a cold liquid.) And don't put ice cubes directly into a bottle; pour the liquid in first, then add the ice.

- Never eat or drink directly from the bottle.

- Do not wash a vacuum bottle in an automatic dishwasher.

Want to Live Longer? Plan on Getting Richer!

A study by the Congress of the Australian and New Zealand Association for the Advancement of Science revealed that the richer you are, the longer you live.

The report disclosed that males leaving an estate of more than $100,000 live, on the average, three years longer than all other males. Those leaving estates of $200,000 live about four years longer. The reasons ascribed include the facts that rich people can afford better diets, better medical attention and engage in less-hazardous occupations.

Vast "Walt Disney World" Now Rising Near Orlando, Florida

Pattern of Earlier "Disneyland" at Anaheim, California, Being Followed in Building Mammoth Amusement Complex

After doubling its work force in three months to 8,000 construction workers on site, Walt Disney World is literally racing the calendar to a planned October opening.

Easily the nation's largest and busiest private construction site, it is completely different from the world outside. Where else will you find workmen laying rails for horse-drawn streetcars, mounting golden turrets on an 18-story castle, installing elephants, manufacturing boulders or creating new rivers, lakes and jungles?

Prominent in the hordes of construction workers which scurry over the site like industrious ants are lathers from Local Union 251 in nearby Orlando.

Four years of site preparation and two years of construction have already gone into the project. It will cost $300 million by opening.

In the Magic Kingdom theme park, a mid-Victorian railroad station and City Hall are now complete.

Ghost figures—999 of them—have taken over management of the Haunted Mansion. An Asian temple ruins surrounded by tropical vegetation is nearly completed beside the Jungle Cruise riverbed.

The man-made Seven Seas Lagoon—a mile wide and three fourths of a mile long—is now fully ready for sailing or swimming. At a dry-dock near Bay Lake, the first of two 19th century side-wheel steamboats is nearly ready for launching. Tests have been completed on its walking-beam engine with giant rocker arm unlike any built in this century.

Six miles of monorail beams are in place and the first of six monorail trains is undergoing tests in Walt Disney World's newly built "round-house." Monorail maintenance is on the upper floor—four old-fashioned steam locomotives will be pampered on the lower level.

Finish work is well under way on the spectacular Contemporary Resort-Hotel. All of its 1,000 pre-assembled room units are in place. Suites, restaurants, shops, convention and banquet halls are taking shape. Huge space frames to support the 14-story glass walls at either end of the A-shaped building are being connected to air-conditioning lines. The monorail will run through the fifth floor of its central concourse.

At the Polynesian Village site, nearly half of the 500 rooms, built in an assembly plant four miles away, have been lifted into place.

Between two nearly completed championship golf courses, a bi-level clubhouse is more than half-finished. It will provide restaurant and locker facilities for golfers. The rolling fairways and broad greens of the Palm and Magnolia courses are nearly ready for play.

A Main Entrance complex is 70 percent completed to provide guest reception facilities, lost and found, pet motel and ticket booths. At this location, guests not only choose their method of travel across the lagoon to the Magic Kingdom—by steamboat, launch, tram or monorail—but their admission plan.

The vast majority of guests are expected to use the Magic Kingdom ticket book at $4.75 which will provide admission, transportation and seven attractions for adults. Juniors (12 thru 17) pay $4.25 and children (3 thru 11) pay $3.75. An eleven-adventure book at $1 more in each category is also available. Hotel rates will begin at $22 per room with no extra charge for children under 18 in the same room with parents.

Construction is under way on 230 campsites in nearby Fort Wilderness campgrounds to provide another kind of accommodations for Walt Disney World guests. Hotel and camping rates include unlimited use of transportation—boats, surface vehicles and overhead monorail which connect the recreation and entertainment facilities.

A four-lane divided boulevard connects the main parking area with U.S. 192. Paving, lighting and landscaping are under way in the 12,000-vehicle main parking area. (The Pentagon in Washington, D.C. has only 10,000 parking spaces.)

Within the theme park, theaters are being finished for several of the "Audio-Animatronics" system shows including Country Bear Jamboree, Mickey Mouse Revue and Hall of Presidents. Programming has been completed on the It's a Small World, Mickey Mouse Revue, Haunted Mansion and Sunshine Pavilion shows.

Aerial view of Disney World under construction. Layout is similar to ever-popular Disneyland at Anaheim, California. Mid-Victorian railroad station which dominates foreground will be main entrance area. More than 8,000 building tradesmen are rushing the Florida project, largest private construction project in the nation.

Gothic arches and stained glass windows are installed in the second level of the Cinderella Castle for King Stefan's Banquet Hall, while in the main hall, glass mosaic murals telling the Cinderella story are being cemented in place.

Exteriors are complete on such varied structures as a steamboat landing and keel boat dock, Colonial Tavern and Alpine Chalet, Main Street Emporium and Haunted Mansion.

From all across the nation cars, boats, trams, wooden horses, machinery, lights and millions of other components have been shipped and stored in warehouses at Walt Disney World pending installation. Included were 337 huge monorail beams, sent all the way from Tacoma, Washington. Two 6,000-kilowatt gas turbine generators came from Canada for the Walt Disney World Central Energy Plant which will produce about half the resort's electricity, plus air-conditioning for the Magic Kingdom and the hotels.

An automated trash disposal system is nearly finished. Under construction is a central commissary, telephone plant, laundry and other service facilities.

The Walt Disney World Preview Center has welcomed nearly a million guests to see a film-and-model glimpse of the Vacation Kingdom. Opened early in 1970, the Preview Center is located 15 miles southwest of Orlando on Highway 535 at Interstate 4.

Walt Disney World's main boulevard entrance, when it opens next October, will be on U.S. Highway 192 near Interstate 4 about 20 miles from Orlando. Convenient transportation will be available from major airports and train stations.

The new Vacation Kingdom will employ more than 6,000 operating workers at opening. Surveys forecast a first-year total attendance of 10 million guests at Walt Disney World.

Photo taken in early spring shows ironwork for one of the entertainment units rising, with the gilded towers of the Cinderella Castle already completed in the background. Workmen are fighting time to make an opening-day deadline next October.

Local 190 Members Lath 'Wraparound Fireplace'

A "wrap-around" fireplace that could only have been built with metal lath and plaster is the focal point of a home under construction in Minneapolis.

Sander & Co., 9530 James Avenue South, Minneapolis, is the lathing and plastering contractor on this unique job. John Sander says that alternative materials would simply have been out of the question "with all those turns in the design."

The fireplace, which some of the construction workers jokingly related to "The Flintstones," the cartoon comedy on television, occupies a space about 12 x 12 x 12 on the kitchen-dining room level of the home. (Reason for the joke: the fireplace looks, on completion, as though it had been carved out of a solid rock.) Channel iron, steel studs and 3.5 metal lath were used to form the framework of the fireplace, which sweeps in a graceful curvilinear design.

The design, by Architect Roger Johnson of the firm of Horthy, Elving & Associates, Inc., literally encloses a group sitting by the fireside, for conversation, reading, or simply enjoying the gentle art of watching an open fire.

What actually amounts to an enclosure, a separate room, is gained by this concept. The advantages are not only that of economical room divider, but, more importantly, a provision for privacy without interrupting the atmosphere of openness which the home has achieved through the use of large window areas, skylights and levels which meld smoothly.

Since the fireplace and its seating are virtually a separate room, special lighting has been arranged. Again, metal lath and plaster make it possible to incorporate effective lighting in an unobtrusive fashion that does not intrude into the flow of the pattern.

Eighteen lights controlled by a rheostat are recessed around the inside of the base of the fireplace. Three low-voltage reading lights are recessed at convenient intervals in the section of the overhead curve. An imported flagstone floor and cushions will complete the "fireplace room."

The structure itself has been given a fine sandfloat finish, the color blending with the wall color (egg-shell) in the rooms on that level.

The fireplace is immediately off the dining room and is expected to be an especially popular family gathering place, as well as a conversation center for dinner guests.

So innovative was the design that a special mock-up miniature was created first to assure that the finished structure would conform

Arnold Blank, lathing foreman, and Roger Lindgren, both of Local 190, were the lathers on the job. LuVern Hendrickson, Plasterers' Local 65, was the plasterer on the job.

Don't Buy Metlox Ware Potters' Union Requests

The International Brotherhood of Pottery and Allied Workers has asked that all members of organized labor refrain from buying products of the Metlox Manufacturing Co., Manhattan Beach, California.

The firm has refused to bargain in good faith and is currently charged before the U.S. Court of Appeals on a contempt of court charge stemming from its anti-union activity.

In addition to boycotting the Metlox products, the pottery workers' union asked that any union member who finds an outlet handling the Metlox ware should write to Lester Null, President, IBPAW, Box 988, East Liverpool, Ohio, and tell him the name and address of the dealer.

Trade names of Metlox ware are "Vernonware" and "Poppy Trail."

Brown Elected Northwest President

Ted R. Brown, Gordon Brown, Inc., Seattle, Wash., has been named president of the Northwest Lath and Plaster Bureau, longest-operating industry-wide group active in promoting the trade. He succeeds L. Ernest Trulson, Wall Finishes, Inc., also of Seattle.

During a three-day convention, the members voted to hold the 1972 convention in Vancouver, B.C.

Change Centigrade to Fahrenheit

To convert centigrade temperature to fahrenheit, remember "9-to-5." Multiply the centigrade by 9, then divide the result by 5 and add 32. Example: $100\text{ C.} \times 9 = 900 \div 5 = 180 + 32 = 212\text{ F.}$ (water's boiling point.) Use the reverse of the formula for converting F. to C.: first subtract 32, then multiply by 5 and divide by 9.

Labor's "Political Muscle"; How Large Is It? An Answer to The Reader's Digest

The Reader's Digest recently printed an article entitled: "Where Labor Gets Its Political Muscle." The writer, one George Denison, went on to report that labor unions use their members' dues money in partisan political activities.

The AFL-CIO sponsors the Committee on Political Education (COPE). Purpose of the COPE drive is to seek voluntary contributions from members of organized labor so that candidates friendly to labor and its programs can be aided.

Isn't it reasonable to ask: Why would labor spend time and money wheedling contributions from the membership if it was possible to simply take it out of the treasury? The fact is that it is against the law to use any member's dues money for partisan political purposes. Instead, organizations solicit voluntary contributions from their members in keeping with the law.

Contributions from the nation's working men and women cannot even begin to compare with the political contributions by the rich and super-rich.

To the thoughtful and fair-minded reader, the Digest article would raise another point: If organized labor has as much "political muscle" as the article alleges it to have, how is it that today we have an obviously anti-union administration in Washington? How is it that so many of the legislative proposals placed before Congress by organized labor fail to become law?

The article quotes AFL-CIO President George Meany as saying: "I think, frankly, we have the most effective lobby in Washington." Labor's lobby is effective because it is well-organized. When the building trades, for example, hold a legislative session in Washington, building tradesmen from all over the nation visit with their elected representatives and senators. They place their case before their congressional delegations, as any citizen has a right to do.

Vacation Money Due

The real strength of "labor's lobby" is detailed in the article: the volunteers who, 72,225 strong, canvassed house-to-house in 1968; the 94,457 election day volunteers who served as car-poolers, baby-sitters and poll-watchers. Yes, organized labor definitely has a manpower potential!

CORRECTION

Local 235, Daytona Beach, Florida, is a participating local in the General Pension Plan and was inadvertently left off the list in the June journal.

The political effectiveness of organized labor will never be fully realized, although we can continue to seek to approach full effectiveness. The maximum will never be attained: contributions from all 18 million members of organized labor.

But you can help move toward the maximum by sending your contribution to COPE, 815 16th St. N.W., Wash., D.C. 20006. Your contribution, added to millions of others, will help to reverse the reactionary trend of our government and help elect liberal legislators. Be sure to tell COPE you're a member of the LIU.

Administration's Proposed Reorganization Plan Would Weaken FTC Consumer Protection

The Executive Department reorganization, proposed by the Nixon Administration, which would eliminate the Department of Labor as a voice of workers, would also undermine the Federal Trade Commission as an agency for consumers.

This warning was issued to the Fifth Consumer Assembly of Greater

New York by FTC Commissioner Mary Gardner Jones. She had sharp words about the recommendations of the President's Advisory Council on Executive Reorganization.

If implemented with the FTC, she said, they would "so weaken the commission that it would be unable to take significant action to respond to the totality of consumers' needs . . . in the marketplace."

Miss Jones pointed out that the council would abolish the Federal Trade Commission as it is presently organized—putting its consumer protection activities into a single-administrator Federal Trade Practices Agency and its antitrust responsibilities into a three-member Federal Antitrust Board.

"The council offers virtually no rationale for its proposed separation of the commission's antitrust and consumer protection activities other than its bland and totally unsupported assertion that the FTC would function more efficiently."

Miss Jones declared that the commission would function much less effectively if its so-called antitrust responsibilities were spun off from its concerns with marketplace practices that defraud and mislead consumers.

"The Administration would like you to put part of this in a bank. Excess purchasing power causes inflation, you know!"

"THE INJURY TO ONE IS THE CONCERN OF ALL"

*From the Old

Dramatically with Lath and Plaster

FROM THE PRESIDENT'S DESK

Labor assembled in Washington, last month, to attack the nation's number one domestic problem—unemployment. For two days in mid-July I joined other AFL-CIO union leaders in discussions of what can be done to put more people to work.

The Job Conference brought out one indisputable point: the number of jobs available to the total American working force is pitifully inadequate. According to Congressman Carl Albert, Speaker of the House of Representatives and a conference participant, the crisis of unemployment in our country is reaching "breadline proportions."

AFL-CIO President George Meany had strong comments on the situation, too. He called upon the Nixon Administration to do something about the situation and do it now. He told us:

"They blame inflation on inflation's chief victims . . . They blame unemployment on those who are losing their jobs . . . They blame high prices on those who cannot afford to pay them."

He found the White House itself to blame for much of the nation's troubles.

However, there is reason to believe the situation is not a hopeless one. On the second day of the conference, as though in response to our outcry, President Nixon signed into law the Emergency Employment Act, which is designed to create between 150,000 and 200,000 city and state jobs, authorizing Federal expenditures of $2.25 billion over a two-year period. Labor has been pressing for this legislation for a long time.

"Passage of the Emergency Employment Act and the President's agreement to sign the bill despite earlier opposition," said Senator Gaylord Nelson, "represents a successful completion of a long campaign to make public service employment a major component of our national manpower policies. Properly funded and imaginatively administered, the Emergency Employment Act can begin channeling capable people into good jobs."

The bill is indeed a beginning, but there is much, much more to be done. As Senator Henry Jackson states, "economic growth is essential to provide an adequate number of jobs for American workers."

If we are going to reduce unemployment, our economy must expand at a much more rapid pace than at present.

As Senator Jackson summarized it: "The most important single responsibility facing any administration is the wise management of the nation's economy. A stable, vigorous economy is the key to all our other national goals. A full-employment economy provides jobs and a sense of purpose for Americans. It builds tax revenue for state and local governments. It releases money for housing, for automobiles, for new investment by businesses and families. It provides the resources to protect our environment, rebuild our cities, improve our health care and assist the poor. It is the key to equal opportunity for young people and minorities of all races."

Further, Congress must be moved to consider legislation which will rectify the present lack of a construction trade policy in this country. Present policies are rapidly bringing about a steady and considerable loss of jobs in many industries.

Something must also be done to liberalize our unemployment compensation programs to meet the nation's current needs.

In all areas of the unemployment problem it is the responsibility of our union as well as all elements of organized labor to work for the best interests of the American worker. While the problem is not one of our creation, it is one which we bear, and only determined action on our part can help to avert the alarming consequences.

BY THE GENERAL SECRETARY TREASURER

It is difficult to understand the "double-think" whereby President Nixon asserts that construction wages are inflationary while about one out of every ten construction workers is jobless. This was his stated objection to the $2 billion public works bill which he vetoed. The bill was aimed at creating more than 400,000 jobs in communities now suffering from heavy unemployment. It would enable the construction of needed waste treatment plants, health centers, water and sewer projects and other installations which AFL-CIO President George Meany has characterized as "of vital and lasting worth to the nation." In voicing his disapproval of the veto, Meany cited a large backlog of thousands of applications for funds to finance the needed installations and services.

Sponsor of the vetoed bill was House Public Works Committee Chairman Joseph Blatnik of Minnesota. He termed the veto "callous." House Speaker Carl Albert of Oklahoma had said of the bill: "There is no more important bill than this" to put people back to work. But the facts of life dictate that the Republicans in the Senate hold the key to over-riding the veto. Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania has already gone on record as saying that he will lead the fight to prevent the veto from being over-ridden.

Evidently the President's advisors have chosen to totally ignore the fact that unemployment in the construction industry is substantially above that of the economy as a whole. In his veto message, Nixon complained that spending more money on public works construction would merely reward a group of workers whose wage increases have been higher than the increases gained in other industries. He claims that construction pay hikes "have affected collective bargaining elsewhere, thus fueling inflation." The vetoed bill also included an extension of the Appalachian Regional Development Act and regional commissions for other areas of the nation. In his message, the President said that he approves of these programs and hopes that Congress will pass separate legislation, but only as a "stopgap measure" until his special revenue-sharing proposals can be enacted. As a matter of practical politics, the chances of over-riding the presidential veto seem extremely remote. While a number of House Republicans broke ranks to vote for the legislation, only three Republicans in the Senate defied the administration and voted for the accelerated public works provision in the legislation.

The administration seems to think that the key to prosperity is in unemployment. Apparently the administration believes that, if we have enough unemployed, (presumably bidding against each other for available jobs,) wages will stay low. If wages stay low, there will not be excess purchasing power. If there isn't excess purchasing power, there will be no inflation, and prosperity will result. This is, of course, faulty reasoning. First of all, in this day of widespread unionism, working men realize that if they allow their ranks to be split so that they bid for jobs against each other, they will ALL soon be unable to obtain a living wage. They are going to work for union wages . . . or not at all. In another day and time, perhaps the forces of management (aided by the forces of government) could starve them out. But there has been too much social legislation put on the books to allow that. Meanwhile, the demand for construction completely outside the realm of federal financing continues. The present administration chooses to completely disregard the influence of spiralling profits on inflation. After all, inflation is most truly reflected in the prices we are paying for goods and services . . . not in the wages paid to those who produce them.

The Cover Story

A Dramatic Transformation in Jefferson City

Imagination in architecture and the flexibility of lath and plaster resulted in a dramatic transformation of an ordinary building into a dramatic landmark after the Missouri Baptist Convention bought the six-story Missouri Hotel at the corner of High and Adams Streets in Jefferson City, Missouri.

Architects Warren and Goodin of Springfield, Missouri, were commissioned to handle the extensive renovation of the interior and exterior of the old building after it was bought in 1970.

The architects, working closely with the General Contractor, Trice Construction Company, and Lathing and Plastering Contractor, M. C. Rippeto Co., utilized the versatility of metal lath and plaster systems. Considerable weight and cost savings were realized by incorporating new techniques and prefabrication of various metal lath components to develop the fins and arches required.

Vertical fin subassemblies were prefabricated out of channels by cutting and bending the uniform rib members in mass production. The rib members were then placed in a portable jig at the job site. They were welded into 12-foot lengths, lightweight and easily handled by one man. Two parallel channels were properly mounted to the old brick wall. The legs of the ribs were then welded to the track formed by the wall-mounted channels.

After the prefabricated vertical fins were welded in place, eight feet on center, the ribs were then covered with galvanized metal lath.

The hollow fins were functional as well as decorative. Extensive interior renovations required many changes in the electrical, plumbing and mechanical piping, which were all concealed in the hollow fins.

The old window openings were framed and braced with channel iron, then covered over with galvanized metal lath. The brick surface was covered with stucco mesh. Zinc corner casing beads and expansion joints were installed to ready the assemblies for Portland cement plaster.

Over a third of a million pounds of Portland cement was used in the scratch and brown coats to furnish the base for the job-applied exposed aggregate finish. A white cement modified matrix, as manufactured by Finestone Corp., was selected for use on the fins with a No. 1 white marble aggregate and flat areas between the fins used a pigmented matrix. Black obsidian aggregate "B" size (2 & 3) sealer was applied after installation according to the manufacturer's recommendations.

Because of the striking beauty of the job-applied exposed aggregate finish, the Missouri Baptist Assn. decided to cover the two remaining inside exterior surfaces of the "L" shaped building which was not planned in the beginning. On its hilltop location, the striking building is a particularly beautiful sight when lighted at night.

The lathers' and plasterers' application of the exposed aggregate finish avoided delays because of their unique ability to adapt to the many job dimensional variances. There was also much interior lathing and plastering.

"Imagination" is the beginning of creating with lath and plaster systems.

Another Big Rise in Prices Scuttles Earners' Hopes of Inflation Slowdown

The Consumer Price Index shot up six-tenths of one percent in May, the sharpest increase in 15 months, puncturing hopes that the rate of inflation had leveled off.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics reported that higher prices for apparel, used cars, homes and postage—an increase from 6 to 8 cents for first class mail—accounted for most of the increase.

Prices actually rose five-tenths of one percent during the month, but the seasonally adjusted formula used by the government pushed the rate higher. The May increase brought the index to 120.8 per cent of the 1967 average, meaning that the same goods and services that cost $10 in 1967, now cost the consumer $12.08.

AFL-CIO Pres. George Meany termed the sharp increase in living costs further proof that Pres. Nixon's economic policies "add up to a miserable failure."

"The Nixon Administration stubbornly refuses to see the light and take action to correct the economy,"

Meany told delegates to the Seafarers convention in Washington. Commerce Sec. Maurice Stans had addressed the same group hours before the May CPI figures were released. He told delegates that the Administration had brought inflation within "controllable boundaries."

But after the BLS released the statistics, a White House spokesman said last month's sharp increase was neither unexpected, nor conclusive.

The following day, the Administration pointed to increases in earnings, nothing that May was the fifth consecutive month in which earnings showed an increase over year-ago figures.

Real spendable earnings—weekly take-home pay expressed in terms of 1967 dollars on which the CPI is based—amounted to $91.13 for the average worker with three dependents.

This was an increase of 47 cents, or five-tenth of one percent over April. Real spendable earnings were 1.6 percent higher than in May, 1970, but still 1.9 percent less than the all-time high reached in September, 1968.

Over-the-month increases occurred for workers in all major industries except services.

Take-home pay advanced $1.11 during May to $110.08. Compared with a year ago, take-home pay was up $6.31, or 6.1 percent.

With gains of only three-tenths of one percent in March and April, and smaller gains in the first two months of the year, the CPI had been rising at a quarterly rate of 2.8 percent.

Approximately 43,000 workers will receive cost-of-living escalator adjustments based on the national CPI for May or one of the individual city indexes.

About 9,000 workers who were protected by cost-of-living clauses will not get adjustments because they already have received the maximum stipulated in their contracts.

President Georgine, Alternate to Wage Panel

General President Robert Georgine has been named as an alternate member for labor to the Construction Industry Stabilization Committee, it has been announced by the Department of Labor.

The committee of 12 members consists of four representatives each from labor, management and the public. John T. Dunlop, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, Harvard University, is chairman of the committee.

The committee, with functions similar to those of the Wage Adjustment

Board created during World War II, has similar functions in regard to wages in the building and construction industry. Last February 23, Pres. Nixon suspended the provisions of the Davis-Bacon Act. On March 29 he re-instituted the Davis-Bacon Act and, at that time, created the Construction Industry Stabilization Committee.

There are four regular members and five alternate members of the committee for both labor and management.

Dramatic new panel technique was used in this Minneapolis low-income housing project.

36 Panels Per Floor In This Modern Structure

Grant Park Renewal, Phase 1, Minneapolis

Strength and economy were two convincing factors in favor of a new combination of steel stud, metal lath and cement plaster when the Grant Park Renewal Phase I was in the planning stage in Minneapolis, Minn.

This FHA 236-financed project is owned by the RCBR (Residents Committee Bethune Redevelopment) of Minneapolis and comprises about 110,000 square feet of living space on 12 floors plus a ground floor area, being made available to lower income families.

The exterior wall system consists of 36 panels per floor, each panel averaging about 8 x 12 feet in size. The steel stud framework for each panel is first measured to fit the wall opening, then laid back down on the floor for fabrication on the job site. Foam insulation is applied, metal lath, then scratch and finish coat in a pebble dash pattern is sprayed on. When dry, the panel is lifted into place, caulked and is then ready for interior finishing.

Al Kastner & Sons Inc. of St. Paul, is the lathing and plastering contractor on the job. Dave Kastner, who worked with Inland Steel and Clint Fladland, executive director of the Minnesota Lathing and Plastering Bureau, in selling and engineering the system, is enthusiastic about this type of exterior wall. "It's fast and efficient," he sums up. "The men have no trouble with it; it's geared to what they've been doing before and we've had no problems."

He points out that the building owner is not only saving on construction time, but saves on exterior finishing as well. "With this system, you've eliminated the need for painting except for the concrete columns and, even there, painting wouldn't be necessary: it's optional."

Jerry Hintz of Local 483, St. Paul, was lathing foreman on the job, with a crew ranging from seven to nine men. Joe Seeger was plastering foreman, with a crew of four or five men.

Arvid Elness of the architectural firm of Williams-O'Brien Associates Inc., Builders Exchange, Minneapolis, noted that "no outside scaffolding was needed with this system, a saving in itself." The structure was enclosed and, since four floors were completed under wintertime conditions, this meant that cold weather work could proceed efficiently. "This makes for very controlled conditions," the architect's spokesman pointed out. "I think that is reflected in the uniform texture and color of the panels."

Steel stud panel framework is fitted to wall openings, then laid back down on floor for completion. Here Allan Grovum, Local 483, welds studs.

Foam insulation is applied and trimmed and metal lath attached. Trimming excess insulation is Joseph Hara, Local 190.

Successive coats of plaster are applied and panel allowed to dry. Joe Seeger, Plasterers Local 6, sprays a finish coat.

Panel is tilted into place, caulked and exterior wall is finished; no additional treatment is needed (no painting, which means future savings in maintenance). Hoisting the panel are, from left: Julius Hickerson, Joe Seeger, Robert Wise and Mike Kollar, all employed by Al Kastner & Sons.

More Locals Must Respond, If Health And Welfare Plan Is To Become Reality

Because the delegates to the 1970 LIU convention realized the continuing and increasing importance of health and welfare insurance in today's complex world, Resolution 45 was voted by the convention.

In brief, Resolution 45 authorized the General President to appoint a committee to consult with insurance experts in an effort to establish an International-wide health and welfare program for the membership. It also provided that local unions interested in exploring the possibility of such establishment should notify the General President to that effect in writing so the General President would have something concrete to show the insurance experts.

In late 1970, a questionnaire was sent to all local unions which asked six questions regarding health and welfare plans on the local union level. Thirty local unions representing a total of 770 members have returned the questionnaire to date.

Locals Which Responded

Local unions which have returned the questionnaire are: 4, 7, 26, 40, 49, 70, 75, 76, 80, 82, 102, 105, 107, 142, 203, 208, 217, 228, 262, 263, 327, 341, 349, 401, 492, 509, 511, 512, 516 and 523. Other local unions may make late returns which would not be listed above.

President Georgine and Secretary-Treasurer Ferguson, in the initial questionnaire, declared: "In our opinion, this is a very good resolution and every effort should be made to develop a health and welfare plan for the membership of the LIU. However, cooperation on the parts of all concerned is necessary if we are to implement the intent of this resolution."

Returning the questionnaire, of itself, would not mean that the local union would be obligated to participate in a health and welfare plan. It would only provide a profile view of what the health and welfare situation is and what the future might bring in that regard.

Information Needed

According to Resolution 45, the committee in order to explore the question of health and welfare insurance has to have information before any progress can be made in that direction (providing the majority of members desire it). At the present time, no one knows whether the members desire it or not because the returns from the local unions have been so scanty. Insurance spokesmen have said that a minimum contribution of 25¢ per hour would be necessary in order to begin a fairly adequate schedule of benefits. In later times, if the majority willed it, benefits might possibly be increased.

We would urge every local union which has not yet returned the questionnaire to do so as soon as possible so the committee will have data with which it may go ahead with the project or which will indicate that the project should be abandoned.

Nixon Scores Health Security As AMA Doctors Applaud

Pres. Nixon found a friendly and enthusiastic audience at the American Medical Association House of Delegates meeting in Atlantic City for an attack on National Health Security, the AFL-CIO-backed national health insurance program.

The President claimed that the bill introduced by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy (D-Mass.) and Rep. Martha W. Griffiths (D-Mich.) would "tear apart" the present health care system. He told the doctors that "no system of health care in this nation will ever work unless the doctors of this nation make it work."

He also took the occasion to try and drum up doctor support for the Administration proposal which the AFL-CIO Executive Council has called a "financial bailout for insurance companies" and "a giant step backward."

But Nixon did not mention the AMA's own proposal, "medicredit," to give tax credits for persons who buy private insurance.

The President said the Kennedy-Griffiths bill would cost the federal government more than $77 billion in 1974.

In Washington, Sen. Kennedy pointed out that "the cost of Health Security is not new money. Americans will still be paying the same $77 billion for health care in 1974 whether we have the Health Security Act or not."

White Collar Workers, Industrial Workers, Study Four-Day Week; How Do Construction Workers Stand?

Many years ago, when the move was toward the five-day week, management railed at the proposal and some of the clergy condemned the proposal as "ungodly." "The Bible said that God worked at creating the earth in six days and, on the seventh, He rested! Should God's creatures work less than He did?" they thundered.

Despite the unreal arguments of the pastors and the solid opposition of employers, the five-day week progressed (sometimes through a half-way point of five-and-a-half days) until, it is now practically universal. In most instances where conditions demand more than five days, premium pay is earned.

Now there is a move afoot for a four-day week with longer hours per day. Many workers are in favor of it, but some oppose it. Most employers are against it but, surprisingly, some are for it. Experiments are being conducted in many lines of endeavor. Some of the experiments have yielded excellent results. It is reassuring that, in many such instances, labor unions and management are cooperating.

There are many questions to be answered. Some of them are: Can workers be as productive and efficient in a 10-hour day as they are in eight hours? Will companies be penalized in terms of overtime pay? Can management obtain flexibility in work schedules? Will the proposal bring on extensive "moonlighting"?

More than 100 small companies are now experimenting with the four-day week. But it would take a fantastic amount of work planning and scheduling to introduce the 4-day week into something of the stature of U.S. Steel or General Motors.

Proponents of the 4-day week contend that it will cut down on absenteeism and improve worker output. Some plants have reported that these results have been obtained. Opponents say that, if the 4-day, 10 hour work-week were obtained, the demand would soon be made for the 4-day, 8-hour work-week. Without provision for protective tariffs, opponents say, the lower-wage, longer-work-week nations would bury "U.S. production under a flood of lower-priced goods. They also contend that our export trade would suffer greatly.

Opponents to the 10-hour day say that worker fatigue would actually reduce production. But this argument from the management side was never heard when labor was moving from the 10-hour day to the 8-hour day!

A major obstacle to the 4-day week is the present law which provides for overtime pay after eight hours a day.

Recreation-based industries and travel-based services would like to see the 3-day weekend come every week, since it would provide a boom for such industries.

Because of the introduction of much labor-saving and time-saving mechanical devices, production-per-worker has increased considerably in the past 30 years. Where men formerly sweated and strained at manual labor jobs, machinery guided by them now does the job. The long-term trend probably is to a shorter work-week. The 40-hour work week has already been negotiated, in many instances, down to 37½ hours a week. In many offices (if not also in the production plant) the 35-hour work-week is already in effect. In all probability, if the 4-day work week comes into general usage, history will repeat itself and we will first see a move toward early quitting time on Friday to provide a shortened number of hours in the work-week. Next will come the 4½-day week with noon quitting time on Friday just as, a generation ago, there were some noon Saturday quitting times.

Eventually, as more jobs are mechanized and automation moves ahead, labor will successfully demand a just share of such savings and the move may be on toward the 4-day work week. But on the other hand, perhaps it won't. There is always an irreducible minimum. Whether we have reached it with the 35-hour, 5-day work-week or not . . . only time will tell.

I only got in 14 days last month, and after all the tax deductions that doesn't leave much for fun on an apprentice's pay. Besides we got a kid coming in a couple of months, and I don't like to leave Norma alone any more than I have to."

"Thank the Lord that the union health and welfare plan will pick up the tab for Norma and the kid."

Nixon's 4% Jobless Rate Goal Means 3.5 Million Unemployed

The Nixon Administration's stated willingness to accept a national unemployment rate of 4 percent is totally unacceptable to organized labor because 3.5 million Americans would still be out of work, AFL-CIO Economist Frank Pollara has declared.

Pollara, assistant director of the federation's Department of Research, said the labor movement rejects the idea that a jobless force that size is "a tolerable rate of unemployment." He declined to speculate as to what would be an "irreducible minimum" unemployment level, but indicated the area of 2 percent would be much more realistic than the President's 4 percent figure.

Public Service Feature

Questioned by reporters on the network radio interview Labor News Conference, Pollara urged implementation of a national manpower policy centered on job-creation in both the private and public sectors of the economy. He said that a "public service employment program" should be a "fundamental feature" of national manpower policy.

"Public service employment . . . is not a welfare program," the union spokesman asserted. "but the creation of opportunities for productive and necessary work in libraries, educational systems, parks and other public facilities, particularly for unemployed, underemployed and disadvantaged workers, regardless of whether or not they happen to receive welfare assistance."

No Time Limit

Pollara agreed that putting a time limit on public service employment, as the Administration proposed, would have the effect of "legislating a dead-end job," particularly now, when unemployment stands at 6.2 percent of the work force and shows few signs of substantial improvement in the immediate future.

Rather than a "transmission belt" to a non-existent job in the private sector, Pollara said, public service jobs should offer a chance for permanent employment, in which "the individual could move right on up

Labor rejects the Administration's stated willingness to accept a 4 percent national unemployment rate, declared Frank Pollara, center, assistant director of the AFL-CIO's Dept. of Research, on the network radio interview Labor News Conference. Questioning him were Donald Finley, left, of United Press International and Frank Swoboda of Business Week magazine. 18-Year-Olds Get Ballot In State, Local Elections

The right of 18-year-olds to vote in all federal, state and local elections—long sought by organized labor—has now been written into the Constitution after the required three-fourths of the states ratified the proposal.

Ratification of the 26th Amendment means that 18-year-olds will be able to vote in all elections this year, including gubernatorial contests in Louisiana and Kentucky, mayoral races in Boston, San Francisco and other cities.

The AFL-CIO has long supported the 18-year-old vote, and Federation Pres. George Meany testified for it at congressional hearings.

Under the law passed by Congress, 18-year-olds were given the right to vote in federal elections. But the Supreme Court said Congress did not have the power to establish a voting age for states and municipalities.

The AFL-CIO Executive Council pointed out that cumbersome and costly election procedures would be required if 18-year-olds were not permitted to vote in other races as well, and that, at any rate, "we believe that 18-year-olds should have the vote."

The amendment was ratified in two months and seven days, the shortest time ever for a ratification.

Meany Urges Push For More Jobless Benefits

Two years ago, President Nixon urged the states to raise unemployment benefits so as to avoid the need for Federal standards. The states haven't done so and the AFL-CIO is now urging Nixon to push Congress into taking Federal action.

AFL-CIO President George Meany has written the President a letter recalling the Nixon recommendations that the states set a maximum benefit "of two-thirds off the average wage in the state so that benefits of 50 percent of wages would be paid to at least 80 percent of the insured workers."

That hasn't happened. Meany told the President that only four jurisdictions—Arkansas, Hawaii, Utah and the Virgin Islands—now meet this "humanitarian goal". Only five others—Colorado, Connecticut, Wisconsin, New Hampshire and Maryland—"come anywhere near the goal."

"The others fail miserably."

In the light of this failure, Meany declared that "thirty-five years of bitter experience prove that only Federal standards will raise benefits to an adequate level."

"The dismal record of the states during the past two years in ignoring your call for improving benefits underscores this point," Meany told Nixon.

"In view of the record of inaction by the states, the plight of millions of unemployed and the need for restoring purchasing power in the economy," Meany continued, "may we now expect that you will now ask Congress for Federal action, as you clearly implied in your message of two years ago?"

Meany called on the President to recommend to Congress immediate enactment of minimum Federal unemployment standards in line with at least 50 percent benefits for 80 percent of insured workers.

"That is the desirable goal and there is no excuse for any further delay in Federal action." (PAI)

JOBLESS PAY INEQUITIES

On August 17, 1936, Wisconsin paid the first unemployment benefit check ever issued in this country from a state unemployment fund.

The check, in the amount of $15, was paid to Neils B. Rund who had worked at the Brock Engraving Co. of Madison. It covered one week of total unemployment.

Today, an unemployed worker in Wisconsin could receive as much as $84 for one week of unemployment. He could do even better than that if he lived in Connecticut where he could receive up to $123, or Massachusetts as much as $104, or Rhode Island, $95.

If the unemployed worker resided in Mississippi the best he could do would be $40 a week. However after next January this will rise to $49. In at least half a dozen other states he would not be able to get more than $50 a week.

Minimum weekly unemployment benefits vary as much as $3 in Missouri to $25 in California.

Some argue that the cost-of-living and other factors vary so widely, state-to-state, that it would be much more fair to base unemployment benefits on the average wage of the state.

Here, too, we see widespread disparity.

Two years ago President Nixon urged the states to set the maximum benefits at two-thirds of the average wage in a state. Currently, as AFL-CIO President George Meany pointed out in a letter to Nixon, only four states have reached this goal.

Benefits is only one area of jobless compensation that differs so greatly from state to state.

In Utah you can receive your benefits for as long as 36 weeks or 34 weeks in Wisconsin or the District of Columbia. Puerto Rico only permits payments for 20 weeks, however.

The number of ways which the states determine whether an unemployed worker is eligible for jobless pay almost defy the imagination.

In Michigan you must have worked 14 weeks at $25.01 per week or more. In Indiana you must have earned $500 over the last year with $300 in the last two quarters. In Idaho you must have earned during the year one and one-fourth times what you earned in your best three-month period but not less than $520.01 over the year. This includes a minimum of $416.01 in one quarter or three-month period and at least something in the two other quarters.

Nevada has a simple qualification: you must have earned money 33 weeks out of the last year with no minimum required. On the other hand, West Virginia demands that you earn a minimum of $700 during the year but with no requirement for having worked a certain number of weeks.

Three states—Alabama, Alaska and New Jersey—require employees to pay state unemployment taxes. No other state does. The maximum employer contribution varies from 6 percent of wages in Michigan to 2.7 percent in a large number of states.

All this illustrates the crazy-quilt pattern of the so-called Federal-state unemployment compensation system. Many more illustrations of extremes, state by state, could be drawn.

The Federal-state program is peculiarly unique to the United States. To secure passage of unemployment compensation in 1935 it was necessary to bow to the philosophy of "states rights."

Actually, though, except for Wisconsin and Ohio, the states were making little progress in passing jobless benefit laws in the 1930's. In 1933, for example, 83 bills were introduced in 23 states and none enacted. Supporters realized that Federal legislation was essential but with proper deference to the states. Many states were actually waiting for the Federal Government to act and pick up a large part of the cost.

Advocates of a Federal-state program pointed to workmen's compensation laws and urged the "state laboratory" approach for experimenting "close to the grass roots."

More important than any of these reasons, for the Federal-state approach though, was the fear that a Federal program would be declared unconstitutional.

We've learned a great deal since 1935. No one thinks that a Federal system would be unconstitutional. Also, there is a fuller recognition that unemployment is not a local or a state problem and its causes are not contained in state borders.

The basic inequities, state by state, written into the unemployment compensation program, can be largely wiped out by simply adopting Federal standards, a floor for at least benefits and duration but, perhaps, in every category.

In that way an unemployed worker who lives in Mississippi need not be penalized and states in New England could pay high benefits if they desired. (PAI)

³ Includes benefit legislation enacted in 1970 with an effective date in 1971.

⁵ Maximum weekly benefit is determined as a specified percent of average weekly covered wages and is computed annually, or in a few states, semi-annually. The base year used for setting the maximum is not necessarily calendar 1969, which explains why the percentage figures in the fourth column may vary slightly from the statutory percentages.

Meany Says He'd Impose Them If He Were U.S. President

AFL-CIO President George Meany isn't advocating wage-price controls, but he has frankly said that if he were President of the United States he would impose them as apparently the only way out of current inflation.

Meany has frequently expressed the view that as far as he could see controls are the only answer, but this is the first time that he has gone as far as this.

In an appearance on "Meet the Press" over the National Broadcasting System, the AFL-CIO leader said:

"I am not advocating controls. This is a decision that the President has got to make. But I can tell you this: if I were in his position I would impose controls at this time. I don't see any other way that this situation is going to get under control."

Meany reiterated the position of the Federation that organized labor is willing to accept wage controls, but only under the condition that all forms of income—profits, dividends, interest and capital gains—be made to accept equal sacrifices. Under no circumstances, he said, will organized labor accept one-way controls on wages.

In his discussion, Meany expressed the view that the President's wage-price review board in the building and construction industry probably was serving as a "stabilizing" force. But he opposed its extension to other individual industries.

"I think if we are going to approach this thing, it has to be the over-all approach. I think it has to be the approach we used in war time."

Meany flatly denied that today's steadily mounting inflation can be attributed to unreasonable wage increases. He pointed out that most boosts have been in an effort to recover ground lost to increased living costs. He insisted that there was "an inflationary psychology" in the United States and that many price boosts could not be justified on the basis of added costs.

"We have people raising prices when there is just no reason," Meany charged.

Meany was particularly critical of export of American capital abroad to compete with domestic products through the use of low-wage labor abroad. He predicted that if this trend continued without Government intervention it would turn the United States into a "service" nation with no productive capacity of its own. If wages were held down, he continued, the United States would lose its standard of living and its "dynamic" economy that has made it the leading industrial nation of the world.

He rejected the Nixon Administration concept of a four percent unemployment rate as satisfactory. "I don't buy that," he declared.

SOCIAL SECURITY QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Q. I am a newlywed who plans to keep working until my husband completes dental school. My employer tells me I should have my social security card changed since it still shows my maiden name. Is this necessary? I understand you only receive one number in your lifetime anyway.

A. It's true you keep the same social security number for life. However, your employer is right. For social security recordkeeping purposes, your name and number both must be correct to assure proper credit for your earnings. The people at any social security office can quickly issue you a new card showing your new name.

Q. Is there an advantage for a woman worker to get the retirement benefit based on her own work instead of a wife's benefit?

A. Yes. For one thing, your retirement benefit is likely to be higher than the benefit you would qualify for as a wife based on your husband's work record. Also, you would get your own retirement check without interruption if your husband continued to work or went back to work. A woman who is receiving just a wife's benefit on her husband's social security record will have that benefit withheld, along with her husband's if his earnings go over a certain amount.

Reduced Air Fares for Elderly?

The AFL-CIO has urged Congress to enact into law a pending bill that would provide reduced airline fares for persons aged 65 or over. Travel difficulties are "intensifying the many problems faced by low-income groups such as the elderly," Legislative Director Andrew J. Biemiller wrote Chairman Howard W. Cannon (D-Nev.) of the Senate Subcommittee on Aviation.

Don't Be Tricked by 'Scare' Tactics

When the days are warm and pleasant, who thinks about furnaces? The one who does—and this is his active season—is the furnace gyp.

The first project of the dishonest furnace repairman is to gain access to your heating equipment. One favorite method is to call himself an "inspector" when he appears at your door. This can sound very official, even though he fails to explain for whom he is inspecting.

Once such an operator gets a look at your furnace you are due for some bad news. You may be warned that it is unsafe to use such fire trap equipment another winter. Either the furnace must be completely overhauled or you must buy a new one.

Such scare tactics have panicked many a homeowner into buying a costly repair job, or even a new furnace when there was little, if anything, wrong with the old one.

Ervin Bill Would Restrict Lie Detector Use in Jobs

By SENATOR SAM J. ERVIN

Editor's Note: Traditionally organized labor has been opposed to so-called lie detector tests. AFL-CIO President George Meany recently called them a "20th Century form of 'yellow dog contract'."

Senator Ervin has introduced his bill which would ban the lie detector in the Federal Government's employment practices and in sectors of private industry. Below are excerpts from his remarks in introducing his bill.

WASHINGTON (PAI)—Probably no instrument of modern times so lends itself to threats to constitutional guarantees of individual freedom as the polygraph, or so-called lie detector.

Like the primitive tests of medieval times, this device, in the hands of unwise officials of the Federal Government and others, has been used to compel American citizens to disclose all manner of personal information. They have been compelled to disclose such information despite the guarantees of the First Amendment which protect the rights of the individual to the privacy of his mind, to the free exercise of his right to speak his thoughts as well as his right not to speak them.

The machine is used to try to compel the individual to disclose social and legal offenses despite the guarantees of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution which provides the right against self-incrimination.

This instrument is used by Government and private industry to determine the fitness of individuals for employment, for promotion, for dealing with security information, or to determine ethical misconduct or violation of personnel regulations.

They use it for these purposes despite the guarantees of our Constitution which assure due process of law and require basic fairness in the treatment of all individuals where such a basic right as the right to work is concerned.

They use these machines in such cases despite the fact that there is no clear scientific proof that they prove anything or predict anything for employment purposes . . .

Lie detectors are used on innocent, law-abiding Americans applying for jobs despite the fact that the courts of our land have wisely rejected the results of the lie detector tests for criminals and those suspected of crimes . . .

Twelve states and three municipalities have so far wisely legislated to prohibit or restrict the use of polygraphs on employees.

The Senate by an overwhelming vote in the last two Congresses has expressed its disapproval of the way these machines are used as a form of economic coercion to intimidate applicants and employees into revealing their innermost thoughts and feelings.

The Senate did this by its approval of the Federal employee privacy bill which, among other protections for employees and applicants, protects the individual against governmental soliciting of his views on religious beliefs and practices, sexual attitudes and conduct, and personal relationships with members of his family.

Although this omnibus employee privacy bill has died in the last two Congresses, it is again pending as S. 1438 and has 51 Senate cosponsors.

The House Committee on Government Operations after years of intensive investigation demonstrating the fallacy of the lie detector, issued a conclusion which stated:

"There is no 'lie detector', neither machine nor human. People have been deceived by a myth that a metal box can detect truth or falsehood."

Despite these judicial and legislative findings, some agencies of the Federal Government persist in using these devices, while others, if they do not use them, may take note of the personnel reports based on such tests required to be taken by the individual in private industry or in military life . . .

The AFL-CIO Maritime Trades Department issued an excellent comprehensive report on "The Lie Detector" last year which details the use of the machines and recommends a legislative ban on them for employment purposes.

The wealth of considered opinion on the unreliability of lie detectors and the unfairness of permitting them to be used as a test of employment has persuaded me that the time has now come for Congress to express itself against their use. For that reason I am today introducing this bill.

The bill prohibits the use of lie detectors as a basis for considering the employment application of any person for a Federal job. It prohibits both the requirement of a lie detector test as a condition of employment as well as the request to take one, since it is a matter of economic reality that even a request to take a lie detector test is the equivalent of a command in the Federal job market. The bill also prohibits the use of the detectors once employment is obtained. They may not be used for purposes of denying promotions, for discharges, or for disciplinary action.

Man Proves His Age, 62, With 50-Pound Tombstone

One of the most important pieces, of evidence you need when you apply for social security retirement benefits is proof of your age.

But would you believe a 50-pound tombstone? That's what Robert Lee Terrell, of Macon, Georgia, used to prove his age.

Mr. Terrell didn't have a birth certificate or any of the other usual records accepted as evidence of age. So when he was told he would need some proof of his age, he brought his mother's tombstone to the social security office.

The tombstone showed the year of his mother's death, proving that Mr. Terrell must have been at least 62 when he filed his claim.

When the people in the social security office asked Mr. Terrell why he didn't just bring a photograph of the tombstone, he replied: "I was going to get a picture, but the person who was going to take it was out of town, so I just dug up the tombstone itself and brought it in."

Of course, most people who apply for retirement benefits or Medicare coverage don't have to resort to tombstones to prove their age.

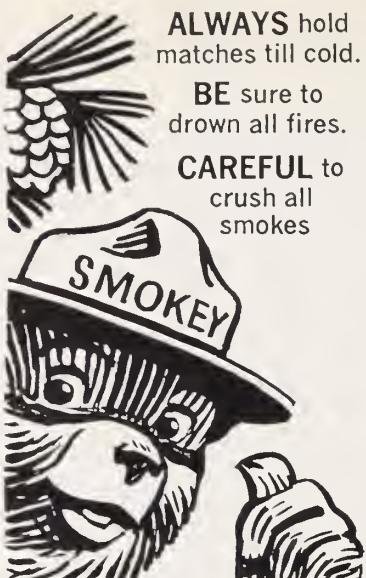

The best proof is a birth certificate or baptismal record established before your 5th birthday, and this is what the social security office will ask you for first.

But if this type of evidence isn't available, social security can accept other records, such as school records, census records, family Bible records, insurance policies, marriage certificates, and voting records.

Don't delay filing your claim, though, because you don't have evidence of your age. The people in the social security office will be glad to help you obtain this proof when you come into the office to apply.

Always look for the union label when you shop. It's your assurance of quality.

No-Fare Bus Service Is Being Considered

President John M. Elliott of the Amalgamated Transit Union has proposed that bus and subway service in cities be made free to the public, supported entirely by tax revenues.

Gov. Milton J. Shapp of Pennsylvania has announced that he will soon authorize a study to see if such free service in the state's cities could be offset by savings from reduced pollution and reduced use of automobiles. Mayor Frank Fasi of Honolulu has suggested that savings derived by free service could support a bus system four times as large as the present one.

There have been reports of growing interest in socialized transit in Denver and Vancouver, B.C.

A Message from George Meany

It's time again for workers to take stock in America

America's workers are again being asked to increase their investment in freedom by stepping up their purchases of U.S. Savings Bonds under the payroll savings plan. This campaign has the wholehearted support of the AFL-CIO.

Payroll deductions give workers an ideal method to build their savings regularly, systematically and safely, in order to achieve major family goals. And in emergencies, U.S. Savings Bonds are quickly and easily convertible into cash.

The interest paid on U.S. Savings Bonds has been raised to a level comparable to that paid on most securities available to small investors. Series E Bonds return 5½ per cent when held to their full maturity of 5 years, ten months—and it is absolutely guaranteed.

But the real return is priceless. Those who provide their country with badly needed funds at this critical time are buying shares in freedom. The dividend will be victory in the struggle for social justice at home, and success in the defense of freedom abroad.

As president of the AFL-CIO, and as chairman of the National Labor Committee for U.S. Savings Bonds, I would like personally to urge you and every other union member to respond to America's need today.

I urge you to participate to the best of your ability in the payroll savings plan where you work, and invest a portion of your earnings in U.S. Savings Bonds every week.

You will be building a better future for yourself, your family and your country.

Bonds are safe. If lost, stolen, or destroyed, we replace them. When needed, they can be cashed at your bank. Tax may be deferred until redemption. And always remember, Bonds are a proud way to save.

Take stock in America.

AFL-CIO President Meany's Labor Day Message

(Read it on page 6)

FROM THE PRESIDENT'S DESK

As far as the building and construction trades in general, and the Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers Union in particular are concerned, President Nixon's new economic policy is like putting a straitjacket over a corset.

We already had been singled out for special restrictive attention in the administration's prescription for treatment of inflation.

In his Executive Order providing for the stabilization of wages and prices in the construction industry, President Nixon isolated a fragment of the American society—the building and construction tradesmen—who represent only a few million of the nation's 80-million work force—and imposed wage restraints on this single section.

Nothing was done about profits in business. Nothing was done about zooming interest charges. Nothing was done about prices, or materials, or land, or rents, or food. The controls were applied only to the negotiated wages of building and construction tradesmen, many of whom either were not working at all or were working 800 to 1,000 hours fewer per year than other Americans.

Nevertheless, as loyal citizens, we cooperated to the fullest extent—not happily, but sincerely. We rolled up our sleeves and tried to make a bad situation workable.

Craft boards were set up under the main Wage Stabilization Committee. A number of building trades international unions took great amounts of time to work with the main group and the little groups. Agreements were hammered out by dint of great effort, persuasion and patriotism.

Then, just when some order was beginning to develop, President Nixon came along with a "new game plan." Even though our employment situation had worsened, even though our wages were restricted, even though nothing was being done to improve the inflationary situations which made it necessary for the working man to struggle merely to hold his own, we were placed in another bind.

Neither the Lathers nor any other responsible branch of organized labor has argued against the necessity of making sacrifices in this time of economic duress. In fact, we have been in the forefront, pleading for action, since it is the working man who is damaged the most by this chaos. We have repeatedly said that we would make whatever sacrifices were necessary—as long as every American sacrificed; as long as there was equality of sacrifice. But we simultaneously made it unmistakably clear that any test of equality would have to apply to interest rates, dividends, profits and the prices of all goods and services, as well as to wages and salaries.

Administration spokesmen urge us to be sympathetic and understanding. They say that, within the next 90 days, inequities will be worked out. This we find hard to comprehend. We already are in one straitjacket. Do we also have to be handcuffed and tied down while other Americans run around to their hearts' content? We say no! We are continuing talks with responsible people in the Administration in our attempts to exempt the construction industry from the current wage and price freeze.

The cartoon, distributed by Press Associates, Inc., sums up the mood of many working men and women this month of Labor Day. It takes the form of a firm determination that this government will be made to answer at the polls for the callous disregard it has shown for "the common people" in its eagerness to advance the welfare of the well-off. And today's Senators and Congressmen are not to be allowed to plead "Not Guilty." They have, in all too many instances, abdicated their rights and surrendered their prerogatives . . . allowing the Executive Branch to legislate by Executive Orders.

BY THE GENERAL SECRETARY TREASURER

The time has come when we must face a fact of life: the present national administration is firmly committed to an anti-labor course of action. Organized labor in general supported Hubert Humphrey in the last presidential election. Humphrey lost by scant percentage points when many anti-Nixon votes went to George Wallace. After the election, organized labor adopted a policy of "peaceful co-existence." But in recent months, The White House has discarded even the pretense of trying to live with Labor and has virtually "declared war" on it.

The first big "labor offensive" by the Nixon Administration was the freeze of construction workers' wages. There was no freeze on housing prices or profits. Advisors to Pres. Nixon had apparently convinced him that the building trades' wages were the primary cause of inflation. But Nixon's "experts" were proved wrong. With building tradesmen's wages frozen, inflation continued unabated. Next there was the freeze on wages and (supposedly) prices. But the Nixon team was clearly aiming at wages. There was no accompanying freeze of profits, dividends or interest rates.

Then, when AFL-CIO President George Meany promised "no cooperation" from organized labor in this obviously anti-labor scheme, The White House tried to discredit his leadership. Charles Colson, a Nixon advisor, drafted a statement for Secretary of Labor Hodgson which alleged Meany "was sadly out of step with the needs and desires of America's working men and women." Turncoat Texas Democrat John Connally, now Republican Secretary of the Treasury, alleged Meany was "taking a partisan whack at the President." The AFL-CIO Executive Council issued a statement which declared that the Nixon Administration had turned a period of economic expansion into a period of economic recession and organized labor "had lost all confidence" in Nixon's ability to properly lead the nation. The statement said he had deliberately embarked on a "trickle-down philosophy" of enriching big corporations and banks and that Nixon "did not have the honesty to admit that his previous game-plan had led to America's economic mess, nor the courage to admit that his tight-money policy had failed."

Next, The White House contacted the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, asking support for a proposed law requiring labor leaders to retire at age 70. This reportedly was aimed directly at 77-year-old George Meany. According to press reports, the C. of C. at first was inclined to favor such a law until it realized that another such law might require business executives to retire at 70. The Chamber dropped the proposition like a hot rock!

There have been many Republicans friendly with and fair to organized labor. But, as recounted above, this administration has repeatedly shown itself to be anti-labor. If working people are to avoid being victimized by even more repressive legislation and presidential edicts, we must "turn the rascals out" on Election Day, 1972. Without the effect of another George Wallace candidacy, any given Democrat can probably make Nixon a one-term president. Working men and women must recognize this political fact of life: A vote for Wallace will be a vote for Nixon. Wallace has even a lesser chance of being elected President than the proverbial snowball has in hell. But what he can do is to repeat his 1968 performance and put this anti-labor administration back in office for another four years.

It is impossible to predict how much . . . in plain dollars and cents . . . this would cost the working people of this nation!

Kennedy Arts Center Is Completed

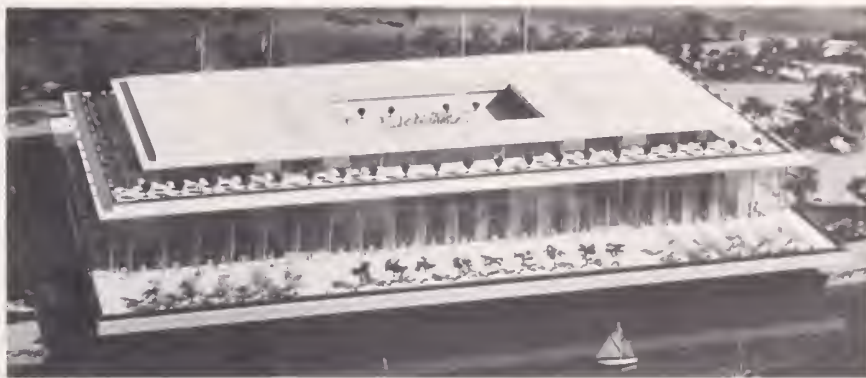

Members of Local Union 9 played an important part in bringing the John F. Kennedy for the Performing Arts, Washington, D.C., into reality. An average workforce of about 26 members, with a maximum of 50 men at peak periods, made extensive use of lath throughout the huge $65,000,000 complex.

The Center consists primarily of a Symphony Hall seating 2,300, an Opera Hall seating 2,000 and a Jazz Theater seating 1,500. There are, in addition, dining rooms and many other facilities incident to the principal purpose of the huge installation, including a garage which can hold 3,000 automobiles. The structure, built by private grants, was about five years in construction.

All the marble used was imported from Italy, France and England. Extensive use of lath and acoustical plaster was made in the interior. In fact, according to G. C. "Buck" Carter, business agent of Local 9, the interior of the Center is 99 percent lath and plaster on the walls and ceilings. Unusual use of lath and plaster was made where ordinarily one would not expect to find it. For example, the balcony railings in the theaters are lath and plaster; a white hard-coat finished plaster, with each railing fitted with a stainless steel cap piece.

Lathing contractor on the job was the Blazier Corporation of St. Louis, Missouri. Lathing foreman was Dick Phillips of Local 9 and lathing superintendent was Buster Shannon, also of Local 9.

1971 LABOR DAY MESSAGE

By George Meany, President, AFL-CIO

On this Labor Day, the trade union movement—indeed, all working men and women—face a major challenge. It is a challenge to the principle of economic justice and a threat to the democratic principles upon which the trade union movement was founded and the American system operates.

An inequitable wage-price freeze has been imposed by President Nixon which unfairly requires workers to assume the major burden.

The President acted after 2½ years of inaction, denials of any such motives and plain mismanagement of the economy.

When President Nixon took office on January 20, 1969, America was in the 95th month of the greatest period of sustained economic expansion in history. The unemployment rate was 3.4 percent, the lowest in 15 years.

When Mr. Nixon was seeking the presidency, he campaigned against inflation. The 4.2 per cent inflation of 1968, he told the American people, was too high. He was going to stop inflation without increasing unemployment. He reiterated that pledge in writing to the AFL-CIO Executive Council a month after he took office. So he instituted a "game plan" for the economy. Tight money was the plan. Disaster was the result.

Home construction fell off. Few Americans could afford the usurious rates charged by money lenders with Administration blessing. State and local governments were compelled to cancel plans to build badly needed hospitals, schools, roads and public buildings.

At the same time, the Administration—in the name of fighting inflation—cut back federal construction and withheld funds already appropriated by Congress.

These actions were necessary, the Administration said, because construction workers were causing inflation.

The truth is that construction workers, like all other workers, were trying to catch up. Inflation had robbed their paychecks of purchasing power, and they were merely seeking to earn a living wage.

While construction workers were being blamed, bankers were counting record profits—21.9 percent at J. P. Morgan; 19.2 percent at First National Bank of Dallas; 16.1 percent at Chase Manhattan; 15.2 percent at Bankers Trust. And no one in the Administration called these profits inflationary.

Instead of reducing inflation, the Administration's tight-money policy actually increased inflation.

The 4.2 per cent inflation rise of 1968 was topped by a 5.4 percent rate in President Nixon's first year in office. It accelerated to 5.9 percent in 1970, the highest in 20 years—and the end is nowhere in sight.

Instead of preventing unemployment, the Administration's game plan increased unemployment. In January, 1969, when President Nixon took office, 2.7 million people were unemployed—3.4 percent of the workforce, the lowest in 15 years.

President Nixon's policies have nearly doubled the number of unemployed in 2½ years.

In the face of this clear evidence to the contrary, the Administration insisted almost daily during the past 2½ years that its game plan was working; that inflation was declining; that employment was improving, and that all was well.

The sorry fact is that the President deliberately sought to mislead the people about the condition of the economy.

Suddenly, three weeks ago—on August 15—the President unveiled his new "game plan." Even then, he lacked the courage to admit that his tight-money policy had failed and that his previous game plan had led to America's economic mess.

There has been a consistent campaign to blame unions for inflation. Well, let's check the facts:

The Bureau of Labor Statistics says that an urban family of four needs $11,112 a year—or $210 a week—to maintain a moderate standard of living, with a few luxuries.

A minimum living standard requires $7,150, or $137 a week.

But the average American worker earns, right now, $125 before taxes. His take-home pay is $110.

Compared with government standards, workers are making $85 a week less than a moderate standard of living and $12 short of a minimum standard of living.

So workers are not profiting by inflation, but big business is. The Wall Street Journal reports corporate profits, after taxes, jumped 10.3 percent in the second quarter of this year.

The 90-day freeze means workers are paying for the Administration's refusal to control high interest rates and corporation profits.

The AFL-CIO has, time and again, since February, 1966, said that if the economic situation warrants extraordinary overall stabilization measures, the AFL-CIO would cooperate so long as restraints were equitably placed on all costs and incomes—including all prices, profits, dividends, rents and executive compensation, as well as employees' wages and salaries.

The President's program simply does not meet the test of equity. All workers' wages are frozen for 90 days. During that period all cost-of-living adjustments, seniority, longevity and merit increases due workers are barred. Productivity increases are nullified.

However, not all prices are frozen. Exemptions and loopholes abound through which prices may be increased.

There is no machinery for enforcement of a price freeze, leaving the consumer at the mercy of corporate pricing systems and unscrupulous businessmen.

Wages, on the other hand, are effectively frozen because the individual employer has complete control over paychecks. The burden of the freeze falls on workers with highly visible collective bargaining agreements.

In addition to the wage freeze, President Nixon has asked for another tax break for big business which he disguises as a "job development tax credit." He says it will create jobs. There is no concrete evidence that this is so. However, the corporations would get the tax break merely by purchasing new machinery, even if that new machinery would mean fewer jobs.

In January, the Administration gave big business a similar tax break by accelerating depreciation allowances. That will cost the federal treasury between $3 and $5 billion a year. Now the President proposes to take an additional $4 billion a year in tax revenue and return it to big business.

The cost of this new tax break alone is twice the amount the Accelerated Public Works Act of 1971 would have cost the federal government. But the President vetoed that bill. At the same time he vetoed 400,000 jobs which that program would have created.

America needs tax revenue to improve and expand public services, not tax breaks to increase the profits of business. We in the AFL-CIO would rather see tax money—raised by closing loopholes, not opening more of them—go toward building mass transit systems, air and water pollution controls, community health facilities and hospitals, schools and libraries.

The President also pointed out the problems of foreign trade. But his solutions are inadequate. He has placed a border tax on some imports. That is at best a temporary stopgap.

A border tax will do very little to meet the major foreign trade problem created by the U.S.-based multi-national corporations and international banks, which have accounted for most of the export of American jobs.

The U.S. is the most-open market to goods produced in other countries. Yet, the goods we sell to the world are restricted by barriers, quotas and tariffs imposed by other nations.

Many fallacies have developed around world trade. "Free trade" is a myth. So is "protectionism." The idea is that if we protect American-made goods and American jobs from foreign imports, somehow the consumer is going to be hurt.

Who is the consumer but the American worker? And workers have been the best buyers of American-made goods. They buy more than 95 percent of the goods produced in this country. If the American worker does not have a job because of foreign imports, he can't buy any goods—no matter whether they are made in the U.S. or anywhere else.

Jobs are the solution to unemployment. The only policy that makes any sense is full employment.

Before he was elected, President Nixon pledged that it would be a major goal of his Administration to create new jobs. But fewer persons are employed full-time today than two years ago. President Nixon's pledge has not been met.

One of the reasons jobs continue to disappear is the failure of this Administration and past Administrations to realistically view the problems of world trade and foreign investment.

Imports are taking over large and growing portions of U.S. markets. Behind this is the soaring rate of investment by American companies in foreign operations.

These investments—combined with patent and license agreements with foreign companies—have transferred American technology to plants throughout the world. Many of these plants, operating with American machinery, American capital and American know-how pay workers as little as 15 cents an hour.

The cost of this foreign trade policy has been a half-million American jobs. In fact, the biggest American export today is American jobs.

America has had a dynamic economy because workers were able to buy the goods they produce. The surest way to destroy this is to impose a low-wage economy that benefits only the rich.

We believe more American workers need increased purchasing power as the surest way of improving the economy.

And increased purchasing power will be the goal of workers and their unions in collective bargaining. America's future depends on jobs and a healthy, expand-

Unemployment Continues to Increase; Many

Jobless People Give Up Looking for Work

Severe unemployment continues to plague the nation's beleaguered inner cities. The seasonally adjusted jobless rate in America's poorest neighborhoods jumped from 9 to 10.1 percent during the second quarter of this year.

The actual unemployment rate was only three-tenths of a point lower than the adjusted figure at 9.8 percent. The unadjusted figure had skyrocketed to 9.6 percent during the first quarter.

The 10.1 percent adjusted jobless rate for the poverty neighborhoods of the nation's 100 largest metropolitan areas was up from 7.1 percent a year ago and 5.7 percent in the second quarter of 1969. The jobless rate for the inner cities stood at 4.9 percent in the first quarter of 1969.

Unemployment for the nation as a whole averaged 6 percent during the April-June period.

The rate for the poor neighborhoods is now nearly twice the rate for other urban neighborhoods of the same metropolitan areas where joblessness averaged 5.8 percent during the same period.

The number of unemployed persons in the inner city ghettos rose both on an actual and seasonally adjusted basis with more than 600,000 persons out of work.

Employment declined from 5.8 million in the first quarter to 5.5 million, on an actual basis, with the BLS noting that 16 percent of those

The civilian labor force in the areas dropped by an unadjusted 147,000 persons during the second quarter, but remained equal to its first-quarter levels on a seasonally adjusted basis.

Over the year, the BLS said, the civilian labor force in urban poverty areas declined by 155,000 as the population of these areas decreased.

But the percentage of the population in the labor force also declined from 56.9 percent to 55.5 percent, indicating that people were giving up the search for work in ever-increasing numbers.

Unemployment figures for poverty areas and the nation as a whole do not include those who have become discouraged and stopped looking for jobs.

Blacks and members of other minority groups continued to be hardest hit by joblessness in the nation's slums with a rate of 11.9 percent during the second quarter, up nearly a full point from the previous quarter.

The unemployment rate for whites in poverty neighborhoods, while at a lower level, showed a much more dramatic increase, jumping from 7.7 percent to 9.1 percent.

AMA 'Does An FBI'

The AMA is turning into a "medical FBI" as a team of doctors follows Sen. Edward M. Kennedy (D-Mass.) around the country while he holds field hearings on the national health security proposal. The AMA team tapes entire hearings, then uses these and so-called "eyewitness reports" to prep local AMA leaders for their appearances before Kennedy's health subcommittee.

The medical society is now in midst of a lavish, costly advertising campaign to defeat the labor-backed health security program.

Question of The Month . . .

The cost of living is rising even more sharply and to higher levels than ever before in the recent months since President Nixon instituted his wage curbs in the construction field.

The question this month is: how is the White House going to continue to place a good share of the blame for inflation on building tradesmen's wages?

. . . and Quote of The Month

"Unconditional tax sharing violates a major principle of good government; the authority to collect taxes should not be separated from the authority to determine how these revenues will be spent. Free money opens the door to waste and extravagance."—Andrew Biemiller, AFL-CIO Legislative Representative.

Manpower Programs Urged To Ease Unemployment

An AFL-CIO manpower expert has hailed the success of many established manpower programs and urged that they be expanded and improved to ease the growing pressures of shrinking job opportunities and mounting unemployment.

Many existing programs "have proven effective in servicing the needs of particular segments of the national community . . . and should not be rubbed out," declared Julius Rothman, president of the Human Resources Development Institute. HRDI, a private corporation created by the AFL-CIO, is rounding out its third year as the federation's manpower arm.

Rothman said that although HRDI's operations have paralleled a "remarkable rise in the nation's unemployment," it has helped place "thousands of disadvantaged men and women, most of them from minority groups," in training programs and jobs. He added that "for the first time in their lives," many of those placed were able to earn "decent wages that they could live on."

Public Service Jobs Urged

He said many of those aided by HRDI have completed their training and entered a job market which, because of high and rising unemployment, grows ever tighter. He renewed the call for more public service employment opportunities. "If the private sector can't place people in jobs . . . we have to find some job-creating mechanism," he said, and "public service employment is certainly one effective" method.

Rothman said the new Emergency Employment Act is "a step in the right direction." But, he added, the 150,000 public service jobs it provides fall far short of meeting the needs of a job market that now has more than five million workers looking for employment. He said the Job Corps is an "excellent program" that ought to be "continued and expanded." He scored the deep cuts made in the Job Corps during the early months of the Nixon Administration.

Turning to current and future

'Tell You What I'm Gonna Do . . .'

'No-Confidence Vote' for Nixon

A lack of confidence in President Nixon and his party is reflected in a recent Gallup Poll which showed Americans by 3-2 feel Democrats more able to handle the nation's major problems. However, general unease showed up in 40 percent of those surveyed who said they see no difference in ability of the parties to conquer problems. Biggest issues were Viet Nam, 33 percent, and the economy, 22 percent, while drug addiction, with 12 percent, was third on list of citizen concerns, followed by race relations and crime.

HRDI efforts, Rothman said that in addition to continuing recruitment, training and placement efforts in the building trades and service industry, the institute is putting heavy emphasis on helping returning veterans find training or jobs. He pointed out that the current unemployment rate among veterans is much higher than among non-veterans.

Health and Welfare Questionnaire

A total of 75 local unions have now responded to the questionnaire sent to officers of the LIU's 286 local unions asking questions regarding possible initiation of an International-wide health and welfare plan.

Resolution 45, passed at the 1970 LIU convention, authorized the General President to appoint a committee to consult with insurance experts relative to such a health and welfare program.

All local unions which have not as yet returned the questionnaire are urged to do so at the earliest possible time so the committee may determine how many local unions are interested in establishing such a plan and the intent of Resolution 45 may be achieved.

In My Opinion—

Don't Blame the Construction Worker For the High Cost of Housing

By JOHN ZANCANARO

John Zancanaro is president of the Milwaukee Building and Construction Trades Council.

Reprinted by permission of The Milwaukee Journal

It happens all of the time. Union construction men are blamed for the constantly rising cost of building a home.

The president of the United States goes out of his way to fix public blame on the union building craftsmen. Business groups trump up "cost cutting committees" and issue press releases blaming labor for pushing up construction costs.

It's time the record was set straight.

The skilled labor that goes into the construction of a home is just part of the cost of that home, a small part, even today. Consider the cost of the land on which the home is erected. Land costs have doubled in the past few years. Consider the cost of materials. They have advanced more than 40% in the last 20 years.

And consider the cost of financing a home.

George Romney, head of the US Department of Housing and Urban Development, stated recently that "an exorbitant rise in the cost of money was the largest single factor affecting the cost of housing."

Romney was almost right.

Consider taxes. They literally leap ahead, year by year, contributing their giant share to the monthly cost of home payments.

The fact is that the cost of skilled labor in home construction today takes a smaller percentage of the total than it did two decades ago.

The chief economist of the National Association of Home Builders recently compiled figures showing that between 1949 and 1969, on-site labor costs fell from 33% of the price of a home to 18%.

It's true, of course, that unions have been winning wage increases for building craftsmen in recent years. Without these increases, the construction worker and his family would have gone bankrupt sometime ago.

At his present rate of pay, which is about $7 per hour, the building worker's annual wage is estimated at $8,100. Yes, it certainly seems that he should make more than this. But you must consider that he is paid strictly by the hour. And he averages far fewer hours of work per year than employees in other lines of work.

Consider these facts: The building trades worker is a breed apart, different from other workers. He has no job security, builds no seniority. He must follow the job. This trail often takes him 40 miles or more away from his home. He must maintain a car. The car must be in good working condition. He pays his own gasoline bills, his own car repairs. Nothing is tax deductible about all of this working expense.

The construction worker is different. Truly.

Consider his strange working conditions.

He must often keep construction going through searing heat. No air conditioning for him. Or he is required to keep on building in weather cold enough to send the average man back to his warm fireside.

Of course, if the weather really gets bad, the construction worker is sent off the job. No work. No pay.

Critics of the construction trades complain about "make work" and "restrictive" practices. What "make work"? What "restrictive" practices?

Visit any construction site today. See the power tools in use on the job. Cost cutting devices and assists are everywhere. Power saws. Power hammers. Spray guns. Even paint rollers, some on the end of long handles so that the painter can reach the job without bothering with a ladder or scaffold.

But the construction worker's most important machine is his own body. He has to be tough, strong, able to climb, bend, twist and turn. If this machine wears out, he is finished as a construction worker. Not all of his special skills and precious experience will earn him one cent in the building trades.

The construction worker's accident rate is far higher than on most other jobs. For instance, the injury rate for roofing and sheet metal workers is 43%. In all manufacturing jobs, it is just 14.8%.

Work clothes wear out. The building construction worker wears out more clothes than any other employee. He pays for his own clothes, pays for his own tools.

If he doesn't get $7 per hour for the hours he works today, the construction worker simply can't make it.

Of course, it has proved impossible to hold down land costs. It has proved impossible to hold down materials cost. It has proved impossible to hold down interest rates for long, and taxes for any time at all.

And so it seems to many like a simple solution. Just take it out on the construction worker. Put a ceiling on his wages. Call him a gouger, a profiteer, a grabber.

But consider this: The Kaiser Committee on Urban Housing reported that a thumping 20% cut in construction workers' wages would reduce the monthly occupancy cost to the homeowner or renter by only 2%.

Which is just another way of saying that it is not labor costs, but the cost of land, materials, interest and taxes which make those monthly payments too steep for most folks.

Labor is not the culprit in the rising price spiral. Labor has not caused the housing crisis. Labor is the victim, together with millions of ordinary working Americans, of rising costs on every hand.

Don't put the blame on the man with the hammer and saw, or on the man who pours the concrete or nails on the roof. He works hard for his hourly pay. He wishes prices and taxes would come down, too.

Senate Blocks Bid for Meat Inspection Loophole

An Administration effort to open a loophole in the federal meat inspection law was defeated in the Senate after AFL-CIO unions sounded an alert.

The Senate voted 52-33 against a motion to allow state-inspected meat and poultry to be sold in interstate commerce, competing with meat products that have been checked at every stage of butchering and processing by federal inspectors.

Sen. Charles McC. Mathias (R-Md.) proposed the measure as an amendment to a relatively non-controversial bill increasing the federal government's share of the cost of state meat inspection services from 50 to 80 percent.

He read a letter from Agriculture Sec. Clifford M. Hardin declaring that the Administration would favor a higher payment to the states only if it were coupled with an OK for interstate sales of state-inspected meat. Under present law, only federally inspected meat can be moved across state lines.

The Mathias proposal had been rejected by the Senate Agriculture Committee. But the Meat Cutters, joined by the American Federation of Government Employees which represents federal meat inspectors, swung into action when it was learned that the loophole amendment would be offered on the Senate floor. Telegrams were sent to senators; legislative representatives of the AFL-CIO and other unions joined Arnold Mayer of the Meat Cutters and Carl Sadler of the AFGE in buttonholing senators, and the move was decisively blocked.

Unionists Have Better Chance To Get Pension

Union membership is a significant factor in whether the protection of a retirement plan is made available to a worker, a Labor Department economist observed in the Monthly Labor Review.

Only 18 percent of unionized workers did not have the option of a retirement plan, while 58 percent of non union workers had no retirement plan available to them, according to the survey on which the article was based.

The author, Emerson Beier, is an economist for the Bureau of Labor Statistics, which publishes the Monthly Labor Review.

Beier also found that the incidence of pension plans or other deferred profit-sharing programs increased proportionately with wage levels and that the incidence of retirement plans varied with types of occupations.

In cases where wages averaged less than $2.50 an hour, eight of 10 workers were in groups with no retirement plan available.

Where wages were $5 or more an hour, however, eight of 10 workers had a pension plan available.

The proportion of workers with no plan available varied from industry to industry.

The survey found that overall, less than 45 percent of the nation's private, nonfarm workers had some type of retirement security available to them.

Members of the LIU have an opportunity to avail themselves of a retirement program by negotiating it into their locals' contracts. Participation must be by individual locals, not on an individual member basis.

An outline of how the General Pension Plan operates to benefit the membership was contained in the June issue of The Lather.

Average Contracts Down Slightly From 1970

Union-negotiated wage and other benefit gains in the first half of 1971 came to 8.3 percent a year averaged over the life of the contracts, the Labor Dept. reported in a summary of major collective bargaining settlements.

First-year improvements considered alone averaged 10.4 percent for all industries, the summary showed.

Both figures were off somewhat from 1970 levels—down from an average of 9.1 percent over the full term and from 13.1 percent for first-year gains.

The drop, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, may not signify a long-term downward trend because each quarter-year "tends to be dominated by a different industry" in bargaining.

Major settlements in the January through June period—those covering units of 1,000 or more—affected 1.3 million workers. They included key agreements in the aluminum, can, automobile, railroad, apparel and farm implement industries. Contracts covering an additional 3.4 million workers expire the last half of 1971.

Wage increases alone averaged 8 percent a year over the life of the contracts, down from the 1970 average of 8.9 percent, the study showed.

The average wage increase in manufacturing industry settlements was 6.4 percent, up slightly from 1970. Contracts in nonmanufacturing averaged 10.8 percent—lower than last year's 11.5 percent, partly because of the inclusion in the 1971 first-half report of only nine construction industry settlements covering 35,000 workers.

The report pointed out that relatively large settlements for nearly 700,000 construction workers contributed heavily to the higher non-manufacturing averages reported for 1970.

For construction alone, 1971 settlements in the first half averaged 14 percent over the full term for wages and benefits combined, as against 15.6 percent for the full year of 1970.

First-year improvements only are running at a 13.1 percent rate compared with 19.6 percent for all of last year.

BLS reported that the Construction Industry Stabilization Committee, set up by a presidential Executive Order last March had approved 97 contracts by June 30, but only three settlements covered major situations involving 1,000 or more workers. The other six major construction settlements in the first-half summary were reached before the committee began its work.

More than 130 contracts affecting nearly 500,000 building and construction tradesmen were scheduled to expire in the first half of 1971. Terms for most of them had not been agreed on before the close of the survey period and will be included in later reports, BLS said.

'Outreach' Praised as Aid For Unemployed Minorities

"Operation Outreach," the program fostered by the construction trades to provide job opportunities to members of minority races, has been singled out for praise by Dr. Ray Marshall, an economics professor at the University of Texas.

Marshall pointed to "Outreach" as "a workable solution to the problem."

"This kind of program can be, and has been, transferred to other situations where it is desirable to obtain jobs for Negroes and other minorities in areas from which they had previously been excluded," he declared.

He noted that, in 1960, nonwhite apprentices totalled 2,191, or only 2.52 percent of the number of apprentices in the nation. The Outreach program, endorsed by the AFL-CIO and its Building and Construction Trades Department, has caused a dramatic change in the figures.

By this year, minority apprentices totalled 9,328, and Marshall said, "mainly because of the Outreach program there have been relatively large percentage increases in minority apprentices since 1964, and there is every indication that the number will continue to increase."

The New, New Nixon

Are you ready for another "New Nixon?" Well, ready or not, you're getting one. The President is about to change his image again. He's taken on a new barber who goes for razor cuts and the dry look, and is lowering Nixon's sideburns. Also, his tailor is going for wider lapels, and someone worked in a suggestion for three-inch-wide neckties. So now the President is going to look real mod. Only his programs will be old hat.

Tax-Exempt Property Is Valued at $600 Billion

Tax-exempt real estate amounts to as much as a full one-third of all such property in the United States, which shifts the burden of supporting schools and running local governments to other taxpayers, according to a recently-published book.

Entitled "The Free List: Property Without Taxes," the book was written by Alfred Balk, editor-at-large of the Saturday Review and published by the Russell Sage Foundation. Mr. Balk said no one knows exactly how much property is exempt from taxation because only 18 states compile exempt-valuation inventories. But he estimated that the exemptions might reach $600 billion worth of real estate.

If that guess is accurate, one-third of the nation's total property does not appear on the tax rolls, shifting an average of $310 per family annually to other taxpayers.

Much of the exempt property is owned by the federal, state and local government agencies. But there are many private exemptions as well, ranging from Gold Star Mothers to churches and from veterans to foundations.

The 77-story Chrysler Building in New York is the "world's tallest tax exemption," Mr. Balk said. It is owned by Cooper Union, which is exempt by state charter from all property taxes.

Holiday Inn Motels in Alabama are also exempt from taxes. So are some defense plants leased to some of the nation's largest corporations. And so are stores and other commercial properties owned by universities and churches in many states.

Half of the real estate valuation in Boston, Albany and Ithaca, N.Y. as the District of Columbia is on the free list. Forty percent or more of the property in Harrisburg, Pa., Niagara Falls, N.Y., and Oberlin and Athens, Ohio, is exempt. One-third of the property in New York, Buffalo and Pittsburgh is also tax free.

Mr. Balk added there are many inconsistencies in exemption practices. For instance, Oregon and Kansas tax church parsonages. Pennsylvania taxes those not adjacent to the church. Colorado exempts only the first $6,000 valuation. Tennessee exempts the principal minister's home. Many other states do not tax parsonages at all.

Retirement communities are taxed in some states and tax-free in others.

Mr. Balk urges state and local governments to prepare and publish comprehensive and accurate lists of exempt properties. He also calls for clarification of exemption provisions to determine just what property is exempt and what is taxable.

High Joblessness Spreads In Major U.S. Labor Areas

Spreading joblessness lengthened the Labor Dept.'s list of areas with substantial unemployment.

Fifty-four of the nation's 150 largest labor areas had "substantial" unemployment in July, one more than the previous month and more than double the 24 on the list one year ago.

The latest addition was New Orleans, with a current jobless level of 6.7 percent. An area is put on the list when it has a jobless rate of 6 percent or more, with the rate expected to continue for at least two more months.

Unemployment also rose among the nation's smaller labor areas, with an increase of 23 in the "substantial" unemployment category and a rise of four in the more extreme "persistent" unemployment listing. There are now 751 smaller areas in these two categories.

One of the few large labor areas with "low" unemployment of under 3 percent—Houston—moved to the higher "moderate" unemployment level in July. That leaves only six of the 150 major areas with under 3 percent joblessness as compared with 24 in July 1970.

Letters to The Editor

Mr. J. Earl Ferguson, Editor,
The Lather

Dear Earl:

We all, and I, especially, appreciate the prominent cover page position, story and pictures you published in the August 1971 issue of The "LATHER" regarding the renovation and remodeling of the Missouri Baptist building located in Jefferson City, Missouri.

The transformation of this project is positive proof of what can be accomplished with an old, sound structure at a very substantial savings in both money and time by utilizing the knowledge and materials connected and associated with the lathing and plastering industry.

I sincerely hope our industry will profit from the pictures and news article related to the Missouri Baptist project that you so elegantly published.

I am working on a story of another project which I hope to have ready to send to you in the near future.

Many thanks, Earl, for your consideration and cooperation in this important matter.

Fraternally yours,
Russ Baldwin

Why Builders Get Less Than Money's Worth

In studies conducted by the National Association of Home Builders to determine validity of lab tests on assemblies designed to control sound transmission, it was learned that in many instances any relationship between the lab test and field performance was entirely coincidental.

Studies on 98 apartment units in Washington, D. C., in three story wood frame structures showed that despite incorporation of multitude of sound isolating products, mistakes in workmanship nullified their purposes.

The studies were conducted on buildings not constructed for testing. They were, in fact, under construction when NAHB chose them for research.

Researchers were able to examine closely, details of sound isolation measures during construction permitting an assessment of reasons for failures when walls were later tested by instruments.

Apartment tenants, interviewed for their specific complaint to noise, listed impact, noises through floors, appliance and plumbing noises, stairway noises, airborne noises through walls, noises originating with the tenants own appliances, and noises from central utility areas such as laundry rooms.

The builder used a range of genuine and Mickey Mouse devices into either of which class went such items as staggered studs, masonry party walls, fiber board underlayment, mineral wool stapled in ceiling joist spaces, gypsum board ceilings suspended on ceiling channels nailed to joists, and flexible bushings around plumbing.

Analysis of findings revealed that some sections of party walls and ceilings provided ratings close to lab ratings. Other sections of the same construction were way below lab ratings and in some cases totally ineffective.

Tenants backed the erratic effectiveness of construction with complaints that covered every possible kind of noise transmission.

NAHB concluded that builders who want effective sound control must bear the cost of substantial expert supervision of workmen who install sound control items. The best con-

Drywall IS Better ... For Burglars!

There is one class of citizens who prefer drywall and can benefit from it when it is used: burglars.

Locked doors in a drywalled structure are not deterrents. Burglars simply create their own "doors" by kicking a hole in the partition. It would take a lot more time to pick a lock.

Even the thickest wallboard (5/8") can be easily broken through without using tools.

More looting can take place in less time. By thus going through partitions, burglars can move quickly from one office to another, since they prefer to get all they can while they are working on a job.

It is possible to work with less mess and less noise; most burglars like things clean and as quiet as possible.

Finally, breaking through wallboard walls requires less physical exertion, thus saving energy they may need for a fast getaway.

Lath and plaster walls are one of the best protections available against invasion by burglars. In addition, they are one of the most fireproof types of construction. These should be prime considerations when building either residences or commercial structures.

ceived sound barrier is useless when installed by uninformed workmen.

Some specific suggestions were developed to guide designers and builders in selecting noise control measures. Among them is a rule-of-thumb that a 1/2" diameter hole in a masonry wall reduces its STC rating by seven points. If holes cannot be avoided, they must be sealed with heavy flexible caulking or mortar.

A typical sound leak source was the crack around exposed ceiling beams where wallboard is penetrated without any ability to be sealed. Not only should the finish material fit tightly around joists, but seams left above the floor should be thoroughly caulked before molding is applied. An excellent answer, of course, would be lath and plaster, where sealing of spaces is automatic, effective and thorough.

A girl is in the awkward age when she's too old to count on her fingers but still too young to count on her legs.

Sound isolating materials in floor-joist spaces are effective only if plumbing is held free from all framing. This means such devices as neoprene bushings—and not wooden wedges pounded between pipes and framing.

Telephone and TV outlets are as deadly to sound isolation efforts as are electrical boxes back-to-back or in the same stud space. It was found that even when boxes are not back-to-back, but are in the same stud plenum, the result is disastrous to sound control integrity.

How good does a sound controlling wall have to be? According to NAHB's researchers, any party-wall with an STC rating of less than 48 is less than useless.

For best field performance, a number of lathing and plastering techniques provide on-job ratings of more than 50 STC at economical cost. Full data on these systems is furnished without cost by the industry.—Trowel Chatter, San Jose, Calif.

AMA 'Constant Foe of Health Bills'

The American Medical Association has consistently opposed every program designed to improve medical care or make health care available to more people, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy (D-Mass.) stated at a hearing of his Senate health subcommittee.

Kennedy noted that the AMA, which now vehemently opposed the labor-backed National Health Security program, previously opposed social security, non-profit group health insurance, Medicare, group practice and even more training funds for new doctors. As a result Kennedy said, "the organization of health services is still a shambles. He said that the AMA has put "the lives and well-being of American citizens below its own special interests."

Minimum Wage Hike Vital, Says Meany

An increase in the minimum wage to at least $2 an hour would increase purchasing power and help produce jobs throughout the economy. AFL-CIO Pres. George Meany recently told a national television audience.

Appearing on the NBC program "Meet the Pres," the federation president declared that there are millions of persons "who should be in the economy as consumers" but who cannot "play their part" because of low wages.

To a question of whether increasing the wage floor would result in the loss of jobs, Meany said the same argument has been used ever since the first minimum wage law was passed in 1938 and at every increase since and that "no one has ever been able to come up with any statistical proof that this ever happened."

The questioning by four reporters—Neil Gilbride, Associated Press; James J. Kilpatrick, Washington Star syndicate; Philip Shabecoff, New York Times; Irving R. Levine, NBC—ranged over a number of current problems and actions. In his answers Meany made these points:

- The AFL-CIO does not advocate across-the-board wage and price controls but "if I was in his (the President's) position, I would impose controls at this time," to control inflation. The current price situation is running contrary to all the economic rules reflecting in part an inflationary psychology.

- The Philadelphia Plan approach as applied by the Dept. of Labor to St. Louis is "completely stupid," and is a plan that "sounds good politically but under no circumstances is it going to solve the problem" of jobs for minorities in the construction industry.

- Despite Administration interpretations about the easing of unemployment, there were more people jobless in June than a month earlier and unemployment in 1971 is higher than in 1970.

- The President should roll back interest rates, do something about available credit and should not have vetoed the public works bill. Current policies are hurting small business and especially the housing industry.

- There is a very grave question involved in the export of American capital and American jobs and that if the trend continues the United States will turn into a service nation, "we are not going to be able to produce anything."

- "If we are going to compete with the rest of the world on the basis of who can pay the least wages . . . to use human misery as an ingredient in competition" we will live to forget the dynamic American economy.

- Trade union leaders have exerted a moderating effect on wage negotiations and that leadership "is based on something much sounder" than the size of negotiated increases.

Insufficient Funds Imperil Job Safety Enforcement

Full and vigorous enforcement of the new federal job law could be curtailed by insufficient funds and a weak Administration policy, AFL-CIO occupational safety specialist George H. R. Taylor has warned.

Taylor, executive secretary of the federation's Standing Committee on Safety & Occupational Health, predicted a growing number of requests for special safety inspection "as more and more plant safety committees become aware of how to use this law." He said that as a result, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Occupational Safety & Health will be mainly concerned with "putting out fires," rather than targeting-in on problem areas in an orderly way.

"If that doesn't cause them [the Administration] to take a look at their policy of not asking for enough personnel to do an orderly job . . . then they have misread" the reason for the growing number of complaints, Taylor asserted. He pointed out that the Administration's funding requests will add fewer than 400 inspectors by the end of Fiscal 1972, while "at least 1,000 inspectors should be in the field" by that time.

Questioned by reporters on the network radio interview Labor News Conference, broadcast Tuesdays on the Mutual Broadcasting System, Taylor said the funds needed to recruit, train and put an effective force of inspectors into the plants where they're needed "is really minor," compared with "other line items and other program items being requested by federal departments."

Taylor said that the labor movement will not only continue its push for full funding of the Occupational Safety & Health Act, but has already started to "gear-up . . . from the shop level on up" to use the rights and protections given unions under the law "to help improve the workplaces." He said that since "it is very unlikely, during the Nixon Administration, that we are going to have enough fuel to keep the furnaces of this act burning very brightly," the unions are prepared to accept the responsibility of being the "unofficial enforcers" of the new job safety law.

Reform Needed in State-Local Tax-Spend Systems

State and local governments should modernize their taxing and spending systems, rather than press for the kind of "no-strings-attached revenue sharing" proposed by the Nixon Administration, AFL-CIO Economist Arnold Cantor declared.

Actually, "the federal government has been sharing its revenues with the states and localities ever since the Articles of Confederation," Cantor said. He noted that, in 1971 alone, some $30 billion will flow to state and local governments in categorical grant-in-aid systems under substantive legislation enacted by Congress that require programs to meet federal standards of performance.

The revenue sharing proposed by the Administration really doesn't add any help to the state local governments, Cantor declared. "It's a change of delivery systems for federal aid," he added.

The labor economist said that "the federal government should spend its money in accordance with needs established by Congress." He pointed out that there are 81,000 local taxing and spending units in the United States, and they are in no position to judge national needs.

Cantor agreed that state and local governments are trying to increase the efficiency and effectiveness of their own tax structures, "but they are really up against very overwhelming odds." Noting that "local government units grew up by historic or geographic accident," he said they are often "not responsive to needs." He said that local governments are also hampered by "archaic constitutions that restrict their power to raise money—to tax and spend wisely."

Heavy dependence on "very unfair, regressive sales taxes" is a major flaw in state revenue-raising systems, he said, and often-abuse property taxes "underpin 85 percent of city revenues." He said that although income taxes based on ability to pay would be more fair and efficient, they produce "only 15 percent of the total tax revenue raised by state and local governments."

Labor Board Logs Record Year

Members of the National Labor Relations Board had the busiest 12 months in their history so far as unfair labor practice decisions went in fiscal 1971.

The five-member board handed down 836 decisions on contested unfair practice charges brought by unions, employers and individuals—16 percent more than the 719 decisions rendered a year earlier.

The record was set in spite of a reduction in board staffs, NLRB Chairman Edward B. Miller said. In addition, the board issued 432 rulings in election cases—the same number as in fiscal 1970. Board members besides Miller are John H. Fanning, Gerald A. Brown, Howard Jenkins, Jr. and Ralph E. Kennedy.

Labor Day Message

ing economy. Without jobs there would be no Social Security. No Medicare.

There can't be schools or hospitals, housing or transportation unless there are jobs. Even unemployment compensation depends on jobs. Jobs produce tax revenues—the wherewithal any country needs to function.

That is why the sacrifice of jobs—to misguided economic game plans and to cheap-labor foreign competition—is so wrong.

Inflation must be halted. Unemployment must be reversed.

The President's new economic policies will not accomplish that result. There is nothing in his program that will increase jobs. The fact is, the President ignores every option at his discretion that might increase jobs.

For example:

- He refuses to release $12 billion in federal funds which he has sequestered and which are intended for worthwhile, socially constructive programs.

- He refuses to control interest rates. While interest rates remain at record highs they are the single greatest contributor to inflation.

- He refuses to control stock market speculation. The millionaires who pay little or no taxes because of tax loopholes now are receiving added benefits through speculation in the stock and bond market.

- He refuses to extend unemployment compensation for those whose benefits have been exhausted through prolonged unemployment resulting from his previous "game plan."

- He refuses to present a plan for reconversion of the economy from wartime production to peacetime. While he wrongly contends that the winding down of the Vietnam War is primarily responsible for unemployment, Mr. Nixon has not established a single viable program for finding jobs for veterans or for those previously employed in defense industries.

In short, what America needs is a program that will create jobs . . . not a program to make the wealthy wealthier. Unemployment is a waste of human resources. It also costs the economy dearly. Unemployed workers pay no taxes. They use taxes. Unemployed workers add nothing to the nation's output of goods and services. In fact, the workers who lost their jobs because of Administration economic policies would have produced about $30 billion worth of goods and services. This waste of economic resources and human resources must be reversed.

Trade union members intend to see that the injustice imposed on them by the President is corrected at the bargaining table.

The economy has to be made to work for all the people—including the aged, the jobless, the untrained and all the others who need it the most but who are getting the least out of it.

These are the very people who are being asked to bear the burden of the President's unfair and unequitable policies.

We demand economic justice.

We demand full employment. For only full employment will produce prosperity for all Americans.

This is the goal of America's trade unionists. It is a goal we believe in. And on this Labor Day 1971, we pledge our full resources to achieving it.

INFLATION

Who Are the Real Culprits?

The failure of this Administration to hold down inflation has created the need for a political scapegoat. President Nixon has openly and viciously attacked the incomes of construction workers. He has accused construction workers of causing the 5 percent inflation in 1969 and the 6 percent inflation in 1970. He has found a scapegoat convenient for his banker, his contractor, and his big business friends. He has ignored the true culprits of inflation in the economy and in construction and has passed all the blame on to construction workers. The fact is, that construction workers' wages have been declining in importance.

On-site labor costs as a percent of total housing costs have been declining by about 2.3 percent a year over the past 20 years, while financing costs and land costs have actually doubled over the same time span. The true culprit in the rising cost of high-rise apartments, schools, hospitals and nursing homes, as each U.S. Department of Labor study demonstrates, is not construction workers' wages, but rather the exorbitant interest charges and land costs that have been increasing steadily over the years.

Mortgage charges to new home owners increased 27 percent during the first two years under Nixon.

The fact is, the price of money in our economy, the prime rate, jumped 33 percent during Nixon's first year in office—this price of money gets figured into the cost of all goods and services bought and sold in this economy. In 1970 and 1971, this state of usury continued unchecked by the Administration—and after some decline during the first months of 1971, the price of money in the economy is again on the rise to 6 percent. Bankers suffered enormous profit increases in the first quarter of this year when interest charges to their best customers stood at 5¼ percent—so how better to ensure continued profits than to raise the price of money to 6 percent?—a feat left uncontested by the Nixon Administration.

Unions May Discipline Members, Court Affirms

Ever since passage of the Landrum-Griffin Act, disruptive and abusive acts have been all too frequent within unions. Thousands of union leaders, elected by a majority of the members, have been the object of vilification, harassment and physical assault by dissidents, often persons who had no justifiable complaint. Court suits brought against union leaders by members reached record proportions. The time and money expended in such cases has been mainly time and money wasted.

Things became so bad that many unions were afraid to expel a member, no matter what he did to violate the union's laws and rules. It came to be a prevalent view that a member could not be expelled for anything other than refusal to pay his dues. But a court decision now seems to have put some teeth back into the union structure.

The United States Supreme Court, in an 8 to 1 decision, ruled that a Mobile, Alabama, member of the Boilermakers Union was legally expelled by that union for creating dissension, threatening a local union officer and striking the union's business manager.

A jury had previously awarded the expelled member $152,150 in damages which he claimed resulted from his loss of membership. But the Supreme Court, in cancelling the award, declared that the member had been properly tried and given full opportunity to present his case, but that the evidence was conclusive that he did, indeed, assault the business manager.

In part, the Court's decision stated that the so-called "bill of rights" in the Landrum-Griffin law was not intended "to authorize courts to determine the scope for which a union may discipline a member." Presumably, this means that unions may devise their own laws and rules and enforce them, subject only to the proviso that no law of government is violated in the process.

It might be good if all rank and file members were made aware of the court's ruling. Some people might be discouraged from creating unnecessary conflicts.

This report was taken from news sources which could be in error as to detail. While we have no doubt as to its accuracy, we always advise affiliates to seek the advice of their own national union's legal staff in case of doubt, or to procure an opinion from a competent labor law attorney.

FROM THE PRESIDENT'S DESK

The officers and members of the local unions of the LIU have already been advised, by letter and through the pages of "The Lather", of my recent election as Secretary-Treasurer of the AFL-CIO Building and Construction Trades Department. This series of events began when his doctors advised our distinguished First Vice President, C. J. "Neil" Haggerty, that for health reasons, he should "slow down" his activities. Accordingly, he resigned as President of the B&CTD. The veteran and most able Frank Bonadio, who had served as the department's Secretary-Treasurer for 17 years, was elected to head the department. I was asked to become his successor in the post of Secretary-Treasurer.

The LIU Executive Council then granted me a leave of absence to accept the aforementioned post. It then became incumbent on me to select someone to serve as Acting General President during the period of my leave of absence. I gave a great deal of thought and study to the choice of a suitable person to act as General President during my leave of absence. In doing this, I felt it necessary to pick someone who would have the same trade union philosophy as myself and who would be willing and capable of carrying on the program which I had laid before the Vancouver convention; the program which the delegates there endorsed by electing me as General President. As I surveyed the field, I recognized that there were many qualified candidates to choose from.

From them all, I chose Third Vice President Kenneth M. Edwards and, on August 13, I called a special meeting of the Executive Council for the purpose of putting my choice before the members. I am happy to report that the Council unanimously confirmed my appointment of Ken Edwards to act as General President during my leave of absence. In so doing, the council members supported my selection of Ken as the most competent and qualified. As Business Manager of Local 65 in San Francisco, he has thoroughly proven his ability as an outstanding and knowledgeable administrator. He comes from a family which has had lathers in it since before the turn of the century. By background, education and experience, he is admirably fitted for the post. During the past seven years, Ken has acted in the capacity of Deputy International Representative. He has been a member of the National Lathing and Plastering Industry Apprentice Program. He has also been a member of the Carpenter-Lather Jurisdictional Committee. In addition to his duties in relation to the LIU, he has been active in trade unionism generally and is currently President of the San Francisco Building Trades Council. He has also been quite active in community affairs in the San Francisco metropolitan area. In each of the positions which he has filled, his performance has been admirable.

These are but a few of the many reasons why my choice was Third Vice President Kenneth Edwards. During the past several weeks, Ken and I have worked very closely together. With each successive day, it becomes more apparent to me that my choice was the proper one. These are critical times for organized labor in general and for lathers in particular, and it is important that the LIU have competent leadership. I am certain that Ken Edwards and the members of our Executive Council, backed up by our local officers, will supply the International with the high caliber of leadership these times require.

I will, of course, continue to work closely with Ken and, with the close cooperation of the Executive Council and the membership, I am sure that the LIU has no place to go but forward.

A collection of photographs showing scenes of activity in connection with lath and plaster on the Empire Stemmons Building in Dallas (better-known in some quarters as "Big D") is featured. Covering outside walls with prefabricated panels of lath-and-plaster is becoming increasingly popular with architects and builders. It is fast, relatively low-cost and provides great architectural latitude. Its use is opening vast new fields of employment for lathers. The story of the Empire Stemmons job may be found on page 10.

BY THE GENERAL SECRETARY TREASURER

This issue carries an account of what the American Institute of Architects believes should be done in regard to the prisons of the nation. The AIA believes society has done less than it should have done during the past many years to provide suitable housing for convicted lawbreakers. It is an unfortunate fact of life that we are not all as honest and law-abiding as we should be. It may safely be said that few, if any, reading this message can honestly say: "I never broke any law." "Breaking laws" may range from overtime parking to that ultimate crime of all, murder. From time before recorded history, whenever Man established some sort of government and social order, laws were formed and punishments instituted for those who broke them. Through the ages, punishments have, in general, become lesser and more humane. During the Middle Ages, a starving man caught stealing a loaf of bread might have his hand cut off. In the American frontier West, theft of a $20 horse was reason for hanging. Until recent years, premeditated murder, or murder during an armed robbery, was generally punished by death in the electric chair or gas chamber. But executions in the U.S. have decreased significantly. From 1930 to 1939 there were 1,667 executions. Between 1940 and 1949 they had dropped to 1,248. Between 1950 and 1959 that number had decreased to 717 and in the four years from 1960 to 1964 there was a drop to 181 executions. In 1965 there were 7, only one in 1966 and 2 in 1967, latest year for which figures are available from the "Statistical Abstract of the United States," a Department of Commerce publication by the Census Bureau. During the period covered, the population (and the rate of crime), have both been rising significantly.

It is clearly to be seen that there has been a startling change in the attitude toward crime and punishment. Meanwhile the prison population has been steadily growing. It went from 185,780 in 1955 to 210,895 10 years later . . . an increase of 13.5 percent . . . and it continues to grow. But what has not continued to grow has been the housing (prisons) which society has provided for those convicted of crimes. Because of increasing demands on tax dollars, improvements in socially-maintained services have been concentrated on schools, hospitals, roads, sanitary systems and other facilities used primarily by those outside of prisons. Many penologists assert that society is hurting itself by not supplying better housing and services to those held in prison. They say that the basic goal of imprisonment should be rehabilitation rather than simple incarceration and punishment.

The recent tragic uprising of prisoners in the Attica, N.Y., prison has caused widespread public and private discussion of the problem. Regardless of individually-held opinions on crime and punishment, it is probably safe to say that some prison facilities which ordinarily would not have been built, now will be built; some modernizations which would not have been achieved, now will be achieved. In either instance, it will mean increased job opportunities for building tradesmen in general and for lathers in particular. In structures other than maximum security areas, there is no doubt that lath and plaster will be valuable to architects planning prison construction, additions or renovations. It will be a great improvement over the dreary stone walls of yesteryear. It behooves those who plan future prisons to provide for segregation of younger and lesser offenders from hardened and vicious types. This, as much as anything, will assist in rehabilitation efforts. We confidently recommend lath and plaster to the American Institute of Architects and others who will, in the future, plan or participate in improvements of the nation's prisons.

K. M. Edwards Appointed Acting President

Third Vice President to Act During Leave of Absence Granted General Pres. Georgine

Third Vice President Kenneth M. Edwards, San Francisco, Calif., has been appointed by the Executive Council to act as President of the Lathers International Union during the leave of absence which the Council had previously granted to General President Robert A. Georgine.

The action was taken during the special meeting of the Council held in Washington, D.C., on August 13. Minutes of the meeting are on page 7. Edwards' appointment was recommended to the Council by Pres. Georgine.

Pres. Georgine was named Secretary-Treasurer of the AFL-CIO Building and Construction Trades Department in May. He succeeded Frank Bonadio, former Secretary-Treasurer, who was elected to the Presidency of the department after the resignation of LIU First Vice President C. J. "Neil" Haggerty for health reasons. Haggerty continues as LIU First Vice President.

The new acting General President was born in San Francisco on March 23, 1926. After schooling in San Francisco, he spent a year in the U.S. Army following his graduation by Lincoln High School.

After his release by the Army, he entered San Francisco City College and was graduated with a degree in Civil Engineering.

Pres. Edwards' father, Wilbert C. Edwards, was a member of Local Union 65. So was his uncle, Claude Edwards. Before them his grandfather, Charles H. Edwards, had joined Local 65 in August, 1904. He had, in fact, worked at the trade even before the LIU was formed in 1899. At that time the trade was known as that of a "housesmith": a combination of the trades of lathers and ironworkers.

Thus it was not unusual for Pres. Edwards to enter the apprentice program of Local 65 in 1948 and be admitted to journeyman status in 1952. He immediately took an active interest in the affairs of his local union and was elected its Vice President in 1955. The following year he was elected local union President.

In 1957 he was appointed administrator of the Northern California Lathers' Group Insurance Plan.

He was elected Business Representative of Local 65 in 1959, a post which he still holds.

Pres. Edwards was elected a trustee of the San Francisco Building Trades Temple Association in 1960 and elected its Secretary in 1968. In 1965 he was elected a Trustee of the San Francisco Building Trades Council, elected the Vice President in 1968 and elected its President last year. Last year, also, he was elected Third Vice President of the Lathers International Union at the Vancouver Convention.

He has served as a Trustee of the LIU National Apprenticeship Program since 1964. He has also served as a member of the Bay Area United Crusade Budget Study Committee for four years.

The new Acting General President was highly praised earlier this year by labor, civic and business leaders in the Bay Area after he organized and conducted one of the largest protest movements in the history of San Francisco. More than 5,000 construction workers protested in the Civic Center area against a proposed low limit on building height along the waterfront. With such a crowd in protest, there were only three police on duty in the area and not a billyclub in evidence. Even those holding to opposite opinions praised the way in which Building Trades President Edwards organized and controlled the demonstration, which was no doubt a factor as the City Council refused to enact the low building limit.

Pres. and Mrs. Edwards have two children, Robert, 15, and Carol, 17. Mrs. Edwards and the children are remaining in San Francisco until the school term is completed.

Stabilization Committee Details Method Of Operation Under Executive Order 11615

In a memorandum to craft dispute boards, national and international unions and contractors' associations, the procedures of the Construction Industry Stabilization Committee in regard to Executive Order 11615 have been outlined by D. Quinn Mills, Secretary of the Stabilization Committee.

E.O. 11615, issued by Pres. Nixon on Aug. 15, established the Cost of Living Council (COLC). Four days later, Aug. 19, the COLC approved a statement released by Labor Secretary James D. Hodgson regarding activities of the Stabilization Committee.

In the memorandum by the COLC Secretary, the disputes boards, unions and contractors' associations were advised as follows:

The Construction Industry Stabilization Committee will continue to process cases under the authorization of August 19, 1971.

Those economic adjustments provided to take effect prior to August 15 which are in collective bargaining agreements submitted for approval to the Committee or to a craft board prior to August 15, 1971, may be placed in effect upon approval by the Committee.

'Loopholes' Allow Business Executives To Smile In Face of Wage-Price Freeze

The old cliché holding that "the rich get richer and the poor get poorer" was never better illustrated than in President Nixon's wage-price freeze.

The Business Section of the New York Times recently had this to say in an analysis of what the freeze will do—or not do—to executive salaries and bonuses:

"Hundreds of the nation's most highly paid executives may be smiling all the way to the bank with their paychecks in coming months, notwithstanding President Nixon's wage freeze and whatever may come after it."

The Times lists a number of factors in executive remuneration that are not covered by the freeze: liberalized tax laws that enable them to keep sharply higher percentages of their earnings; stock options that become more valuable as the stock market goes up; uncontrolled dividend levels from stock already owned despite Nixon's suggestions that dividends not be increased, and increased bonuses should the bonus be based on current formulas.

While salaries may not be increased, an immense amount of executive income is in the form of bonuses keyed to increases in a corporation's business and profits which are not frozen. It is here that there is no freeze for the executive while there is for the worker in that same business.

According to Dr. Mayer, "if you eat a varied diet, balanced in regard to these 10 nutritional elements, you probably will not miss too seriously on any others you need."

Giant's program and five other different labeling experiments around the nation are being closely watched by FDA. It wants to come up with model labeling requirements which all canners will have to meet.

In addition to ten canned items which are labeled nutritionally, there are posters throughout the store that give some surprising information about common foods. They also help dieters by listing the calorie contents by serving.

Watermelon, for example, turns out to be a virtual gold mine of nutrition. Every 4 inch by 8 inch wedge provides 5 units of vitamin A, $\frac{1}{2}$ unit of vitamin B1, $\frac{1}{2}$ unit of vitamin B2, 5 units of vitamin C and 1 unit of iron. However, it provides no protein, niacin or calcium. It has only 1 gram of fat and 115 calories.

Just as Mother always told you, carrots are good for your eyes. One serving gives 10 units of vitamin A—all you need in a day.

But Momma probably didn't tell you that one egg bagel provides more basic nutritional items than a corn muffin.

Most shoppers know that meat is a source of protein, but it turns out that all meat doesn't yield the same amount of protein and price isn't a guide: $\frac{1}{4}$ pound of ground round has 5 units of protein; $\frac{1}{4}$ pound of sirloin steak, 4 units; $\frac{1}{4}$ pound of pork chops, 3 units; $\frac{1}{2}$ pound of chicken, 3 units and 2 hot dogs, 2 units.

Mrs. Peterson hopes that shoppers will use the system to get the most value for their dollar. At the same time she hopes that total disclosure will force manufacturers to produce foods high in nutritive value instead of empty calories.

It's even money that the recent wage freeze is the first freeze to actually make workingmen hot under the collar.

Pilot Project in Nutritional Labeling Underway in Wash., D.C.

By Ruth Jordan,
Press Associates, Inc.

One way to get the best buy for your frozen wages is to shop for food high in nutritional value. But that's not as easy as it sounds.

Even Dr. Jean Mayer, professor of nutrition at Harvard University and Chairman of the first White House Conference on Food and Nutrition, doesn't always know how to judge the nutritional value of new foods.

Now Mayer, consumer writer Sidney Margolius, James Turner, a consumer consultant, representatives from organized consumer groups, officials of the Food and Drug Administration and business have joined together under the leadership of former labor representative Esther Peterson to launch a pilot project in nutritional labeling. The experiment will be carried on by Giant Food Stores in the Washington area where Mrs. Peterson now serves as consumer advisor.

Mayer told a press conference there are so many new processed foods on the market that even he cannot tell if what he likes is good for him. "For instance, in what food group is pizza?," asked Mayer.

According to the labeling experiment, pizza turns out to be quite a dish—nutritionally speaking, that is. One $5\frac{1}{2}$ inch wedge contains 1 unit of protein, $\frac{1}{2}$ unit of vitamin A, $\frac{1}{2}$ unit of vitamin B1, $\frac{1}{2}$ unit of B2, $\frac{1}{2}$ unit of niacin, $\frac{1}{2}$ unit of vitamin C and 1 unit of calcium. It contains no iron, 6 grams of fat, and 185 calories.

In the unit system used in the Giant experiment, eight of the essential nutrients needed each day by an adult are listed on the label. Ten units represent the complete dietary requirements of an adult. The label encourages shoppers to choose from a wide variety of foods to get these basics as

Members present were:

C. J. Haggerty, First Vice President (Chairman)
H. J. Sheerin, Second Vice President
K. M. Edwards, Third Vice President
R. J. Hamilton, Fourth Vice President (Secy.)
A. H. Burton, Fifth Vice President
J. W. Sweeney, Jr., Sixth Vice President
M. J. Brennan, Seventh Vice President

President Robert A. Georgine, Secretary-Treasurer J. Earl Ferguson and Attorney Richard Markowitz were also present.

A detailed report was given by President Georgine in regard to his appointment as Secretary-Treasurer of the Building and Construction Trades Department, Washington, D.C. It was noted that President Georgine was performing all the duties of his office, and that a period of transition would be needed to make effective the leave of absence. However, under his own order, President Georgine had removed himself from the L.I.U. payroll as of June 1, 1971.

Any expenses accrued by President Georgine in the service of the L.I.U. shall be paid by the L.I.U. (Motion carried.)

President Georgine recommended to the Executive Council that Kenneth M. Edwards, Third Vice President, be appointed to act as President of the L.I.U. during General President Georgine's leave of absence.

The Executive Council concurred unanimously in the recommendation of General President Georgine. (Motion carried.)

The Secretary of the Executive Council be instructed to draft two resolutions—one in appreciation for Vice President Haggerty's life of service to organized labor and the other in appreciation to General President Georgine for his dedicated service to the L.I.U. and congratulations on his new appointment as an officer of the National Building Trades Department. (Motion carried.)

A discussion was held on the monthly financial report in The Lather, including resolution No. 61 from the International Convention of August, 1970. The Executive Council decided the publication of the financial report in The Lather is not required by the L.I.U. Constitution and that it was not in the best interest of the L.I.U. to publish the financial report in The Lather.

The Executive Council further decided that the action of the General Secretary-Treasurer J. Earl Ferguson, in forwarding the financial report to each local union is in accordance with the L.I.U. Constitution.

Administration Hints Wage Raises Will Be Linked With 'Productivity'

Rigid restrictions on collective bargaining loom as a real possibility following the 90-day wage-price freeze. President Nixon and his top aides are hinting.

Secretary of Commerce Maurice H. Stans held a closed-door meeting with textile executives and said that after the freeze, wage gains would be tied to "productivity."

Nixon, at his own press conference later, said that Stans "represented what is a strongly felt view primarily in the business community. It does not represent that we have foreclosed the matter as far as our own thinking is concerned."

Commerce Secretary STANS

Stans, however, told the business executives that the views did indicate which way the Nixon Administration is leaning.

Nixon also said that the new, post-freeze stabilization program "will have teeth in it," declaring that "you cannot have jawboning that is effective without teeth."

In a third development, Secretary of Labor James D. Hodgson has warned labor and management that contracts negotiated now may have to be altered after the freeze, depending on the nature of the new stabilization program.

The businessmen, meeting with reporters after the confab with the Commerce Secretary, said that Stans told them that while the precise formula had not yet been worked out to control wages after the freeze, productivity would be the "essence" of any formula.

The business community has long advocated holding wages to productivity. Organized labor has strongly objected to this, pointing out that productivity levels are not a science and that labor has no control over productivity since it is based upon sales and full utilization of plant capacity. Other objections have been registered, too.

The productivity formula was tried during the Kennedy and Johnson Administrations when a ceiling of 3.2 percent a year in wage increases was set. However, it was largely ignored by both labor and management.

A compulsory and enforceable relationship between wages and productivity would undoubtedly produce some sharp clashes on the collective bargaining front.

The business executives said that Stans also informed them that the President was leaning to the business approach to wage and price stabilization after the freeze. This would mean that the government would make the basic decisions rather than a tripartite board of the public, labor and management.

They said that Stans' view was based on the performance of the Construction Industry Stabilization Committee—a tripartite panel—set up by Nixon which has resulted in reducing wage increases from 17 percent a year in construction to 10 percent.

Stans was quoted as saying that this would be "wholly unacceptable" if applied to the entire economy. He wants sharper wage increase cutbacks.

The report of the Stans meeting with business executives followed a statement issued by Hodgson in which he warned that any collective bargaining agreement negotiated during the 90-day freeze may require revision "depending on what policies will prevail following the 90-day freeze."

Hodgson quickly pointed out that the freeze "was not intended to declare a moratorium on collective bargaining or to discourage settlements." However, in the minds of many observers this could be precisely what the freeze would do. It has happened in aerospace and in longshore.

In spelling out just what may not be done, Hodgson said:

"The parties may not agree to wage or benefit increases which would become effective during the freeze period. Nor may they agree to wage or benefit increases that apply to work performed during the freeze period which would be paid at some later date.

"Concerning retroactive contracts, the Cost of Living Council (CLC) established the following policy: Retroactive wage increases for work performed prior to the freeze are permitted, provided that the parties can demonstrate that they did not change their position during negotiations in order to compensate for or absorb the impact of the freeze.

"This requires the parties to produce evidence of past practice and the pattern of present negotiations. A procedure will be established by the CLC for resolving evidence. However, for work performed after August 15 the actual rate which was in effect during the base period is the ceiling wage for the freeze period.

"For example, a contract is agreed to on September 1, effective July 1, increasing a wage rate from $2.80 to $3.00. For the period July 1 through August 15, the worker's wage is $3.00; from August 16 through the duration of the freeze, $2.80."

Hodgson said that the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service "stands ready to provide assistance to bargainers during this period."

Union Survey Finds Much Cheating on Price Freeze Order

All but four of 102 supermarkets surveyed by the State, County and Municipal Employees in Manhattan in a single week were reported to be in violation of the Administration's price freeze.

"Pricing committees" also are being set up by Machinists' locals throughout New York to check supermarkets and department stores and distribute information on those that are chiseling on the freeze.

These are but two examples of an effort being made by unions across the nation to police prices. Unions are setting up the programs, sometimes in conjunction with consumer groups, to fill the void created by woefully inadequate government mechanisms for controlling prices.

AFSCME President Jerry Wurf, whose union has established a "Price Watch" program, says, "Monitoring prices and bird-dogging retail stores is not our favorite pastime. We are doing this because the Administration is not doing it, and because our members, their families and all other Americans stand to suffer from the President's two-faced game plan."

Leaders of other unions involved in efforts to police prices make much the same point. As one labor leader said, "We don't know if we can really be effective. It's a difficult undertaking but the government isn't doing anything about it."

IAM Secretary-Treasurer Eugene Glover has called upon all local financial officers to check their bills carefully to spot illegal price increases, get members and families to do the same, and report violations to local freeze authorities.

Workers and their families also should be on the watch for a drop in the quality of goods, products and services because "this is the first thing price chiselers generally think of," Glover said.

AFSCME's "price watch" which started in New York will be extended shortly to Baltimore, Philadelphia, Indianapolis, Boston, Honolulu and other cities until it is nationwide, the union said.

The union's District Council 37, which checked New York City stores, said that 98 of 102 stores it found violating the freeze were doing so simply because they did not have available for public inspection a list of top prices charged for items the month before the freeze began.

As a union official noted, without such a list which is required by the freeze order, it is impossible to make price comparisons. He urged New York consumers who find price violations to report them to Operation Price Watch, Box 396, Canal Street Station, New York, N.Y. 10013.

Leon Schacter, a Meat Cutters' vice president, said his union has price policing underway. It will be established in stores and manufacturing plants where the union has representation. Violations will be turned over to the government "with a demand that there be a crackdown," he said.

Schacter said the union already has received some reports of price violations that are being checked out, including a report that one sausage manufacturer told a union leader it intends to tack on a 20 cents-a-pound increase "and who will know the difference."

"As disgusted as we are with Nixon's unfair attack on workers' wages and his handouts to business," Schacter said, "we've got to go after the price gougers or the impact will be that much worse."

A nudist camp is a place in the woods where men and women go to air their differences.

Cheap-Labor Nations Placing Fake Union Labels on Products

Secretary-Treasurer Edward P. Murphy of the AFL-CIO Union Label & Service Trades Department has charged that the wave of "Phony Labels" entering this country affixed on clothing and assorted products is a direct slap in the face to the union members of this country.

Murphy charged that imported products bearing a facsimile of Union Labels of AFL-CIO unions is outright deception and totally unacceptable under any conditions to American consumers. For years the American trade union movement has prided itself in granting and in guarding the use of Union Labels. Organized labor has always attempted to point out the fact that a product bearing a Union Label is made under decent conditions by men and women who receive good wages and fringe benefits—The "Phony Label" assault is a direct attack on American Trade Unions and their respective Union Labels as well as the employers with whom they have contracts.

Recent arrangements by Macy's, Bonwit-Teller, E. J. Korvette and S. Klein Stores to remove such clothing with "alleged deceptive Union Labels" do not even scratch the surface of the problem, according to Murphy.

He noted this department does not accept or believe that America's best interests are being served by our present trade policy. "We are convinced that the decline and now the deficit in trade is directly related to the investment of money and technology abroad by U.S. firms!"

The most important segment of this entire problem is the one which is receiving the least attention—the American worker who is also the consumer. He not only helps produce, he helps consume too! In reality he reinvests in our economy.

"It is clear," Murphy said, "that this is not just a vested interest in so far as our objections are concerned because the trade policy problem is threatening the American way of life. America cannot achieve progress by being undercut by its own industry! A 90-day tax on imports is temporary salve, but not a permanent solution!"

Lath-and-Plaster Prefabrication in Dallas

Local 140 Members Help Erect 11-Story Building in Record Time

Completion of 704 exterior column panels averaging 11-13 feet high by 5 feet wide in less than 9 weeks has set something of a record in the construction of the Stemmons Empire 11-story office building in Dallas, Texas, through the ingenuity of Carpenter Plastering Company; the enthusiasm of the architects Neuhaus and Taylor, and the interest of the owners in getting the most for their money.

The architects, known for developing the "SCAT" program (systems, contractor, architect concept team) have established world-wide prominence for their ability to construct good buildings rapidly, and this provided one of the most interesting industry challenges.

Virtually all of the work on the handsome stucco-coated panels was done in the shops of Carpenter Plastering—lathing, plastering, transportation to and erection on the job, and it proved the wisdom of the pre-fab technique which heretofore has been confined chiefly to lathing, but not also including the plastering itself. Only plastering done on the job, after the panels were erected, was the fire-stopping within the column chase at each floor level.

The panels were constructed of 16 gage metal studs and track with $\frac{3}{4}$ and $1\frac{1}{2}$ inch channel bracing. Six-mil polyvinyl back 3.4 diamond mesh galvanized lath with portland cement scratch, brown coat plaster and stucco finish completed the prefabricating.

The lathing was done by members of Local Union 140, Dallas, Texas, according to Claude E. Van Voast, business agent. He said that the local is currently working on two more jobs for Carpenter Plastering, for buildings being erected in Arlington and Bedford, Texas.

Bricklayers laid claim to the erection of the wall panels on grounds that the work constituted exterior wall work. However, the National Joint Board for Settlement of Jurisdictional Disputes awarded the work to the LIU.

The architects have accumulated huge work assignments all over the nation by bringing the whole team together in their design and construction process. They hold pre-conferences with all involved, discussing various systems and techniques for getting the most building for the least money—in the shortest time; then, after awards are made they carefully team-plan the construction and its coordination, and are able to offer a guaranteed cost to the owner, together with a completion schedule which puts money in his pocket in savings in interim financing and early completion.

"We like the lath and plaster technique," says Marvin L. Cleavinger of Neuhaus and Taylor, "because it offers virtually everything anyone could desire—good strength, versatility, long life, economy, weight reduction 13' long, weighed approximately 1400 lbs. each at the job site.

An assembly-line operation was set up in a large warehouse built near the plasterer's shop and an overhead traveling hoist assembly installed to assist in transportation of the work from the lathing stage, which was done in jigs and largely welded, through the plastering stage and out into curing sheds ready for transportation to the job.

Channel iron, metal lath, beads and casing were installed in the shop, after which the lathed shapes moved along for the plastering operation. These were scratched one day, browned the next and finished two days later with a low-water ratio standard portland cement finished mix and a white cement blown texture.

A truck was specially equipped to cushion the panels for delivery to the job and extreme pains were taken to further cushion the hoisting equipment used for lifting and transporting them to the building frame where they were installed, usually with the work of not more than two men, carefully aligned, welded to the steel frame and caulking installed.

Resulting from this ingenious method, Carpenter Plastering Co. will soon do two more structures, one of them much higher, for the same owners and architects and there should be much similar work all over Texas and the nation, for the Texas Bureau and other industry people are telling the story widely and enthusiastically!

On the Stemmons Empire job, Henry C. Beck Company was general contractor; Bill Cornett acted as general superintendent for Carpenter Plastering. Studs and lath came from Inland, nailed together with Bostitch nails especially designed to penetrate 16 ga. steel studs. Materials included Inland-Ryerson, nails and cement from Trinity Division. General Portland Cement Company.

The mix was white portland, white masonry and white sand, which is the standard for all exterior mixes produced by the Carpenter shops. In this instance the whole project was machine-dash finish.

and established values; we also like the "team concept" for it brings ideas, talent and enthusiasm to the job—so everyone's happy."

Overall cost savings on Stemmons Empire resulted in savings of more than $24,000 on the spandrel beams alone because of the plaster technique. There was a further savings of approximately $2 per square foot in switching from a pre-cast concrete panel to the lath and plaster method and there were overall significant savings in time.

The building encloses 250,000 square feet of rental space together with a large parking area and was completed, from the "hole in the ground" to finished structure in less than 13 months.

PRISONS

Lath and Plaster Can Serve in Many Instances

With encouragement from the federal government, architects are being asked to design "invisible" prisons that inside or outside, don't look like ominous stone fortresses. The recent Attica Prison tragedy has caused concern for prisons to exist where, before the uprising, there was none.

New prisons will be located in populated areas, not hidden in a remote corner of a state. These "community correctional facilities" will be smaller, housing perhaps a maximum of fewer than 500 prisoners. There would be no more warehouses with 1,500 to 2,000 inmates. They will look more like other neighboring buildings, and will be arranged in residential groupings, according to a spokesman for the American Institute of Architects.

Prison researchers have recommended creating more humane living conditions, which might include brightly colored walls and private cells for many prisoners. Some inmates might have inexpensive styrofoam or inflatable plastic furniture. Honor inmates might have access to kitchens, and even keys to their own cells, as nighttime protection against dangerous prisoners.

Norman A. Carlson, director of the Federal Bureau of Prisons, is part of a new effort on the part of the federal government to become involved in the design of new correctional facilities throughout the country. He feels that architectural solutions can be a key element in correcting the ills of the present penal system.

In the September issue of the AIA Journal, the official publication of the 23,000-member American Institute of Architects, Carlson said:

"For far too long, prison architecture has consisted primarily of revising old designs to reduce escape risks.

Disguising security with cosmetic techniques has done little to reduce the chances that an inmate will commit a new crime upon release."

Many facilities being planned and designed today reflect the radical changes in penal philosophy being bred by recent criminological studies and by the 1970 Crime Control and Safe Streets Act.

The act calls for preventive crime measures as well as stepped-up law enforcement. It created the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration (LEAA) which has funded several prison research projects.

Through the LEAA-sponsored studies it is hoped that prison officials will begin to realize that antiquated and repressive buildings are part of the reason that prisons have become "schools for crime" rather than "correctional institutions." The guidelines emerging from these studies, which will be used in setting federal standards, will also make it difficult for any locality to obtain federal aid for an outmoded type of prison.

It is generally accepted that most present prisons do not rehabilitate. Of all prisoners released in 1963, 65 per cent were re-arrested within six years.

LEAA is advocating use of community treatment centers. These centers, still not fully tested, would treat many people now in prisons who are not actually dangerous to society. Among these prisoners are many alcoholics, narcotics offenders and one-time offenders. It also includes nuisance offenders in jail for non-support, vagrancy and other minor offenses. LEAA's studies aim at defining the best use of these treatment centers outside the usual prisons and jails.

Alcatraz, which sits on an island in San Francisco Bay—remote, inaccessible, forbidding—exemplifies the old penal philosophy of retribution and vengeance. The dungeon-like structure, and similar ones with their tall turrets, high security walls, closely barred windows and tiers of steel cages, have outlived the ideas which built them.

In recent years, Aleatraz has been closed by the Federal Bureau of Prisons. So has the reformatory at Chillicothe, Ohio. Both were decaying facilities. But many others, as old or older, are still open. More than 100 prisons which housed convicts during the Civil War are still in use, according to a recent article in The New York Times.

The rationale for locating new prisons in or near cities is that work-release and furlough programs can be easily arranged and more competent professional staffs can be secured and encouraged to stay on the job.

"Presently all too many of our prisons, old and new alike, are isolated as if there were no world outside," says William Nagel in the Journal article. Nagel is director of the American Foundation, a private organization studying prison conditions.

Nagel says that, over the past 25 years, facilities for the old, poor, mentally ill and epileptic have been located in populated areas, but he has found no similar trend for the location of prisons.

John P. Conrad suggests that architects should go back to the buildings they design to find out how they are functioning. Chief of Crime Prevention and Rehabilitation for the National Institute of Law Enforcement and Criminal Justice, he says: "The archaic design of even new prisons and jails proves that architects have been too docile and wardens too strict."

Conrad calls one recently completed prison "no more than a people warehouse." Inmates have no room for exercise, no space for recreation, no area to work away frustrations, anger or energy.

LEAA is funding three studies, and coordinating a fourth, all of which aim toward preventing repetition of such institutional failures. It is also examining the functioning of a research institution for youth at Morgantown, W.Va., run by the federal government.

Although penal philosophy is beginning to break out of antiquated molds, many prison authorities are afraid that public opinion may criticize them for "coddling" criminals. In one recently completed state prison, according to an article in Architectural Record, officials authorized construction of a large swimming pool. But after it was built, they covered it over with earth.

When public opinion permits, they will quietly take out the dirt and fill it with water!

Curb on Monopoly Is Urged

At a time when the Nixon Administration is clearly showing its business—Big Business at that—orientation both for multi-national corporations abroad and conglomerates at home, Rep. Emanuel Celler, New York Democrat, is urging new and more effective ways of curbing corporate monopolies.

His concern over what has been happening in the business world during the past ten years as corporations grow bigger and bigger through mergers and conglomerates, is more than justified.

Celler is chairman of the House Anti-Trust Subcommittee and has just finished a study of mergers and acquisitions of conglomerate corporations that threaten the American economy with domination by "virtually self-contained economic domains."

"Growth of these vast corporate structures, even though accompanied by an increase in number of much smaller and less powerful companies that operate under the umbrella of major companies, presages imposition of cartel-like structures throughout American business," said a subcommittee staff report recently published.

"Some observers foresee a situation where the American economy will be dominated by a few hundred business suzerainties under whose influence a multitude of small, weak, quasi-independent corporations will be permitted a subordinate and supplemental role."

The report sharply questions the generally held idea that mergers are brought about to increase productivity and efficiency. Instead, "financial considerations" have been the dominant motive in the post-war merger movement.

"In general," the report said, "the major acquisitions by the companies studied were corporate organizations that were profitable and successful before acquisition. The main effect of the merger or acquisition was to transfer control and management of an already successful enterprise to a new group."

Actually, the report found, acquired companies were less efficient

after merger than they had been before. Only seven of 28 major companies that were swallowed up in a merger were more successful in the years after merger than they had been before.

The report also noted that merger negotiations opened the way to all sorts of stock speculation and manipulation by insiders, privy to what was going on and that trust departments of major banks became involved in deals and cross deals.

"Ostensibly banks are supposed to maintain a complete separation between the administration of their trust department and the operations of their commercial department. This separation clearly has not been maintained consistently."

In a section devoted to the social costs of mergers, the report notes that major areas have lost corporate headquarters which are now concentrated in a few giant cities such as New York; that labor-management relations have been seriously eroded and that economic power has become increasingly centralized.

The report cites numerous authorities to show that conglomerate power not only gives it power over its competitors, but "represents a bargaining advantage over labor." It cites a staff report of the Federal Trade Commission, saying:

"The ultimate sanction that makes collective bargaining viable and responsible is the economic power that it can wield through a strike. By conferring the power to cross-subsidize, business conglomeration may change the balance of bargaining power with trade unions."

Ever since 1887, when Congress enacted legislation to control the railroads, it has sought through anti-trust laws "to contain the social, economic and political dangers inherent in a continuing increase in the concentration of economic power in large business organizations," the Celler report says.

Obviously this effort has had limited, highly limited effect. It is surely time for a new start.

Stabilization Committee Report

The parties to all newly negotiated collective bargaining agreements in construction should continue to submit these agreements to the craft boards under existing procedures. The information specified in paragraph below should be included.

The local parties should submit, with each case forwarded to a craft board or to the Committee on or after August 15, 1971, a detailed statement of the facts (either a joint statement by labor and management, or separate statements if a disagreement exists), as to the status of each agreement on August 14. This statement might include, for example, what contact the local parties had had with the craft board or Committee, whether the local parties had been directed to collect additional wage information, etc.

Any deferred increase provided to take effect on or after August 15, 1971, in any contract, whether reviewed by this Committee or already negotiated prior to Executive Order 11588 (issued March 29, 1971), is not to be placed into effect during the 90-day freeze established by Executive Order 11615.

The Committee has said it will continue to advise the craft boards as to further developments whenever such action is appropriate.

IN CHICAGO, members of the International Association of Fire Fighters, AFL-CIO were fascinated by the symphony orchestra program announced by the Chicago Historical Society for performance on Sept. 5. The program included: Haydn's "Fire Symphony", Handel's "Royal Fireworkers Music", and Charles Ives' "Firemen's Parade on Main St." Why the concentration on combustion? Well, Sept. 5 happened to be the 100th anniversary of the Great Chicago Fire.

IN LONDON, ENGLAND, Beryl Bowman was fired from her office job because her husband, a football star, appeared as a model in a male fashion show. How come? Beryl was employed by a custom tailoring firm, but the clothes her husband modeled were made by a competitor of her boss. "I never, never," said the fired Mrs. Bowman, "imagined that grown businessmen could be so small-minded. My two children are more adult."

IN NEWPORT, R.I., pretty Mrs. Anne Weinstein, of West Roxbury, Mass., became the first distaff member of the previously all-male Cigar Smokers of America. After considerable debate the club decided to "desexegrate" by a vote of two-to-one. One of Mrs. Weinstein's first statements was that she intended to smoke only union-made cigars.

IN LONDON, ENGLAND, after long research the British Journal of Alcoholism reported that these were the five types of workers most likely to become alcoholics: traveling salesmen, tavern owners, market porters, printers, and newspapermen.

IN WASHINGTON, D.C., Secretary of Housing and Urban Development George Romney got nationwide publicity last year when he announced that he would turn 25% of his salary back to the U.S. government to help fight inflation and to offer an example to other members of President Nixon's cabinet. But quietly at the start of 1971 Romney resumed collection of his $60,000-a-year pay. Explaining to reporters, Romney said,

"I didn't think it was having any effect"—referring to other members of Nixon's "millionaire cabinet".

IN HARRISBURG, PA., because of President Nixon's wage-price freeze order, state employees won't receive negotiated pay hikes or cost-of-living increases but members of the state legislature made sure that their own incomes wouldn't suffer from any economic anemia. Last June the 252 legislators voted themselves a $300-a-month compensation increase. At first it seemed that the raise would be subject to the "freeze" but after some of the lawmakers had a quiet talk with officials of the Office of Emergency Preparedness the raise was given a blessing from on high.

IN CAIRO, EGYPT, the country's reactionary dictatorship came up with a new labor-management relations gimmick when several thousand workers at the new Helwan iron and steel plant staged a sit-in strike. The government, instead of kicking the strikers out and then locking them out, locked them in, instead. The plant is being constructed with USSR money and advice, and as if to prove Russia's strong hand in Egypt these days President Anwar El-Sadat used an old, old Communist sophistry against the strikers. "Workers can't go on strike against our factories," said Sadat, "because in Egypt the workers own the factories."

IN WASHINGTON, D.C., compulsory retirement forces millions of Americans out of their jobs with meager pensions and inadequate Social Security. But members of the U.S. Congress—if one influential group in the House of Representatives has its way—will get lifetime pensions much larger than their salaries if they'll just get out of Congress. Under legislation introduced by two middle-aged Representatives, senior Congressmen who quit next year would receive a $40,000-a-year pension, only $2,500 less than their present salaries, and on top of that windfall, a free $50,000 life insurance policy.

It's Becoming More Difficult All the Time To Purchase an Automobile Made In the U.S.A.!

So you don't want to buy a Volkswagen, because you prefer an American-built car? Good! But you had better be careful in your selection, because buying an American-built car, with an American name, is sometimes a chancy thing.

The New York Times reported, on June 13, that Chrysler Corp. had made a deal to buy 35 percent of Japan's Mitsubishi Co. over a 3-year period.

As part of the deal, Chrysler is distributing in the U.S. the new Dodge Colt—an American brand-name compact imported from Japan and actually manufactured by Mitsubishi.

In turn, Mitsubishi will distribute, in Japan, Plymouth Valiants.

Are these Valiants made in the U.S. by U.S. workers? Not hardly.

They're made by Chrysler's subsidiary in Australia.

The result, for the American economy and for American workers, is the displacement of U.S. production and employment—auto assembly and parts production, as well as steel, glass and tires. Moreover, this displacement probably will also result in the further loss of replacement production of parts and tires.

Similar deals with Japanese auto companies, now being negotiated by GM and Ford, will undoubtedly result in the further substantial and widespread displacement of U.S. production and employment.

Meanwhile, according to the Division of Labor Market Information in the Manpower Administration, the unemployment rate in Detroit during June stood at 9.5 percent.

Small wonder!

When you decided to spend your vacation in your back yard, your neighbors realized that you're sensible, imaginative, level-headed, home-loving, and dead broke.

Legislative Program By Ohio Labor Has Results

Hard persistent bargaining by the Ohio AFL-CIO reaped big dividends as the House approved the largest boost in workmen's compensation benefits in the entire history of the fund. In addition to hinging future work compensation benefits to the cost of living (to be reviewed each September), benefits in the following categories were raised:

Disabled Workmen's Relief Fund: from $45.50 a week to $56 a week.

Temporary Total: from $63 a week to $84 a week for the first 12 weeks from $56 a week to $77 a week after the 12th week.

Temporary Partial: from $56 a week to $70 a week.

Permanent Partial: from $52.50 a week to $56 a week.

Permanent Total: from $56 a week to $77 a week.

Survivor's Benefits: total maximum benefits for a widow with children would increase from $20,000 to $24,000.

The bill that finally passed on the House floor and sent to the Senate contained benefits about 50 percent higher than those recommended by the House Commerce, Agriculture and Labor Committee. The bill's price tag has been set by newsmen at $30 million—a nice mid-summer treat for the injured workers of Ohio.

Black Majorities in 14 Cities, Says Census

Fourteen new cities now have black majorities, according to the U.S. Bureau of Census. The Bureau said that the 1970 census showed that among cities with a population of 25,000 or more only one—Charleston, S.C.—changed from a black majority in 1960 to a white majority in 1970.

Prior to the 1970 census only Washington, D.C., and Bessemer, Ala., had a majority of Negro residents. Cities with more than 200,000 that now have black majorities are Newark and Atlanta. Others with more than 50,000 population are Compton, Calif.; East St. Louis, Ill.; Gary, Ind. and East Orange, N.J.

Those under 50,000 with a majority of Negroes (besides Bessemer) are: Willowbrook, Calif.; Westmont, Calif.; East Cleveland, Ohio; Florence-Graham, Calif.; Highland Park, Mich.; Petersburg, Va.; Greenville, Miss. and Prichard, Ala.

There were 103 counties last year with a Negro population of 50 percent or more. Macon County, Ga. had a black majority of 81.1 percent. The figures have particular significance for political analysts.

Carpenter Union Names C. E. Nichols Treasurer

The Carpenters have announced that Executive Board Member Charles E. Nichols has been appointed treasurer of the union, succeeding Peter E. Terzick who is retiring after serving 10 years in the post.

Nichols, 50, is a native of Desdemona, Tex., and joined Local 2035 of the Carpenters in Crystal Bay, Nev., in 1946 after his discharge from the Army.

After moving to California in 1947 he became active in Local 1484 where he rose from recording secretary of the local to business manager of the Tulare and Kings Counties Building & Construction Trades Council.

Nichols became a general representative of the Carpenters in 1956. Ten years later Pres. M. A. Hutcheson appointed him as a member of the executive board representing the union's eighth district on the West Coast.

Terzick's union career has spanned 34 years and saw him rise from vice president of his local in Seattle to become general treasurer. He was appointed to the treasurer's post in 1961 and was elected at conventions in 1962, 1966 and 1970.

He has also served as editor of The Carpenter, the union's monthly magazine, since 1943, and will continue to edit the publication until a successor is named.

Secretary-Treasurer Earl Ferguson, on behalf of the officers and members of the LIU, extended congratulations to Treasurer Nichols and sincere wishes for a happy retirement to past Treasurer Terzick.

Terzick also is currently serving as chairman of the AFL-CIO Technical Committee on Problems of Older and Retired Workers.

Landmark Jurisdiction Case Before High Court

The AFL-CIO has joined the fight against a Labor Board decision that would undercut the right of unions to settle jurisdictional disputes between themselves.

In a "friend of the court" brief submitted to the U.S. Supreme Court, the federation said that such disputes must "be resolved within labor's own ranks, where they properly should be.

The high court is considering the important test case on appeal of the National Labor Relations Board. It involves a 1967 jurisdictional dispute between Plasterers Local 79 and another union performing work for the Texas State Tile & Terrazzo Co. at Houston.

The Plasterers local and the other union were willing to abide by an award—to the Plasterers—by the National Joint Board for Settlement of Jurisdictional Disputes in accordance with the constitution of the Building & Construction Trades Dept.

But the employer was not satisfied with the award and took the case to the NLRB which ruled in favor of Texas State Tile's designation of jurisdiction, stating that employers are permitted to force a compulsory arbitration hearing.

The federation brief, however, said the section of the act invoked by the NLRB only provides for such action when the unions involved do not voluntarily settle a jurisdictional dispute and that the NLRB should have refrained from any action in the case.

Thomas E. Harris, associate general counsel of the AFL-CIO who submitted the brief, noted that the NLRB's intervention in such a case destroys "inter-union (jurisdictional) settlement which Congress was careful to preserve" in the National Labor Relations Act.

The Plasterers took the case to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia which overturned the NLRB decision. The Labor Board then took it to the Supreme Court.

The issue for the high court to decide is whether a jurisdictional agreement between two unions can be set aside simply because the employer "has not consented to be bound" by the inter-union procedure.

Sports Unions Protest Wage Freeze, Athletes Hung Up on Negotiations

By Duane Emme, Press Associates, Inc.

Unions in sports, like others, are angered at inequities in President Nixon's wage-price freeze. There are sure to be repercussions from it in professional athletics.

In one of its early rulings, the Cost of Living Council decided that professional athletes who had not signed new contracts prior to Aug. 15 could not negotiate wage increases to take effect during the current 90-day freeze.

That much is clear. But how does the freeze affect athletes' bonuses, incentives and long-term pacts? The question requires an answer and more Council rulings in the pro sports area are expected.

Most negotiating for salary boosts in athletics is going on in football, basketball and hockey. Although the various Players Associations—the unions — don't negotiate individual money contracts, they do bargain for pensions, TV money and fringe benefits.

As a result of the freeze, thorny labor relations in sports may get even thornier. Consider some of the implications:

On the same day the Council set forth its ruling, the Boston Bruins announced the signing of superstar Bobby Orr to a five-year contract reported as worth $1 million, "the highest wage in hockey history." Bruins' management said the pact was "executed" in February but held up because "several minor points" had to be settled. No details were released.

Will Orr's contract apply during the freeze? A Bruins' spokesman said the C of LC would have to decide. If it says "no", he added, Orr stays at last year's salary, reported to be around $35,000 to $40,000.

But if the government lets Bobby skate around the freeze, what becomes the fate of teammate Phil Esposito? Some Bruin fans claim he's more valuable than Orr. "Espo," who has broken a flock of scoring records, is unsigned and seeking a big pay raise. He's in the $30,000 range.

The National League Football Players' Association contends that "close to 200" pro football players are unsigned and thus may be frozen from any salary increase this year. Knowing many Americans can't get concerned about men who are paid $20,000 a year and more to play games, NFLPA Executive Director Ed Garvey makes these counterpoints:

Many football players make less than the $20,000 figure. The average career of a pro football lasts for only 4.6 years. An estimated one-third of the players "will never have a chance to make up the loss suffered by the freeze because they will be out of the sport through injuries, cuts and retirements."

Some team managements indicate they might agree to raises conditioned on their not being effective until the freeze ends. Others, like Jim Finks, Minnesota Vikings' general manager, hold that all previous offers rejected by unsigned players are out the window. A fight against any "bend" in the wage freeze is viewed by many club owners as "fulfillment of a patriotic duty."

Meanwhile, the gripe of pro athletes is the same as that of other workers who see employers reaping larger profits through prices that were raised to allow for wage boosts now denied. As one player said, "Only the owners benefit. They already have sold their season tickets." And, he could have added, in many cases at prices higher than last year.

Research Products Is Put on Boycott List

Edward P. Murphy, Secretary-Treasurer of the Union Label and Service Trades Department, AFL-CIO, has called for the support of all trade unionists in a boycott against the Research Products Corporation. The boycott was approved as the result of a request from Floyd E. Smith, President of the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, asking that the company be placed on the "Don't Patronize" list issued by the department.

The company has manufacturing plants located at Madison and Poynette, Wisconsin, both covered as one unit under a single National Labor Relations Board certification. They manufacture a wide variety of products for industry and home—reusable air filters for heating systems, furnace humidifiers and industrial filters. The products can be identified by the large capital letters "RP" inside a circle, in addition to their trade names.

Since 1960, the IAM has attempted to reach a stable plateau of labor-management relations and each effort has been frustrated by the company. The latest round has been negotiations which commenced December 8, 1970, and have continued to the present. No settlement has been reached. Major issues are: union security, checkoff, security improvements, plant visitation rights for union representatives, improved vacation allowances, fully-paid health and welfare premiums, additional sick and accident benefits and wages.

Several unfair labor practice complaints and many formal written grievances brought about by contract violations have been filed with the N.L.R.B.

"THE INJURY TO ONE IS THE CONCERN OF ALL"

"There is magic in a hunting morning
That mortal man cannot declare;
There is excitement then a-borning,
Without equal or compare!"

FROM THE ACTING GENERAL PRESIDENT

I suppose that speculation regarding the aims and views of a new occupant in any position of importance is inevitable. As soon as one person vacates an office and a new person occupies it, those affected in any way by that office begin to speculate on what changes in practices and policies the new incumbent is going to initiate.

So that those interested may cease wondering, I would like to let them know where I am going to stand. As the Acting General President, I have all the duties, rights and responsibilities of any other General President, either elected by an International Convention or appointed to fill an interim time. However, I was appointed and confirmed to this high office by President Georgine because, as he stated on this page last month, he "felt it necessary to pick someone who would have the same trade union philosophy as myself." In this I agree completely; my trade union philosophy and Bob Georgine's are virtual carbon copies. On all issues mutually discovered between us, we see situations largely from the same angle. Accordingly, those who may be expecting significant changes in presidential practices or policies in the LIU are due to be disappointed. There are to be no "turnarounds."

While I share the goals of Bob Georgine in regard to this labor organization, my methods of achieving those goals may possibly, from time to time, vary from what his methods and means might have been had he not become the Secretary-Treasurer of the AFL-CIO Building and Construction Trades Department. By our constant counseling, General President Georgine and I are able to use the best methods of both our thinking and, I feel, secure the strongest possible position for this International Union on all issues facing it. Even though I have held this position of Acting General President for but a short time, this philosophy has already proven correct in every way.

The problems which confront the office of president of a trade union organization are very real, extremely significant and intensely demanding. Anyone who has not sat at the desk of an International President cannot begin to comprehend the daily pressures brought to bear on the incumbent. I hope I can count on the active support of the officers and members of all subordinate organizations in the administration of my duties. In return, I will maintain an "open door policy" to all those who come to my office in good faith with problems they want me to share with them. Together, we can confidently face whatever the future may bring. Seen from here and now, it seems likely to be somewhat stormy, but I am sure if we work together we will gain together.

It is a privilege to be able to serve the membership of this International Union in this office. Let there be an end to speculation; instead let us go forward together.

Once men hunted by necessity to achieve food, clothing and shelter. Now men endure cold, wet and wind to enjoy the thrill of the chase inherited from primitive ancestors. In the U.S. alone there are more than 15 million hunters afield annually seeking, among other game, deer, elk, antelope, bear, rabbit, squirrel, quail, dove, pheasant, grouse, partridge, wild turkey, geese and ducks, as are the hunters on our cover this month. Hunting and fishing are, by far, the most popular non-spectator sports. Notwithstanding the recklessness of a few (which often carries with it its own punishment!) hunting is still the safest mass-participation sport in America, according to "Hunter's Encyclopedia" by Raymond R. Camp. If any members come up with outstanding bags of any game this season, why not send in a picture and particulars to The Lather so we can let the other members know about it?

BY THE GENERAL SECRETARY TREASURER

Why do young people get started taking drugs? There probably isn't any simple answer to the question. In all probability, they get started for a wide variety of reasons. Not the least of the reasons, experts declare, is that they are urged to "give it a try." If the young only had the sophistication of older people they might withstand such pressures but, unfortunately, many of them don't. To avoid "being chicken" they give the proffered dope a try. They get "hooked." They ruin their lives. Some turn to crimes of gain; girls turn to prostitution. Others take up selling dope and push it on others, so the dope problem becomes worse and worse, feeding on its own misery.

If it were not for the crime element involved in the dope traffic, drug addiction would be something the world could live with. Unfortunately, it is a fact of life that the drug addict requires increasingly more and more of his drug to achieve the effect he wants. Soon a "monkey on his back" that cost $5 a day increases until it's a $50-a-day "monkey." Where is a young person going to earn $50 a day total, much less that to spend on drugs, except in a life of crime? I say the world could tolerate dope addiction because the typical dope addict merely wants to lie down and drift away in his own personal dream castle. Addicts would become only non-performers that the world could well do without, rather than the positive danger they are in today's dope-inspired crime-ridden world.

One of the most-promising developments to come along in years, in my estimation, is a new program called "TIP." This is an acronym for "Turn in A Pusher." This program, begun in Louisiana, an entry point for many illicit drugs, is causing terror in the hearts of many drug peddlers. Here is how "TIP" works: The program is sponsored by a civic-minded organization, often the local Chamber of Commerce. The sponsoring organization realizes that it can save money for the community by keeping down or destroying the drug traffic.

Rewards up to $500 / SPONSORED BY LOCAL CHAMBER OF COMMERCE
CALL VICTIM AND CHAMBER OF COMMERCE 606-0304

"TIP" is publicized in the various media of information; radio, television and the press. It is also publicized in the schools and churches. Anyone who is approached with the suggestion that he (or she) buy drugs is urged to "Turn in A Pusher." A cash bounty is paid to whoever helps to stop the drug traffic by reporting the dope peddler's name to the police. It is then up to the police, once they have a lead on another drug peddler, to get evidence on him (or her) sufficient to convict. The person who supplied the tip remains anonymous.

The program is spreading over the United States and is thought by many to offer one of the best defenses against the growing dope problem. Young people can be warned against the misuse of drugs and illicit heroin, marijuana, cocaine and the like, but the fear of going to prison is more real. The pusher who is facing as many as 20 years (even life in some states) for selling dope will go a lot slower if he realizes that his next client may turn him over to the authorities!

Organized labor can do much to help fight the dope problem. When local organizations ask for help in a "TIP" program, get your organization lined up in support.

"Six Flags" Amusement Park Likes Results Of Lath and Plaster by Local 73 Members

The virtually unlimited variety of shapes, contours and designs available through the use of metal lath and plaster so impressed the officials of "Six Flags Over Mid-America Amusement Park" near St. Louis, Missouri, that the firm has declared it intends to make even more use of the material in the future.

Members of Local 73, St. Louis, performed much of the work in connection with building the park at the intersection of Highway 66 and I-44 about 20 miles west of St. Louis, according to Russ Baldwin, Business Representative of Local 73. The park opened for business this season.

Krofft Enterprise, Inc., North Hollywood, Calif., under direction of Sid and Marty Krofft, with designer Jerry Deagen, went all-out in designing boat rides for all ages to enjoy the features of the park. The Six Flags Amusement Parks organization has other, similar, parks in Dallas, Texas, and Atlanta, Georgia. The owners, impressed with the versatility of metal lath and plaster, have said they are planning to use it extensively in the future for additions to and remodeling of their installations.

The work on the St. Louis park was carried on by Vollmer Brothers, St. Louis general contractors. Norman Howell was the project superintendent. Neihaus Co., (Robert Whittle, owner,) was the lathing and plastering contractor on the job.

Scenes here show some of job in progress and the members of Local 73 who performed the work.

Sorrow Expressed on Death of Vice President Haggerty

It was with the deepest regret that we learned the sad news of Neil's death. He was a true friend, a fine gentleman and one of the most dedicated and devoted trade unionists of our time. All of us in the trade union movement share your sorrow and your loss. Our deepest sympathy to you and your family.

Message to Mrs. Peggy Haggerty
George Meany, President, AFL-CIO
Lane Kirkland, Secretary-Treasurer, AFL-CIO

Very few men reach the top rung of the ladder in their chosen field of endeavor. Neil Haggerty was one of those men. His work for organized labor, and especially for the union building trades craftsmen, was unequalled and stands as an inspiration to all of us who follow. Neil's passing is a tremendous loss to the labor movement and a deep personal loss to me. I will miss his advice and counsel.

Robert A. Georgine
General President

One of the real tragedies of life is that we cannot keep men with the stature of Neil Haggerty with us forever. His career as a labor leader and as an outstanding citizen in his adopted state of California gave added luster to organized labor there. His example helped the careers of myself and other labor figures in California. Over the years, both statewide and nationally, his leadership and judgment proved invaluable to organized labor in general and to the Lathers International Union in particular. The loss experienced by his family is, of course, the greatest. But the labor movement lost much with his passing and will be the poorer for it.

Kenneth M. Edwards
Acting General President

The death of Bro. Neil Haggerty will be mourned by many. As an officer of the LIU, it has been an honor and a pleasure to work and associate with Bro. Haggerty. As our First Vice President for many years, his advice, counsel and temperate judgment on the many problems we had to deal with were invaluable. My sincere sympathy goes to his lovely wife, Peg, and his family in their hour of sorrow.

Nixon's Use of Taft-Hartley to Halt Strikes Refutes Earlier Claims

By Duane Emme, PAI

President Nixon's use of Taft-Hartley injunctions to force striking longshoremens back to their jobs represents a sharp switch from a theme previously ballyhooed by the Administration.

This is one of several observations to be made on Nixon's action to halt strikes by 15,000 members of the International Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union at West Coast ports and several hundred members of the International Longshoremen's Association in Chicago.

Back in January 1970, with great fanfare, the Labor Department released a study that concluded that three earlier dock strikes in which Taft-Hartley cooling-off injunctions were obtained had only a "minimal" impact on the economy.

The study was cited by then Secretary of Labor George Shultz to emphasize a Nixon Administration policy of avoiding intervention in labor disputes, particularly those in the maritime industry. Apparently, the Administration has now changed its course.

Nixon's action in the West Coast strike was based on a report of a board of inquiry which he appointed under the Act. From that report he determined the West Coast strike and ILA's walkout against some grain processing and storage firms in Chicago "imperil the national health and safety." This is the guiding phrase in Taft-Hartley.

Although the ILWU's strike has closed ports from Canada to Mexico, the union argued that while the three-month walkout affected the economy, even causing some hardships, it had not endangered the nation. The union pointed out that it had permitted the movement of military, defense and emergency cargoes.

In a second dock strike, involving a walkout of 50,000 members of the ILA at East and Gulf Coast ports, Nixon did not invoke the Taft-Hartley law. The thrust of the board's report, and apparently the President's thinking, was that there has been insufficient negotiation.

Ronald L. Ziegler, Nixon's press secretary, said that negotiations had been stymied by the parties' inability to reach agreement on a work guarantee provision. However, the union contends that the provision is "part of the bargaining and one of the main issues in it."

The employers have demanded that ILA abandon a guarantee of 2,080 hours of work a year for its members—won in negotiations just three years ago as a means of offsetting job slaughter through a form of automation: container shipping.

Many observers noted that employers brought pressure on Nixon not to enjoin ILA's strike. If he had done so, both sides would have to return to the "status quo," meaning that the employers would have had to continue the work guarantee. Their dropping of it precipitated the strike.

"We knew it was inconceivable that President Nixon would ever issue a Taft-Hartley injunction that would help the workers," declared ILA President Thomas W. Gleason.

Meanwhile, negotiations continued in an effort to settle all three disputes. The West Coast strike also involves containerization. ILWU wants loading work for containers within a 50-mile radius of ports. The Chicago strike ostensibly involves wage demands.

The "track record" of Taft-Hartley in settling disputes is notably poor, especially on the docks. Injunctions have been issued in seven previous longshoremen's strikes since 1948 and in only one of these was a settlement reached during the 80-day cooling-off period.

1st Vice President C. J. Haggerty Dies

Brilliant Career Which Spanned Nearly Half-Century Ends After Long Illness

First Vice President Cornelius "Neil" J. Haggerty, 77, died October 10 at his home in Palm Springs, Calif., following a long illness.

Vice President Haggerty joined the Lathers International Union in 1915 when he entered Local Union 72, Boston, as an apprentice. He was a Boston native, having been born there January 10, 1894.

Six years later, in 1921, he transferred his membership to Local 42, Los Angeles. From that time on, his career in the LIU and in organized labor was constantly on the ascendancy. In 1928 he was elected Business Manager of Local 42. The next year he was elected Second Vice President of the LIU. In 1933 he was elected Secretary of the Los Angeles Building and Construction Trades Council. In 1936 he was elected Vice President of the California State Federation of Labor (AFL). The following year he was elected President of the state labor body and in 1943 he was elected Secretary-Treasurer of the organization.

He was elected First Vice President of the LIU in 1958, and that same year became Secretary-Treasurer of the newly-merged organization; the AFL-CIO California Labor Federation.

Eleven years ago, in 1960, he was appointed President of the Building and Construction Trades Department of the AFL-CIO when B&CTD President Richard J. Gray resigned.

He was re-elected at each of the succeeding departmental conventions until his resignation for health reasons last May.

When advocates of the open shop attempted to enact "right-to-work" legislation in California, Mr. Haggerty led a successful fight against it. He organized a coalition of labor, civic and religious organizations in opposition to the measure. It was defeated by a vote of landslide proportions.

Cornelius J. Haggerty

His service to organized labor, his state and his nation over the years has been stupendous. Just to list the 30-odd boards, committees, councils, commissions, conferences and the like on which he served his fellow-man over a period of almost half a century would be monumental effort.

Mr. Haggerty had the unique honor to be the first member of organized labor ever to serve on the Board of Regents of the University of California, having been appointed in 1950. In 1946 he was an AFL delegate to the International Labor Organization in Brussels, Belgium. At the United Nations Commemorative Session in San Francisco in June, 1955, he represented the A.F. of L. and the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions. He was a fraternal delegate to the British Trade Union Congress in Southport, England, in September, 1955.

He served in the U.S. Navy during World War I and was a Past Commander of Union Labor Post 352 of the American Legion in Los Angeles. He was variously a member of the Commonwealth Club of California, Los Angeles Town Hall, Press and Union League Club, San Francisco; Elks Lodge No. 99, Los Angeles and a member of the Industrial Relations Committee of the American Legion.

Bro. Haggerty was a leader in the building trades' united opposition to so-called "Philadelphia Plan" proposed by the federal government whereby a stated percentage of blacks and other minorities would be admitted to apprentice programs in the building trades. Instead, as President of the building trades department of the AFL-CIO, Pres. Haggerty was a leading figure in promoting "Operation Outreach" whereby building trades unions voluntarily recruited minority youths. In 18 months, the building trades recruited 27,000 minority youths, from which 4,000 were chosen for apprenticeship training.

In late years he helped negotiate a landmark labor contract with Walt Disney Productions covering construction of Walt Disney World near Orlando, Florida. It was the largest non-governmental construction project in the nation's history with 20,000 building tradesmen working at the job, sometimes around the clock.

Bro. Haggerty was buried Wednesday, October 13, in Holy Cross Cemetery, Los Angeles, after services in St. Theresa's Catholic Church, Glendale. The services were attended by throngs of dignitaries from labor organizations, municipal, state and national organizations and personal friends. Acting General President Kenneth M. Edwards, Secretary-Treasurer J. Earl Ferguson and General Pres. Robert Georgine (on leave of absence) were among those who attended the services.

Bro. Haggerty is survived by his wife, Margaret; two sons; Donald, of Burbank, and Neil, of Orange, Calif., seven grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

Labor Agrees to Serve on Nixon Pay Board

President Gives Assurances That Cost of Living Council Cannot Veto Board's Acts

Organized labor will serve on Pres. Nixon's tripartite Pay Board after receiving personal assurances from the President that the board will be completely autonomous and that its decision on standards or cases cannot be vetoed by the Cost of Living Council.

The issue, which had been in dispute since the President's Oct. 7 speech outlining the Administration's post-freeze program and machinery, was resolved after top Administration leaders delivered to AFL-CIO Pres. George Meany Oct. 12 a memorandum initiated by Pres. Nixon that said in part:

"The Cost of Living Council will not approve, disapprove or serve as an appeal level for case decisions made by the Pay Board and Price Commission and it will not approve, revise, veto or revoke specific standards or criteria developed by the Pay Board and Price Commission."

After a morning of discussion, the Executive Council unanimously adopted the following statement:

"In light of the personal assurances we have received this morning from the President of the United States, that the Pay Board will be completely autonomous and that the Cost of Living Council will not have veto power over its decision, either as to standards or cases, it is the decision of the AFL-CIO Executive Council, that:

"1. We will try to make the President's mechanism to control the cost of living work.

"2. We will serve on the Pay Board.

"3. We will establish our own watchdog units to monitor prices.

"4. We will continue to oppose the President's tax measures in the Congress.

"5. We will continue our fight for full employment which is the key answer to America's problems."

Meany told reporters in reply to questions that:

• A no strike-pledge was neither asked by the Administration nor given by the unions.

• The federation is not pledging that affiliated unions will accept any decision of the Pay Board, especially on the question of retroactive or deferred pay increases.

• The President's goal of reducing inflation to 2 to 3 percent by the end of 1972 is a "a little ambitious. I think that if he got it down to 4 percent he would think he had some kind of a success. . . . We would like to see it come down because it would solve a lot of problems for us. After all, our members are consumers, too."

A White House briefing for labor leaders had indicated that the tripartite Pay Board, to be made up of five members each representing labor, management and the public, would be autonomous and have veto-proof powers to rule on cases as well as standards and criteria.

Later, a briefing for newsmen indicated that the Pay Board's powers to set standards would be limited and subject to approval or disapproval by the Cost of Living Council. A televised news conference the following day by Treasury Sec. John B. Connally, chairman of the COLC, did not clear up the situation. Connally indicated that the Pay Board's authority would be subject to review and that, in effect, its decisions could be vetoed.

The President's memorandum, delivered to Meany by Labor Sec. James D. Hodgson and George P. Shultz, head of the Office of Management & Budget, summarized the roles of the COLC and Pay Board and the Price Commission and was the basis for the council's action.

Pres. Nixon issued a statement after the council meeting welcoming the participation of organized labor in "the work of the Pay Board and in helping make the nation's efforts at price and wage stabilization succeed. . . . The leaders of organized labor have acted in the best interests of their own members and of the nation." Administration spokesmen had indicated that the program "would not work" without labor's cooperation.

Ohio Shipbuilding Firm Charged With Willful Violation of Safety Standards After 4 Die

The U.S. Department of Labor has filed formal charges against the American Ship Building Co., Lorain, Ohio, for wilfully violating safety laws which resulted in the deaths of four workmen on June 24.

This is the first instance where an employer in the Midwest has been cited for wilful violation, according to the Ohio AFL-CIO "News and Views."

According to the Labor Department charges, workers were permitted to perform their jobs "in an atmosphere known to be flammable without first having tests made by a competent person to insure that the concentration of vapors" was at a safe level. In addition, workers were permitted to do welding, cutting or heating where flammable paints and other liquids constituted a hazard.

Because of these wilful violations, a flash fire erupted and four helpless workers were burned to death. The Labor Department alleges that American Ship Building has a prior history of violations of the government's health and safety regulations with citations in March and May of 1966.

"News and Views" reported that Ohio's Governor John Gillegan has announced that Ohio would request the federal government to come in the state and administer the new Occupational Health and Safety Law because the Ohio Industrial Commission "has no intention of mounting an adequate job safety program." M. H. Krise, chairman of the Commission, retorted that Ohio has a good job safety record because the state has, in the past, relied on a "voluntary" program by employers.

"In the past six years, 3,002 workers were killed on the job in Ohio and hundreds more received injuries under the "voluntary" program.

Organized Labor Will Police Frozen Prices

U.S. Establishes No Enforcement Machinery, So City Central Bodies Will Be "Watchdogs"

The AFL-CIO will help "insure that there is no price-gouging in America," by setting up watchdog units to monitor prices across the nation, President George Meany has declared.

In letters to the 739 city central bodies and 51 state bodies (including Puerto Rico), Meany noted that labor had agreed to "help try to make the President's mechanism to control the cost of living work" and would serve on the Pay Board.

"But we are going to do more," he said. "One major contribution we can make is to insure that there is no price-gouging in America."

He noted the Administration "has no plans for effective machinery to control prices." Meany continued:

"The President is going to depend on the voluntary cooperation of the business community, he says. We feel that this is not good enough. We know that unless they are watched and watched carefully, some will either raise prices or reduce quality or quantity or all three."

In the "absence of adequate compliance machinery," he said, the AFL-CIO Executive Council had authorized the establishment of "our own watchdog units to monitor prices."

He called on all state and local central bodies to take "immediate action to develop and activate appropriate machinery to:

"1. Provide all available information on price and rent controls to members, affiliates and all other unions.

"2. To follow through on all complaints, grievances and violations with appropriate authorities.

"3. To report on developments, including all violations, to the national office.

"I specifically urge that immediate steps be taken by these watchdog units to enlist the active assistance of the wives of union members in these monitoring operations and cooperate in this effort with labor unions not affiliated with the AFL-CIO, with consumer organizations, senior citizen groups, civil rights organizations like the A. Philip Randolph Institute, church and civic organizations and other like-minded groups in your community.

"We need immediate action and widespread support to protect the nation from the price-gougers."

Meany said he had assigned responsibility for this activity to the AFL-CIO Dept. of Community Services and that Director Leo Perlis "would assist the new units in the performance of these important functions."

In a separate letter to all 118 affiliated unions, Meany urged their help and cooperation. He specifically asked them to inform their locals and "solicit their full participation" in the watchdog units.

General President Edwards has sent a letter to all state and district councils and local unions, suggesting that they cooperate fully with efforts to establish such "watchdog units" and, wherever necessary and desirable, to furnish the needed leadership.

Meanwhile, the AFL-CIO has urged a House Commerce subcommittee to approve a two-part bill aimed at protecting buyers against deceptive practices in the marketplace.

The first section deals with warranties and "fine print exclusions." The AFL-CIO says many warranties are sales gimmicks instead of consumer protections. The second part would authorize the Federal Trade Commission to prosecute firms for unfair and deceptive practices on a much broader basis than at present. A similar bill has already been approved by the Senate Commerce Committee.

An administration measure, extremely weak and pro-business, would merely clarify the question of warranty coverage. The AFL-CIO wants the stronger measure in order to provide proper consumer protection.

18-, 19- and 20-Year Olds Must Register to Vote

Are there any 18-, 19- or 20-year-olds in your household? Now is the time to get them REGISTERED!

Congress gave the vote to 18-to-21-year-olds, but it did not change registration laws. Young voters . . . first-time voters . . . still have to register in order to vote. If they show up at the polling place on election day and their names are not on the registration rolls, they will not be allowed to vote.

The AFL-CIO Committee on Political Education (COPE) has been sponsoring a Youth Census Week. All over the nation, local unions and city central bodies are seeking to have this vast reservoir of votes entered on the rolls in order to help turn the tide in favor of liberalism and against the reactionary elements which have been able to exert much control in recent years.

See that your youngsters are registered! If your children were born between November, 1950, and November, 1954, they can register to vote in the November, 1972, election.

Involving these young voters, children in Lather families, in our union's political programs will be good for them, good for us . . . and good for the country.

Make certain you do not wait to long. Inquire today. A telephone call to your town, city or county election board (or clerk's office) will usually give you the registration information you need. If you don't obtain satisfaction there, get in touch with your city central labor body. Tell them that you're in a Lather family; you'll get the help you need. But don't wait . . . do it today!

Building Trades Lauded For Disney World Work

The 17 international and national unions affiliated with the Building and Construction Trades Department, AFL-CIO, have been publicly congratulated for their "significant contribution" to the construction of the gigantic new Walt Disney World "Vacation Kingdom" near Orlando, Florida.

Under construction since 1968, the largest private construction project in the United States opened on schedule in October.

Donn B. Tatum, president of Walt Disney Productions, acknowledging the major role which organized labor has played at Walt Disney World, said in a news release:

"It is appropriate for the Disney organization publicly to acknowledge organized labor's significant contribution to the construction of our new 'Vacation Kingdom.'

"Seventeen international and national unions and their local Florida affiliates have provided skilled workmen who are their members to facilitate the construction . . .

"The unions, members of the Building and Construction Trades Department, AFL-CIO, and the International Brotherhood of Teamsters negotiated an agreement with Disney in 1968 which is truly unique in the history of the construction industry.

"Organized labor recognized the unique technical and creative problems in the vast recreational project and, together with representatives of Disney management, they met this challenge in an historical collective bargaining agreement.

"The contract," Tatum's statement continued, "was designed to provide labor peace and to permit the company to utilize the most advanced techniques of construction and freely enlist the services of technicians and skilled artists from all parts of the country.

"At the height of construction, approximately 7,000 building trades people were employed on the job site. It is a remarkable achievement for the building trades unions that, with so many different skills represented on the job site, the project has been virtually strike free . . . The experience gained at Walt Disney World through the application of many of these new construction techniques is sure to benefit all mankind in the years to come."

Tatum concluded by praising B&CTD President Frank Bonadio for his part in the collective bargaining negotiations which set up the project agreement.

Jobless Rate Still At Nine-Year High

Almost lost in the flurry of attention focused on President Nixon's Phase II plan for controlling the economy was a government report showing that unemployment remains at its highest level in nine years.

Nixon, in his television address, did not refer once to the nation's high unemployment. Treasury Secretary John Connally, at a later news conference, boasted that the rate would soon go down. But others, including labor leaders, were highly skeptical.

For September, the first full month under Nixon's Phase I "new economic policy," the Labor Department reported that the unemployment rate was 6.0 percent, virtually unchanged from 6.1 percent in Aug.

The rate was six-tenths of one percent higher than it was a year ago. This year marks the first time since 1961 that the rate has been running at a 6 percent level.

Total employment rose 325,000 between August and September, with most of the gain concentrated among part time workers. Unemployment was 5.1 million seasonably unadjusted, unchanged from August. The labor force increased by about 300,000 to 84.6 million.

"The latest figures show that there is absolutely no improvement in the nation's job picture—one of the most severe problems confronting the nation," an AFL-CIO spokesman said.

Secretary of Labor James D. Hodgson conceded the "persistence" of joblessness but said that it ought to be incentive for moving the President's tax measures through Congress.

The Administration's key feature in the proposal is an investment tax credit to business. AFL-CIO President George Meany has described it as "a $70 billion tax bonanza for business over the next decade." The measure cleared the House but is now before the Senate Finance Committee.

Sen. Russell B. Long, the Committee's chairman, has voiced doubts about the House bill's job-creating potential and its fairness. "In its present form," he said, "the bill appears to be too much of a trickle-down operation, with too little of it ever getting down."

Meanwhile, Stanley H. Ruttenberg, a former director of research for the AFL-CIO and an Assistant Secretary of Labor in the Johnson Administration, told the Joint Economic Committee of Congress that ending unemployment ought to be "the number one economic priority" of government.

Phase II may control the rate of inflation but it will not bring down unemployment and neither will the Administration's legislative program, Ruttenberg warned.

The type of scene which delights visitors to the union-built Disney World. A strolling band dressed in the button-decorated garb of British costermongers plays as elves (at right) dance and visitors snap pictures and take movies.

'No-Fault' Insurance Concept is Gaining

Senator Urges Lathers Give Aid to Legislation

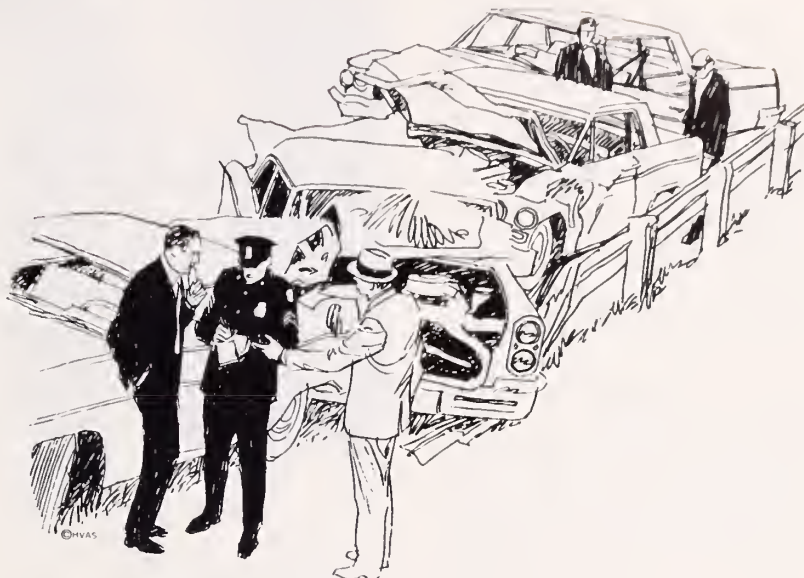

"No-fault auto insurance is one of the key consumer issues pending before Congress," Senator Philip A. Hart of Michigan recently declared in a communication addressed to the LIU International Office. He urged that the LIU lend all possible support to the proposal and that individual members write or otherwise contact their Congressman and Senators in behalf of the legislation.

No-fault insurance, as proposed in S. 945 now pending in the Senate, would provide benefits to the policyholder, members of his family, and people injured or property damaged in an auto accident in which his auto was involved who are not occupants of another vehicle. Property damages would be payable on all property except another vehicle with which his was in collision. The owner of the other vehicle would have to look to his own insurance policy for recompense.

The bill would require every operator of autos (trucks, etc.) to acquire property damage and public liability insurance and would require all insurance companies to write such insurance. No policy could be cancelled except by reason of non-payment of the premium or loss of license. All medical and rehabilitation costs of people injured would be paid and lost wages, after income taxes, up to $1,000 a month, would be reimbursed. (Those earning more than that amount could cover themselves with a supplemental policy should they so desire.) Death benefits are also prescribed by the pending bill.

No-fault personal injury insurance was enacted in Massachusetts last January. The state has the nation's worst accident record with a claims record $2\frac{1}{2}$ times the national average. It has been a resounding success there. Claims are down sharply in the state, and C. E. Farnam, Massachusetts Insurance Commissioner, says "No-fault will speed the country like a prairie fire now."

Florida has already passed a no-fault law, to take effect in 1972. Illinois, Oregon, Delaware and South Dakota have all passed laws requiring insurers to offer "first party" coverage, which motorists would buy to cover their own costs emanating from any collision.

The only real opposition to no-fault insurance is coming from lawyers. Since people do not have to go to court to have responsibility for accidents determined in order to have it decided "who's going to pay," lawyers' incomes are hurting. The first challenge to the Massachusetts law was brought in a test case promoted by a trial lawyers' association, contending the measure was unconstitutional. Let it be said to the credit of the lawyer-justices of the Massachusetts Supreme Court that they ruled against the lawyers. The state is now considering widening the law to cover property damages.

It will still be possible to require the services of attorneys; "no-fault" does not cover every conceivable contingency. The great volume of court cases arising out of automobile accidents, however, has been drastically reduced when the system went into effect.

Acting President Kenneth Edwards and General Secretary-Treasurer J. Earl Ferguson have urged all members to write their Congressman and their two Senators, urging support for a national no-fault insurance program. At the present time the bill is stalled in the Senate Committee on Commerce, Warren G. Magnuson, Wash., Chairman. The last hearings on the bill were held last June. Members of the committee, who could release it and help its chances of passage by reporting it out favorably, include: John O. Pastore, (R.I.); Vance Hartke, (Ind.); Howard W. Cannon, (Nev.); Russell B. Long, (La.); Frank E. Moss, (Utah); Ernest F. Hollings, (S.C.); Daniel K. Inouye, (Hawaii); Wm. B. Spong, Jr. (Va.); Norris Cotton, (N.H.); James B. Pearson, (Kans.); Robert P. Griffin, (Mich.); Howard Baker, Jr. (Tenn.); Marlow W. Cook, (Ky.); Mark O. Hatfield, (Oreg.); Ted Stevens, (Alaska) and, of course, Sen. Hart, who is pushing hard for adoption.

It is important for the public to let the committee members know that it wants "no-fault" for without such evidence, the committee majority probably would be inclined to heed the lawyers' lobby which is fighting the bill. Sixteen of the 17 committee members are either lawyers or have received law degrees.

In addition to writing their respective congressional delegation, members are urged to write the members of the committee who may be from their state. If there is no member of the Commerce Committee from your state, address your letter to the chairman, Senator Magnuson, Senate Finance Committee, Wash., D.C. 20510.

LIU Officers Attend Wall & Ceiling Meet

Acting General President Kenneth Edwards, Secretary-Treasurer J. Earl Ferguson and Robert Georgine, secretary-treasurer of the Building and Construction Trades Department, AFL-CIO, attended sessions of the International Association of Wall and Ceiling Contractors in Denver, Colorado, in October.

Preceding the convention were symposiums on industry interests such as curtain walls and shaft wall enclosures. There were six labor groupings because of the diversification the industry has sustained.

Speakers at the convention included Sen. Peter Dominick of Colorado, Rep. John Anderson of Illinois, Rep. Donald Brotzman of Colorado, Vald Heiberg, special assistant to the director of the Office of Emergency Preparedness, and John J. Hauck, general secretary-treasurer of the Operative Plasterers and Cement Masons International Assoc.

Jack D. Dillard, a Dallas contractor, who had served the convention as Labor Liaison Committee Chairman, was elected new president of iaWCC.

By resolution, the iaWCC voted in favor of:

- Developing an official "logo" for the iaWCC.
- Support for an orderly change-over to the metric system of weights and measures in the U.S.
- Investment tax credits.
- The wage-price freeze.
- Area-wide or regional collective bargaining, national agreements, preventing strikers in one area from working in another, outlawing jurisdictional strikes, definition and outlawing of "featherbedding," free use of prefabricated products, outlawing union-established production quotas, banning union hiring halls, outlawing informational picketing.

The convention voted resolutions against:

- Government entrance into basic research and development of building codes.
- The use of either voluntary or compulsory collection of money from union members for political purposes.

in iaWCC identification was referred to a study committee. The Code of Ethics adopted at the 1970 convention was rescinded and the matter referred to a committee for study.

Other officers elected at the Denver meeting include Edward J. Schalk, Syracuse, N.Y., first vice president; Frank J. Krafft, Alexandria, Virginia, second vice president; E. M. "Bus" Ratliff, Los Angeles, secretary; Al Ricca, St. Clair Shores, Mich., treasurer. Named as new members of the Board of Directors were Alf Savage, Winnipeg; Charles Atkinson, Atlanta, Ga.; Harry Daugherty, Gainesville, Florida; Gene Doggett, Houston, Tex. Vincent Colletti and Lawrence Reger.

J. Munroe McNulty, the retiring iaWCC president, will hold office until Jan. 1, 1972.

Union Positions Upheld in Two Landmark Supreme Court Cases

In two highly important cases, the positions of the unions involved have been sustained by the U.S. Supreme Court.

One case involved the power of Department of Labor to go on "fishing" expeditions into the legitimacy of union elections and the second involved the preemption of the Federal Government—through the National Relations Board—of labor disputes over state courts.

Taken together, the decisions cut into the independent power of the U.S. Labor Department to police union elections and weakened the position of conservatives who would like to throw labor-management disputes into the courts rather than into the specialized NLRB.

without departing needlessly from the long-standing Congressional policy against unnecessary governmental interference with internal union affairs."

It cited a report made to the U.S. Senate in which the statement was made that "a strong, independent labor movement is a vital part of American institutions," that the overwhelming majority "are honestly and democratically run" and that Congress "should be careful neither to undermine self-government within the labor movement nor to weaken unions in their role as the bargaining representative of employees."

In the case before it, the Court majority held that the union member had not raised the central issue—a he had been fired from his job because he had forfeited his good standing in the union for failure to pay his dues. He brought suit in the state courts of Idaho and obtained a judgment of some $32,000 against the Northwest Division 1055 of the Transit Union and the Union itself.

At issue was whether the case fell under the jurisdiction of the State court or the National Labor Relations Board. The five-man Court majority held that under the long-established pre-emption principle the proper forum was the NLRB rather than a state court.

It pointed out that behind the pre-emption doctrine was "the Congressional purpose for effectuating a comprehensive national labor policy to be administered by an expert central agency rather than by a Federalized judicial system."

Voting in the majority were Justices Harlan, Black, Brennan, Stewart and Marshall. The four dissenters were Chief Justice Burger and Justices Douglas, White and Blackmun.

Douglas held that the complainant should have been permitted to file his suit in his home state rather than being required to go to Washington and "suffer the delay" that usually accompanies an appeal to the NLRB. The other dissenters held that the state courts "should not be foreclosed" from considering such cases. (PAI)

The first case involved Local 6799 of the United Steelworkers and Secretary of Labor James D. Hodgson. It concerned the complaint of a member of the Local against the fairness of the Union's election system. The issue turned on whether the Secretary of Labor could go beyond the specific complaint made to it and dig up other alleged violations of election procedures on its own.

The Court, by a 7 to 2 vote, decided that the Secretary of Labor does not have this power to investigate union procedures that are not specifically complained of. The majority based this finding on the history of the National Labor Relations Act and said:

"Examination of the relevant legislative materials reveals a clear Congressional concern for the need to remedy abuses in union elections union attendance requirement—in his complaint and that the Secretary of Labor had no authority to raise it on his own.

The majority of seven consisted of Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justices Thurgood Marshall, Hugo J. Black, William O. Douglas, John M. Harlan, Potter Stewart and Harry A. Blackmun. Justices William J. Brennan and Byron R. White dissented.

The dissenters contended that Congress, contrary to the majority opinion, had authorized the Secretary of Labor to bring action against a union "not only on violations processed by the union member but also on other violations uncovered in his investigation."

The second decision in the favor of a union was on a narrower vote—5 to 4. It involved a member of the Transit Union who complained that

Tampering With BLS Statistics Condemned

The AFL-CIO's Industrial Union Department has put itself strongly on record as condemning and opposing "the efforts to destroy the credibility of the Bureau of Labor Statistics" and demanding the "retention of BLS as an honest and fair public service."

BLS, which collects and analyzes wage, price and employment figures, was reported by Press Associates, Inc. as planning to replace experienced technicians with political appointees to analyze the BLS data.

The IUD convention said that "this attempt on the part of the Nixon Administration to hoodwink and propagandize the American public can only result in erasing the future credibility of both BLS and the Administration."

Meany Urges HEW to Rescind Medicare Rise

Medicare beneficiaries will be paying 13 percent more in deductibles and coinsurance for hospital care beginning next Jan. 1.

AFL-CIO Pres. George Meany called the increase "tragic" and immediately urged Sec. Elliot L. Richardson of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare to rescind it.

The increase means the elderly will be paying the first $68 of hospital bills. Meany pointed out that most of the elderly cannot afford the increase. "For many the choice will be between food or health care," he told Richardson in a letter.

"The elderly—the nation's most vulnerable victims of inflation—deserve far more consideration than this. They deserve reasonable protection against ever-mounting medical costs. They deserve government action that will protect them, not the purveyors of medical care whose prices are not adequately frozen."

Meany found "little satisfaction" in Richardson's statement that hospital and medical costs will be subject to controls in Phase 2. He noted these controls would occur after Medicare beneficiaries "had been penalized 13 percent."

Stating there is "no justification" for the increase, Meany "strongly" urged Richardson to rescind it and "to hold the line on Medicare costs the beneficiaries are required to pay."

Senior Citizens Assail 'Run-Around' by Nixon

The nation's elderly are getting the run-around from the Nixon Administration, a spokesman for the 3-million-member National Council of Senior Citizens charged at a Congressional hearing.

Pres. Nixon proclaims his concern for their welfare, meets with them at the White House but does little to alleviate their poverty and suffering, William R. Hutton, executive director of the NCSC, told lawmakers at a hearing on the need to provide comprehensive services for older Americans.

Hutton called on the Nixon Administration "to match its rhetoric directed to the elderly with action."

Five million men and women age 65 or over are impoverished and millions of others in this age bracket are very close to the poverty line "and getting closer day by day," Hutton told members of a House Education subcommittee headed by Rep. John Brademas (D-Ind.).

Hutton said NCSC Pres. Nelson H. Cruikshank wrote Nixon five days after the economic freeze asking him to support "a desperately needed social security increase and a federal takeover of aid to more than 3.5 million indigent aged, blind and disabled. A non-committal acknowledgment came from the White House and "we have yet to receive a substantive answer from the President," Hutton reported.

Unionized Agents Ask Union-Sold Insurance

The Seventh Biennial Convention of the Insurance Workers International Union passed a resolution calling on all organizations of organized members and their memberships to purchase insurance of all kinds only through bona fide union agents.

The IWIU has organized the agents in more than 30 companies.

The Incredible Incident of The First Presidential Attack

Almost everyone still remembers the assassination of President John F. Kennedy eight years ago this November. But few today ever heard of Richard Lawrence, though they will never forget the name of Lee Harvey Oswald.

JACKSON

Lawrence has an obscure niche in American history as the first man ever to attempt an armed attack on a president. Kennedy's assassination was the eighth attempt on the life of a president and the fourth to succeed.

The first attempt was made by Lawrence, a mentally deranged house painter, on January 30, 1835. And the way in which his attempt failed is unbelievable, though true.

President Andrew Jackson was attending the funeral of a congressman in the rotunda of the Capitol. Lawrence, 35, who fancied himself as Richard III, King of England and the United States, had tried three times to see the president. Now he was determined to kill the president, whom he considered conspiring with the Duke of Wellington to deprive him of his rights as King.

As Pres. Jackson emerged from the funeral service, Lawrence fired at him from 13 feet away with one of two cap-and-ball pistols he was carrying. There was a report, but the powder did not ignite. Swinging his cane, "Old Hickory," accustomed as he was to violence and battles, rushed his assailant. Lawrence pulled a second pistol and fired again. Witnesses said Jackson's chest was practically at the barrel of the pistol.

Miraculously, despite the fact that both pistols were properly loaded with dry powder, the second pistol, too, failed to fire!

Lawrence was captured and eventually became Patient No. 7 in what is now St. Elizabeth's Hospital for the insane in Washington, D.C. His prosecutor was Francis Scott Key, who wrote "The Star Spangled Banner."

An arms expert declared that the chances of two consecutive misfires of Lawrence's properly loaded pistols were about one in 125,000!

Words and Actions

The other day Secretary of Labor James D. Hodgson spoke to a conference of manpower specialists.

What he said sounded beautiful.

He noted that in the 1940's the eminent Harvard economist Sumner Slichter listed four ideas that would mark the future course of American history. These four were:

1. The idea that government must become an instrument of economic policy and intervene in economic matters.

2. There is no single panacea that will solve all our problems.

3. There must be an opportunity for all to find employment.

4. Everyone should have a chance to enjoy the good life here and now.

When Slichter wrote: "all four could have been sharply questioned," Hodgson said. "Today they all have practically consensus acceptance."

Is this true as far as the Nixon Administration is concerned?

Perhaps the first two are accepted by the Administration. Certainly the wage and price freeze, in fact the entire economic program announced August 15, indicates that the Administration is using economic policy with a heavy hand.

The third and fourth points are open to question. Members of the Nixon Administration have openly acknowledged that unemployment has been used as an instrument to combat inflation. This hardly gives everyone the chance for a better life.

This is not an isolated example of the Administration saying one thing and doing something entirely different. Here are a few more choice instances:

Job Safety—The Administration proclaims that it has championed on-the-job health and safety programs. Yet, it fought the strong Williams-Daniels bill in Congress, supporting a far weaker Steiger proposal.

And now the Administration, in seeking to turn the programs over to the states, admits that many of the more critical aspects of the federal program—such as the right of union representatives to inspect the work sites—will not be required of states.

Job Development — President Nixon, in proposing a 10 percent tax credit for business investment for new plants and equipment, has labeled it a "Job Development Credit." To the average citizen it may sound convincing but to many economists it is questionable labeling.

For one, most major industries plan their new plant and equipment budget on a three-to-five-year basis. Only a limited number could take advantage of the proposed tax bonanza.

Judging from past experience, though, many plants that are modernized provide less jobs than before because they are automated.

Statistical Accuracy — When Commissioner of Labor Statistics Geoffrey Moore assumed his office he issued a statement pledging to maintain the statistical integrity of BLS which provides indexes on cost-of-living, employment and unemployment and other vital economic indicators.

Now it has been disclosed that he is in the process of removing the key officials in charge of data analysis and replacing them with men who are expected to analyze the statistics in a light more favorable to the Administration.

On top of that, Moore and Hodgson have cancelled briefing of newsmen by the technicians and have offered their own political observations about the reports.

Short Work-Week—There is an obvious trend in the country favoring a shorter work-week, perhaps even a four-day week.

The Department of Labor now seems to be using this sentiment to support a management effort for a four-day week but based it on a 10-hour day. The gimmick is that the eight-hour day, for which workers fought bitterly, would go down the drain. Workers would work 10 hours a day without overtime after 8 hours.

Sanctity of Profits—The Administration is seeking to convince the public that whereas wages and salaries contribute to inflation, profits—particularly high profits—are the medicine the economy needs.

This is based upon the old "trickle down" theory that money in management and business will trickle down to the workers and even the poor. For most economists this idea has been pretty well discarded, recognizing the need of increased purchasing power.

And so goes part of the list of words-versus-action in this Administration.

Absence of Labour on Board Hit by MacDonald

Donald MacDonald, president of the Canadian Labour Congress, has condemned the action of the government in allowing no labor representation on the Employment Support Board to counteract the effects of the 10 percent surcharge levied by the U.S. against imports.

"In this connection we are appalled by the fact that no provision has been made to give Canadian workers, who should be the main concern of any legislation affecting employment, some representation on the Employment Support Board. It is simply incredible that while this Board is to have business representatives, there is to be no labour representative. In other words, Canadian workers, whose jobs are at stake, will have no voice. We urge the federal government to remedy this important matter before the Employment Support Act is enacted into law.

"We believe that the federal government should move as rapidly as possible to ensure that no Canadian worker's job will be jeopardized as a result of the surcharge," MacDonald declared.

THANKS

The Plymouth Settlers First Winter Started Indian Helped the Pilgrims

THANKSGIVING is a continuing reminder of the Pilgrims who landed on the storm-lashed shore of what was to become the state of Massachusetts on December 22, 1620. Subsequently, by edict of Governor James Bradford, they observed a three-day "First Thanksgiving."

But the Pilgrim Fathers were not alone when they stepped ashore on Plymouth Rock. They were met by a tourist just back from England. His name was Squanto, an Indian who welcomed the astonished travelers in English.

White men were nothing new to the Indians in the area. For nearly a century the New England coast had been cruised by traders, fishermen, privateers and explorers searching vainly for The Northwest Passage to the Orient, where Columbus had sought to sail back in the 1490s. Also among those who sailed along the coastline were slave traders. In 1614 Squanto had the misfortune, along with 19 other braves from his tribe, to be captured by Spanish slavers. They were all taken to Spain where they were sold for 20 pounds sterling apiece.

Much is uncertain about Squanto's travels in Europe, but it is known that he was rescued from slavery by kindly Spanish friars, who restored his faith in white men. Some way Squanto found his way to England, where he was befriended and taken in by the family of John Slany, an officer in one of the many commercial companies being chartered to promote exploration. Slany's company was intending to explore Newfoundland. Squanto learned to speak English and also acquired a little schooling, according to the National Geographic Society.

Squanto had also learned many of the skills of a sailor and, in 1619, he joined the crew of a ship sailing to The New World (his Old World!) and worked his way along the coast back to what was eventually to be known as Plymouth, where he rejoined his tribe. It seems almost impossible that Squanto could have located his tribe, but he doubtless told his rejoined family and tribe members some equally unbelievable tales of his travels through Europe!

When the Pilgrims arrived, it was natural for Squanto to become their interpreter. He also taught them many ways of the Indians. For example, they had never seen corn. Squanto taught them how to plant, nurture and harvest what was to become a staple in their diet. They needed all the help they could get; during the first winter 53 of them, about half the company, died in what was probably an influenza epidemic.

The Pilgrims had intended to settle in a more southerly clime, in lands deeded to the Virginia Company. But they had been buffeted by Atlantic storms for 66 days and were running short of supplies. Especially short, according to diaries kept by the travelers, was their supply of beer. One journal entry relates that they might have sailed on farther south but, "We could not take them for further search or consideration, our victuals being much spent—especially our beer." After landing, one of the first permanent structures they built was a brewery!

At right: Artist's conception of the landing of the Puritans. They were astounded to find an English-speaking Indian there to welcome them.

GIVING

The Pilgrims were Puritan Separatists from the Church of England. Some had fled England as early as 1609 to avoid persecutions and settled in Leiden, Holland. In 1620, the Holland-based Separatists decided to emigrate to The New World and bought the Dutch ship "Speedwell." They arranged to join with a larger group bound from England aboard the "Mayflower." The "Speedwell" began to leak after eight days' sailing and the party turned back. After another false start and many delays, the "Speedwell" was left behind and the "Mayflower" sailed from Plymouth, England. The ship left Barbican Quay on September 16, 1620. The event is inscribed on a stone slab and an arch on the quay. There were 101 passengers and 48 crewmembers aboard, plus assorted livestock.

There had been five trading companies chartered in England by 1588 to encourage New World exploration and colonization. These continued to be formed over the years and, in 1606, the Plymouth Company and the Virginia Company were chartered by James I. When the Pilgrims left Plymouth, England, they were headed for the Virginia Company's grant, where they had permission to settle. But, strange as it seems, they landed instead in an area belonging to the Plymouth Company!

The women aboard the "Mayflower" established a tradition still followed by many. Despite the cold weather, they built fires on the beach the very day they set foot ashore (a Monday) and started washing the accumulation of soiled clothing. Thus they began "Washday Monday."

Some people like to claim that their forefathers were aboard the "Mayflower." At the time they were not known as Pilgrims but were known by their contemporaries as "Old Comers." If anyone tells you "My family came across on the 'Mayflower'," here's a way to check on it, at least partially. The surnames of the male passengers on the ship were: Carver, Bradshaw, Winslow, Brewster, Allerton, Standish, Alden, Fuller, Martin, Mullins, White, Warren, Howland, Hopkins, Tilly, Cooke, Rogers, Tinker, Ridgdale, Fuller, Turner, Eaton, Chilton, Craxton, Billington, Fletcher, Goodman, Priest, Williams, Winslow, Margesson, Brown, Bitteridge, Soule, Clark, Gardiner, English, Doten and Leister.

At left: The Indians and the earliest settlers learned from each other. Indian women and children on platforms kept birds away from the corn crop.

Most holiday cards talk about peace, good will, and joy. UNICEF cards do something about it.

Our brochure shows
these cards in beautiful color.

You're going to buy holiday greeting cards anyway. So why not buy them from UNICEF?

UNICEF cards provide badly needed food, medicines, and school supplies for the children of more than 100 nations. They also happen to be among the most beautiful cards you'll see anywhere. Many of them were designed by the world's most famous artists as a gift to UNICEF. Which is one reason UNICEF cards cost no more than ordinary greeting cards.

This year, when you send greetings to a friend, send a little hope to a child.

Alternate rows of the two versions of Christmas stamps issued by the new U.S. Postal Service make a pattern for this month's issue. The religious motif stamp is a tiny reproduction of a famous painting by Giorgione, an Italian artist who lived 1478-1510. His real name was Giorgio Barbarelli. Born in Castelfranco, he exerted a considerable influence among Italian painters of his time, including the better-known Titian (or Tiziano Vecelli, to be exact.) Giorgione studied under Giovanni Bellini and soon developed a free and large manner characterized by great beauty and richness of coloring. In his time, talented artists were relieved of the necessity of making a living by the aristocracy of the church and of the state. Consequently the period produced an unusually large number of fine artists.

The second stamp for Christmas, 1971, is a rendition of one verse of "The Twelve Days of Christmas." The painting is by Jamie Wyeth, a son of famed artist Andrew Wyeth. The scene, which depicts "A Partridge in A Pear Tree," was designed especially for use as one of this year's Christmas stamps. Both stamps feature beautiful color renditions.

Building Trades Unions Face Serious Problems

New President Bonadio Outlines Crises; Georgine Unanimously Elected to Office

"The building and construction trades today are facing as serious problems and crises as have ever arisen in the course of their history," President Frank Bonadio told the 56th convention of the AFL-CIO Building and Construction Trades Department, held Nov. 8-10 in Bal Harbour, Florida.

In his keynote address, he listed four particularly "important problems" faced by construction unions. These are:

1. the minorities question
2. the Davis-Bacon Act
3. wage controls
4. growth of non-union construction

He noted that the Department's convention two years ago "laid down a program of constructive, affirmative action which would bring minorities into the trade with due regard to the rights of the existing members of the organized work force."

On the second day of the convention, General President Robert A. Georgine was elected Secretary-Treasurer of the Building and Construction Trades Department. Frank Bonadio, who formerly held that office while the late C. J. Haggerty was president, was elected to the presidency.

The vice presidents elected were M. A. Hutcheson, Peter Fosco, John H. Lyons, Hunter P. Wharton, S. Frank Raftery, Charles H. Pillard, Joseph T. Power, Harold J. Buoy and Martin J. Ward. All the elections were unanimous by acclamation.

Bonadio said that Department of Labor figures show that "we have made substantial progress during the last two years." He reported that twelve percent of the new construction apprentices are from minority groups.

"We must continue our efforts to bring minorities into the building and construction trades in a proper manner and to fight attacks on our procedures such as the apprenticeship system and the hiring hall," he said.

The Davis-Bacon Act was passed four years ago to set living standards in the building and construction industry by using prevailing wages in the region as a floor for work on government contracts.

Last February, President Nixon suspended the Act and it was only lifted by him when the Construction Industry Stabilization Committee was established to control wages in the industry.

Bonadio said that the building unions, while unhappy with the Committee and controls on wages, were pleased that their efforts for restoration of the Davis-Bacon Act were successful. He warned, however, that "we must recognize that the problem is not disposed of. The forces which press for suspension of the Davis-Bacon Act will now press for administration of its provisions in such a manner as to weaken its protection of fair wages."

On wage controls, Bonadio declared that "there is not much that can be said about the stabilization program and the current uncertainty, but we shall insist on intelligent and reasonable application of the general criteria to the special and unique facts of the construction industry."

"We have every reason to believe that non-union construction work has been growing considerably," Bonadio told the delegates. He called for stepped-up organizing, "despite all the difficulties which have been caused by unfair federal legislation."

At the same time, he said that "we must tighten our own operations and increase productivity so that the union contractor will have a better chance to compete in the marketplace with the non-union contractor."

On the question of jurisdictional disputes, Bonadio declared that the NCA-BCTD Jurisdictional Agreement "has proven to be quite successful in terms of eliminating work stoppages on projects subject to the agreement."

Building Trades To Assume New Authority

Top Officers to Get Added Control Over Local and State Council Affairs

BY HARRY CONN
Press Associates, Inc.

Delegates to the 56th convention of the AFL-CIO Building and Construction Trades Department, meeting in Bal Harbour, Florida, unanimously approved constitutional revisions which are expected to bring sweeping changes in construction unionism.

The Building Trades Department, which has always been decentralized, will now concentrate full authority in the top offices of the organization. For the first time, the president of the Department has been given power to "merge or to amalgamate local councils or to modify or alter their jurisdiction when it deems such action is in the best interest of the Department."

Heretofore, the powers of the Department were restricted to suspending or revoking charters of local councils that got out of line. The councils were free to act as long as they held a charter.

The new, streamlined structure points to vast changes in the Department and its operations throughout the U.S. and Canada. It is the product of one year's intensive planning by officers of the Department and presidents of the 17 affiliated international unions who make up the Executive Council.

The Executive Council will now have the power "to issue rules governing the conduct, activities, affairs, finances and properties" of local and state councils. All local unions of internationals affiliated with the Department are, in effect, almost automatically members of a local or state council.

Currently there are 491 chartered local councils, 33 state councils, and seven councils in Canada. Department officials estimate that as many as 200 of these councils could be merged or eliminated.

A report was made to the convention by Secretary-Treasurer Robert Georgine on affiliations with local councils. Without giving any precise statistics, he indicated that a survey taken by the Department had created deep concern.

Under the new set-up, international union affiliates are coordinating their authority in such sensitive areas as

Officers of Building & Construction Trades Dept. are sworn in by Plumbers' President-Emeritus Peter Schoemann (behind podium.) From left: Vice Presidents Martin J. Ward, Joseph T. Power, Peter Fosco, Hunter Wharton, Thomas Murphy and John Lyons; President Frank Bonadio; V.P. M. A. Hutcheson, Secy.-Treas. Georgine; V.P.s S. F. Raftery and C. H. Pillard. V.P. H. J. jurisdiction, to create the strong centralized Department.

"This change was long past due," one international union president declared. "We are faced with critical problems on so many fronts. We can no longer afford to let weak and ineffective councils stray along any path which expediency dictates. We do need a strong Department so that the building trades can speak with an effective and unified voice."

The impact is yet to be determined. But the new structure is expected to reach deep into local and state councils and cover such local problems as work rules. It could, conceivably, reach as far as political education.

The Real Truth About the Nixon Speech;

Anti-Labor Daily Press Distorted Facts

By J. EARL FERGUSON
General Secretary-Treasurer

The nation's press, never eager to be factual regarding organized labor, was guilty of deliberate misrepresentation in reporting President Nixon's speech before the AFL-CIO convention in Bal Harbour, Florida, on the second day of the meeting, Friday, Nov. 19.

According to the press reports via newspapers, radio and television, the President was snubbed, insulted, jeered and virtually run out of the convention hall.

As a matter of honest reporting, President Nixon was accorded the respect due his office despite the fact that his administration has openly shown itself to be anti-labor.

His entire speech was clearly a bid for support from those outside of organized labor. He did not address himself to the sharp differences between himself and organized labor. It was obviously a political speech: one in which he tried . . . and with some measure of success it would seem . . . to "put labor in a box."

It is true that there was no rendition of "Hail to The Chief" as he entered the hall. The "band" at the convention consisted of one piano and two violins; hardly appropriate for "Hail to The Chief" in the first place. But it seems to me that there is no "big deal" about the lack of an entrance song. There have been numerous cases where many presidents have entered halls for speeches without musical accompaniment.

The news media also reported that the President was "jeered". I was there and I did not hear any jeers, boos or catcalls. The Miami "Herald" reported in a front page story that "one labor leader shouted 'Get him out of here!'" I certainly did not hear such a "shout" and if there was one, it must have been confined to a small area of the large convention hall. Moreover, if there had been such an unfortunate remark by one misled person among the 2,000 delegates and alternates (plus many visitors) it hardly seems appropriate to imply that such an isolated remark would make the whole convention a "hostile, snickering, hooting" assembly.

President Nixon knew, of course, that he was in hostile country. But the delegates did give his office the respect owed it. There was not, as the Miami Herald said, "an extraordinary, perhaps unprecedented display of public contempt for a chief executive."

President Nixon called particular attention to the existing differences in his introductory remarks. Neither Pres. Nixon nor anyone else could expect a wave of enthusiasm and cordiality to sweep across a convention hall full of delegates representing workers whose wages had been frozen . . . whose legal contracts, negotiated in good faith, had been declared null and void by the speaker.

But anti-labor reporters for the business-dominated daily press and the business-commercial dominated radio and television industry went overboard in distorting the news. According to the official transcript, President Nixon was applauded five times during his speech and interrupted once by laughter when he made a humorous remark about Vice President Agnew. In addition, he was applauded when he entered the hall and the vast majority of delegates rose to their feet. He was also applauded when he concluded his speech and they rose again.

Following his speech, he went out on the floor of the convention and spoke with delegates. The accompanying picture shows that he was not being "shunned" as news reports said.

That was an obvious political move, as it had been an obvious political speech. Pres. Nixon knows that a speaker does not walk out onto a convention floor. Even liberal greats such as John Kennedy and Harry Truman, welcomed to the hall with thunderous applause, never presumed to go out on the floor of an AFL-CIO convention.

I was there, and I know what happened. I can testify that what the news reports said happened and what actually happened were considerably different.

AFL-CIO Executive Council and visitors on stage rise and applaud as Pres. Meany welcomes Pres. Nixon. Daily press denied this happened; here is proof!

Pres. Nixon shown surrounded by smiling crowds pressing in on him after speech. This contradicts lies solemnly printed as truth by the "kept press" and told on radio and television.

Local 46 Representative Is Nassau-Suffolk Choice

David Richardson, business representative of Local 46, New York City, was recently elected secretary-treasurer of the Nassau-Suffolk Building and Construction Trades Council. The vote was unanimous among the 123 delegates present and voting.

Richardson, who has been president of the New York State Council of Lathers and a trustee of the Pension Plan and Fund, succeeds the late Irwin Fleischer of Flushing, who died about two months ago. Richardson is also a member of the Executive Board of the Westchester County Building and Construction Trades Council and a vice president of the Bronx Board of Business Agents.

Interviewed following his election, Richardson said that the largest problem facing him and the people he represents is that of unemployment. He pledged himself to work with all concerned toward the goal of a full employment economy.

Stabilization Committee, Not Pay Board, To Approve Construction Pay Increases

Wage increases negotiated by the nation's construction workers will be approved by the Construction Industry Stabilization Committee rather than the Pay Board, the chairman of the Committee told the AFL-CIO Building and Construction Trades Department convention in Bal Harbour, Florida.

Dr. John T. Dunlop, Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences of Harvard University, told the delegates that Committee policies "will have to conform generally to the guidelines of the Pay Board." However, he would not say whether his Committee would be forced to roll back the percentages of the increases which it now approves. The percentages in the construction industry have been between ten and eleven percent in contrast to the 5.5 percent set by the Pay Board.

Wage standards in the construction industry can be expected to be "tightened" during Phase II of Nixon's economic control program, Dunlop said. He added, however, that the Committee will be permitted to adapt general wage guidelines "to the special problems of construction." He also observed that "it is likely that our Committee will enjoy administrative independence from the Pay Board."

Decisions by the Committee "will stand as the final action," Dunlop said, and will not be permitted to be appealed to the Pay Board.

On the other hand, Dunlop said he has become concerned over the increased prices in construction which have gone unchecked in comparison with wages. Prices in the industry were supposed to have been controlled by an Inter-Agency committee made up largely of Cabinet-level officers. However, its only action has been to urge contractors to pass on wage reductions to their customers. There has been no indication that this has happened.

The History of Christmas Giving

When Aunt Nellie Presents You
An Orange And Purple Tie,
She's Following
A Great Tradition!

While millions of Americans give flowers by wire, perfume by the bottle and even gems (by gosh!), few among those who give and receive the gifts this Christmas will realize what a long and delightful history the custom of gift-giving has.

It was the Three Wise Men who gave the first Christmas gifts in history, although the earliest Christians actually refused to exchange presents. To them, the custom was a heathen one because gift-giving played a prominent role in many pagan festivals.

In time, they accepted the exchange of gifts as an expression of rejoicing and legends about the bringers of gifts began to grow.

The jolly gent we know as St. Nick, for example, is based on the real-life St. Nicholas, Bishop of Myra in Asia Minor (modern Turkey) in the fourth century. Legendary even in his own time for his generosity and his love of children, he is said to have gone on many a mysterious journey carrying secret gifts to the poor. On one of these expeditions, so the story goes, he dropped a bag of gold down a chimney. It fell by chance into a stocking hung up to dry by the fire and prompted generations of hopeful children to hang up their hosiery, too.

Giving to the poor remained a vital part of Christmas celebrations through the centuries. In England, on the day after Christmas, clergymen used to open the church alms-boxes and distribute the collected money to the needy. Later, it became customary to give boxes of money on that day to people who had served you during the year. December 26 is still known as "Boxing Day" in Britain.

The custom of bestowing gifts on friends and family members was popularized in England by King Henry VII, whose services are used extensively during the Christmas season. Henry's granddaughter, Queen Elizabeth I, made the most of this custom. She depended on Christmas gifts to replenish her wardrobe, and made it very clear to courtiers that they had better come across handsomely on Christmas Day. Court records shows that the Archbishop of Canterbury gave her $200 every Yule for clothes. Court ladies presented her with the first silk stockings ever worn in Europe. Even the royal dustman (garbage collector) came through with two bolts of fine linen for the royal lingerie.

Father Christmas, as the English counterpart of Santa is called, rode high for another 40 years after the reign of Good Queen Bess. Then the Puritans took over. They abolished him and his gifts, and indeed all Christmas celebrations, as fit only for heathens.

"Santa's Bosom Buddy"

In Japan, unionists opposed to the "westernization" of the nation complained about an eight-story-high Santa Claus erected over the main entrance of a Tokyo department store. That was last Christmas.

This year the store announced that it would not erect the Santa Claus, much to the glee of the officials, until they discovered what took Santa's place: an eight-story-high topless dancer!

Be Safe This Christmas Season!

These are holiday safety reminders from the National Safety Council:

- Plan ahead. Hurried holiday activities cause accidents.
- Keep tasters, sniffers and snoopers out of the kitchen while food preparations go on. Toddlers should be kept clear of hot foods and liquids and sharp knives and forks.
- Don't use candles near combustible materials. Keep paper and cloth displays away from naked electric bulbs, fireplaces and other heat sources. Clear trees, gift wrappings and unwanted decorations out of the house promptly after Christmas. Does your family know how to escape if a fire does occur?
- Don't put a Christmas tree near a radiator, fireplace, or in a doorway or exit. Never use candles on a tree. Buy only light sets with Underwriter Laboratories (UL) seal of approval on them and, when they are frayed, discard them. Don't overload electric circuits. Never leave lights on when the house is empty or when the household goes to sleep.
- Select the freshest natural tree possible a few days before Christmas. Cut the butt end diagonally. Keep it in water, adding daily as necessary.

"Think Safety" this season; don't mar your holidays with an accident!

The stern Puritans brought their distrust of Christmas merriment to New England's shores as well. In 1659, any observance of Christmas in Massachusetts became a penal offense!

On the other hand, fun-loving Dutch settlers had already brought "Sinter Klass" to New Amsterdam. Later, a German colony moved to Pennsylvania along with their giftbringer, Christkindlein, who gave us the name "Kris Kringle." Other immigrant groups contributed their own legends and customs of Christmas giving. In 1822, a Presbyterian divinity professor named Clement C. Moore combined many of these elements into what is today the classical Christmas poem beginning "'Twas the night before Christmas . . ."

The "Visit from St. Nicholas" described by Dr. Moore was modest in comparison to some of St. Nick's later trips. Americans have long been generous Yuletide givers. Seamen used to bring their families rare and costly presents gathered from the Orient such as spices, silks, china and teakwood. St. Nicholas was the patron saint of sailors as well as of children.

Flowers are a favorite Christmas gift and decoration. Though florists are especially busy during Christmas, many of them have a special arrangement whereby flowers can be sent to loved ones once a month. In this way "the holiday spirit" can be enjoyed throughout the year. Any florist shop with an FTD emblem provides this service.

Well over $27 billion a year is spent on flowers and Christmas presents of all kinds in the U.S.

Many of these gifts are wrapped with the aid of Christmas seals, yet few Americans have any notion of when or where they originated. They were first used in Copenhagen, Denmark, in 1904, the brainchild of a postal clerk named Holboell, who conceived them as a benefit for a children's hospital.

The gift-giving customs of many lands form an interesting contrast to our own. Greek children rustle up their own gifts. On Christmas Day they go the rounds collecting raisins, walnuts, figs and sweets. In Newfoundland, an important Christmas gift is, of all things, fish! Local fishermen fish for the church on Christmas Day, donating their day's catch to the parish.

Some countries enjoy Christmas giving so much that they do it twice. The French exchange gifts on New Year's Day, but the children are visited by "Pere Noel" on Christmas Eve. Italian children receive their main presents on January 6, but they and their parents draw for little gifts on Christmas Eve from an "Urn of Fate."

Icelanders have to hurry if they want to unwrap their presents on Christmas morning. Almost the entire holiday must be spent in church services, since in Iceland there are only four hours of light on Christmas Day!
